TURF TALK.

"The chosen sport of a great and a free people."

OUR SAISON KING

THE sports on the banks of the Conley Tyno were quite worthy of their ancient fame, in the days when "Slashing Harry" collared Henriade; and when, to use the words of Beeswing's most devoted bard,—

"I also do declare,
A silver waggon was the prize
Of this most distinguished mare."

There is something quite enlivening about the way the "Black Diamonds" cheer a local animal whenever it gets its head in front; and Vindex certainly feels the compliment, as although, with Daniel O'Rourke to help him, he has played some funny tricks in the Whitewall string during the winter, and cut up very poorly elsewhere, this is the third year in succession that he has honoured his native moor with a win. He looked remarkably well; and like Grapeshot, who has now won upwards of £2,000 for Mr. Milner, ran remarkably kind. Arrabas was some pounds in the lead, but he is a big horse with a small middle, and not very "after our heart." Oh! the malt-lof

THE VICTORIA, R.M.Y.C., OFF THE MARINE STATION AT BIRKENHEAD. See page 10.

Ellerdale's eldest daughter is a fine slashing filly, and won as cleverly as animal could do. Her dam had a brown colt to Flying Dutchman last year, and we think, a filly foal to Birdcatcher, this. Lord Alfred was very lame, and had not in fact got over the hard ground at Manchester, from which Sunbeam had also suffered not a little. This latter colt is a very good-looking two year old, and with lots of improvement about him; and the Criterion (3lbs extra), the Doncaster Two year old (4lb extra), the Prince of Wales (2lb extra), the Gimmerack Stakes, and the Derby all own to his name. He was bought at Lord Spencer's (1853) sale of yearlings for only 61 gs. Job Marson's riding on Jetty Treffz was the best bit at the meeting; and no race this year has been so completely won out of the fire. She is a nice square looking mare, but moderate to a degree.

Newmarket and Worcester are the principal meetings of the closing week. Three plates of £70 and two of £50 are given at the former, but as 3 sovs entrance fee is charged in all at them, the liberality of the Jockey Club is not of a very startling kind. The candidates for the July and Chesterfield Stakes are very dark. Besides Bonnie Mora, Dirk Hatterick (of whom great things are said at Middleham) figures in the former; while The Russian (brother to Autocrat) and sister to Dunc, are the only names of public interest among the latter. We have not heard as a fact that Lord Eglington's colt is coming, but his Lordship, although Doncaster is his favourite course, has always had a great penchant for the July Stakes, since it was the maiden win of his Flying Dutchman. There is no telling what Lord Glasgow (whom, we hear, about to place his horses in the hands of Cooper, Colonel Peel's late trainer) may do over the mahogany on Tuesday night, but at present there is not a single match on paper. Worcester meeting is strong and healthy, and likely to repay the exertions which have been used for it. Domino looks well for the Trial, and Knight of St. George is one of the most likely names in the Worcestershire Hambleton. Catherine Hayor, 7st 4lb, is also very well in; but we thought she was rather lame at Ayr. She has erupted with the same weight within a pound for the Liverpool Cup, for which Talford and Marc Antony, are also very nicely weighted. This latter race excites very little of the betting furor which it was wont to do ten years ago, although it is very difficult to say why. Now that "Jardinning" is the order of the day, sporting innkeepers, both at Liverpool and elsewhere, must hold their betting-peace carefully during a meeting, or cross over to each other's houses when they want to "get on." Absurd as this doctrine may seem, it beats the how-street seal upon it; and hence, following it out, it is plain that, if it be correct, Tattersall's is only safe from an information so long as the proprietors themselves do not go into their subscription-room, and take or lay the odds with their patrons. Knowing, as Lord Palmerston does, that such are the temporary Tattersall's in all race towns, and that these are especially selected whose landlords have sufficed local spirit or sporting turn to support races, and let a little, he could not possibly have meant to include Tattersall's and thus among the houses of resort for betting purposes, which he determined to put down. If the bill meant to make Tattersall's an exception, it ought to have boldly said so; but as it did not, it is evidently in the same category with him. The Home Office can have no right to make ideal distinctions, and send blue-coated policemen to keep order on a Settling Day in the one, and "con- siderate" inspectors in plain clothes, to play the spy in the other. They might have been content with uprooting the great betting-house nuisance, by making deposits illegal, instead of commencing a crusade against innkeepers, which the local magistrates will be too proud to follow up. Apropos of ex-listers, it might, that one of them, who had secured himself to run over the new Derby course in ten days, last Saturday afternoon; but we believe that the man, who did not get on, and that, and did not come to the post. Perhaps, however, he suddenly lost all form, on Tuesday before.

The principal racing of the week is the announcement of a Sale of Sires at Newmarket for the four principal studs in the South. We hope that a will also strike root in the North, and as Dunc and the other "Salutation Stakes" for the produce of the "Salutation Stakes," Lord Clifden's, and some other of the great Northern Studs? The "Salutation Stakes" is a good pet of the north, Nancy, it will be seen, says "Con- siderate" with 7st 9lbs for the Goodwood Stakes, while Stockwell, 10st 11lb, will very naturally have nothing to do with it. Although a negotiation of this kind went off in the spring of 1852, it seems not at all improbable that the Marquis of Exeter will shortly dispose of his St. Leger winner and all his stud. Baron Rothschild has had the offer of them at a certain price,—his "fidus Achates" has been over to Newmarket this week to inspect them, and we believe that the "yes" or "no" has been given ere this. His Lordship, we hear, allocates certain heavy railway expenses which he is at present incurring, as his reason for giving up his favourite pursuit. His loss will be a very severe one to Newmarket; but although a very plucky, straightforward sportsman, he has always had the unfortunate knack of disagreeing with every jockey and every trainer he ever had. Little Joe Rogers is much better again, and able to ride in a gallop on the Heath. King Tom, too, is getting on very well, and the party and Charlton have very high St. Leger hopes of him, and no earthly fear of Derwish, albeit he is at 3 to 1. John Scott has much better grounds for his Graculus Euricensis fancy, as the ever wide-awake "Man in the street" has it, that he borrowed Autocrat, and tried him and Bonnie Mora with her at eight pounds; the result being that the grey beat her a head, and the chestnut three lengths.

STOCKBRIDGE RECOLLECTIONS.

Although the South Western Railway gave every facility to the Cockney Columbuses to explore the regions of Stockbridge, whose name has so long inspired them alternately with terror or confidence, the threatening appearance of the morning kept them nearly all at home. The course is reached by a hilly six miles road from Andover, and is most beautifully situated in a valley between two hills. On the side of one, a neat little Grand Stand is built, behind which all the booths are pitched, which with their red flags flying remind one of some pretty rustic fete. On the extreme right of the valley are to be seen the slate roofs of the Danebury stables, whose owner in mahogany tops and white cords, with a geranium in his button hole, is master of the ceremonies. He is assisted by Messrs. Hibbard and Starling, and an agricultural attaché bordering on 19 stone, all in scarlet, and nothing can be nicer than the general arrangement, with the exception of a slight inattention to colours. The elite of the turfites and the ring seemed to be there, none of them in better spirits than John Day, senior, who had many a hearty hand-shake and greeting from his old neighbours, mingled with their good wishes for the future success of his "terrible chestnut."

The sports commenced with the Four-Year-Old Triennial, in which Cobnut bade good bye to his competitors from the very post, leading them some lengths at a strong steady pace for the two miles and a half, and cleverly defeating William Rufus's challenge. Poor Rufus was completely exhausted when he pulled up, and William Day seemed so disgusted with his new purchase that he was loth to pass the chair with him, and only did so because his brother John jokingly declared that he could not have one of the family "distanced" over that ground. In the next race Bonnie Mora attracted great attention by his perfect condition and his capital back, which was just suited for this up-hill and down-dale journey. Alfred Day was "up" again, leaving Marlow to wear the Palmerston jacket, so the fraternization of the two great stables of the world (they must have really taken the hint from Gullipoli) is complete, and no doubt by some sly "arrangement" they will, ere very long, give the poor public a nice hard squeeze between them. The grey had very little to beat, and to use the words of his rustic admirers, "Alfred's won in a walk." The Hind was again very awkward, when Whitehouse went to mount her. Varsa was a miserable wretch to look at, and Dartmouth had no earthly pretensions to race.

The next race for the Three Year Old Triennial was the great one of the day, and Ivan's equitation was seen to be so perfect when George Abdale stripped him in the enclosure, that his Yorkshire friends forthwith vowed great things in his name. Andover looked as if he had a good deal of holiday since the Derby, but nevertheless he came when he liked, and did what he liked with his opponent. He could have given him a stone instead of 10lbs. with ease. In fact, Ivan who pulled up very leg-weary, was so utterly beaten for speed that anything might have been obtained about him for the St. Leger. Both were slightly pricked, but Job found opposition so hopeless, the instant the Derby winner came in earnest, that he very quietly struck his flag, and did not punish his colt. He is improved since last year, and is like his sire, Van Tromp, but much narrower and feebler in the back, while his pasterns are rather upright and with very little go in them. We should say that he is as nearly as possible sixteen hands. Anlover crept along over his native ground in the most beautiful style, but pulled up rather in a lather, whereas, Ivan was nearly as dry as when he started. His off hind leg, if we mistake not, is his weak point, as Mr. Mayor had not only to deal with it last October, but it is averred that he has also shown a strong curb tendency in it, as well. However in spite of this infirmity, he is a right worthy successor of Grey Mornus, Pyrrhus the First, Cossack, Mendiant, and the other Danebury worthies, who have received their polish from the Days, father and son, over this ground. The country people seemed very much pleased at the success of "our nags," as they term them, but they were not demonstrative, and we heard no cheering as Alfred Day returned to scale.

The absence of Rataplan and Little Harry took the fire out of the Steward's Plate, and Hermit again gave the fielders a very bad time of it. Little David might have been a formidable opponent, but he pulled so violently from the very start, that Hornby was obliged to let him race in the front, and never got him steadied till after the first mile. Hermit followed quite composedly in the rear, and went up when they got into the straight, with Sharsvogue and Little David on each side, who stayed there by sufferance to the stand, when he drew away from them without an effort. Little David is a very beautiful animal, but he hardly looked so clear in the coat as we have seen him. Ireland's Eye is also improving, and carries (like Grapeshot) a very expansive barrel; while Barrel himself has sadly gone off, and looks like a mere hack.

In the Mottisfont Stakes, Border Chief with 5lbs extra made another failure, but his friends still assert that he requires a flat surface to perform over, which, looking at his make, is not unlikely. All four laid beautifully together till near home, when the pace became very strong. Thorinus and William retired instantaneously, and the Danebury Derbyite won very cleverly. He is a nice stoutly built colt by Tearway, out of Moimuala, low and level, with fine propelling qualities and a rather objectionable head. He is, however, a Derby nag all over, somewhat of the Andover build, and is also engaged in the Beilford Stakes, Procerghast Stakes, Lavant Stakes, North and South of England Biennial Stakes, and the 2,000gs. It will thus be seen that the Danebury horses showed very little consideration for their visitors; and seeing what a beautiful velvet piece of turf they have to train over, it is no wonder they were so well up to the mark. On the whole, although the original entries shrunk sadly away on the card, it was an afternoon of no ordinary interest. The rustic quiet of the whole affair was, in short, a most refreshing contrast to the feverish excitement of Epsom and the "Greenwich Fair" delights of Mulsoy Hurst.

Betting 5 to 4 on Cock Pheasant—4 to 1 on each agst Nonsuch and Garforth. Nonsuch took a strong lead; the second and third places, after the first quarter of a mile, being alternately held by Stoucheage and Garforth. Cock Pheasant, under waiting orders, lying off. At the distance Nonsuch began to drop off, and Cock Pheasant drew forward; at the stand he took the lead, followed by Garforth, and won easily by half a length; bad third.

THE CHAMPAGNE STAKES. Last three-quarters of the New Mile. Nine- teen subs.

Mr. Bennett's Lady Alicia, by Melbourne, 8st 7lb (Thick), beat Sancebox, 8st 10lb (A. Day); Lambus, 8st 7lb (H. Gater); Redemption, 8st 7lb (Yates); Whirl, 8st 7lb (Wells); and Contention, 8st 7lb (Flatman).

Betting—2 to 1 each agst Lady Alicia and Contention, 7 to 2 each agst Redemption and Sancebox. Lady Alicia made the running, Lambus' wool lying second, Whirl, on the extreme right, being third. At the Stand, Sancebox joined Lambus' wool, and a close race ensued. Lady Alicia, however, achieved the victory by a head. A dead heat for second place. Redemption finishing a good fourth.

THE ANOVER STAKES (Hambleton). Old mile.
Mr. Percival's William Rufus, by Touchstone, 4 yrs, 11st 3lb (Captain Little), beat Wellsbourne, (h b), 5 yrs, 10st 4lb (Owner) (2); Garforth, aged, 12st (Owner); Old Rowley, 5 yrs, 11st (Mr. Osbaldeston); Orpheus, 5 yrs, 11st (Owner); The Rock Scorpion (h b), 4 yrs, 11st 10lb (Mr. Lindau); and Convict, 5 yrs, 10st 4lb, carried 10st 7lb (Count Bathiany).

Betting—5 to 4 agst Wellsbourne, 5 to 2 agst William Rufus, and 6 to 1 agst Garforth. Wellsbourne made the running until they were within a few yards of the Stand, when William Rufus went up, and at last won by a neck; Orpheus and Convict, at an interval of about five lengths from the second, were the next two; Old Rowley fifth.

Bush) (5).

Betting—5 to 2 on Master Adam—5 to 1 agst Red Tape filly. Questionable and Red Tape filly ran in front to the stand, where they were pressed by Master Adam, who won very cleverly by a length and a half, the second beating the third two lengths. The winner was afterwards sold by auction for 200 gs.

SPORTING MISCELLANEOUS.

THE COPPER CAPTAIN.

[From the Sporting Magazine.]

CANTO FIRST.—ANTICIPATION.

The Copper Captain is long in the fork,
And long are his strides down the Birdcage Walk;
His action is sprightly, his general air
Is decidedly buxom and debonaire.
For the beauties of Nature he spares not a look,
His soul is wrapped up in a small red book;
It is not a poem, it is not in prose,
But scores of pencil figures in rows:
For months he has styled it (the 'cute old fox'),
"My excellent Dervish pepper box!"
No wonder the Captain is smart and gay,
He is Tattersall's-bound on the settling day.

CANTO SECOND.—REALITY.

The Copper Captain has entered the Yard,
And smiles on the victims he hit so hard;
Grinly he draws them aside by rote,
And grimly he fingers each crisp bank note,
Till at last there remaineth some £10 more,
And Omega whispers, "I'll pay at the door!"

At the door stood a squadron of Dervish boys,
With copper 30lbbs. avoirdupois,
Enough to pull down, in good "wasting" weather,
Nat, Marson, and Wells on the scales together.
"Ho, cub! ho, policeman!" He rushest away,
While the Dervishes hoel on the settling day.

CANTO THIRD.—RETROSPECTION.

The Copper Captain "don't think it the cheese,"
As he sits in a copper-heap up to his knees;
Fifty per cent. he'd fain stik to arrange
The matter by way of a silver exchange;
Ne'er again will he summon a heart of good grace,
To look a penny-piece in the face;
He votes, too, each writer or taker a beast,
Who attunes in his presence to mines or the East;
The conduct of little street boys seems improper;
When they tumble or sweep and beseech him for copper;
In short, he has felt quite "the devil to pay,"
Since he rushed from the Yard on the settling day.

VARNA, June 9.—Two or three months ago, the sound of an English voice or a single word of the English tongue, either in city or in field, was sufficiently startling, to say the least. It is now impossible to leave one's bedroom without meeting well-fed, rosy-cheeked, clean-shaven English faces at every yard. If one goes out to ride, the chances are ten to one he finds some or two English horses in his stable when he comes back, saddled with Peat's saddles, chain reins, leather headstalls, saddle bags, and all, and attended by a lanky groom with a fat face, and a very tight neckcloth, and a silk hat, with a trim star painted black on the side of it, and looking as much at his ease as if he were in his own mews in Belgravia.—Correspondent of the Daily News.

A KANGAROO HUNT.—On one occasion we throw the hounds into cover—a "hoick in" and a wave of the hand were sufficient, and they went to work in style, although they did riot a little when they came across a kangaroo-rat—an animal about the size of a rabbit, that abounds in the scrub; but a double thong being applied, and "ware rat" bawled in their ears, convinced them of their error. After drawing for some time, the sterna above the brushwood began to "feather," a whimper or two was heard, followed by a rush of the whole pack, and then a loud burst, and they were away. At the end of five miles we came into a country intersected by deep creeks; the timber thickened, and as we ascended the hills the grass-fed hunters showed distress, and at last "shut up" altogether. The kangaroo, being determined to eat out gaad work for us, went right over the large. The pace quickened: we crested the hill, and were quickly shooting down the other side of it, with as much as our horses could do to live with the hounds, who were now careering the vent breast-high down to a tea-tree creek. Suddenly they all threw up their heads—there was a screw loose. A life for a word was tried, then a circular start was made, during which a buck kangaroo started out of a clump of nancies into the middle of the pack; every one thought he must be "chopped," but he broke clean away through them. The country becoming difficult, the company got very select, the best mounted being thrown out, and at last we viewed the object of pursuit stretching along at a startling pace, straight towards the river Torrens. Cheering on the leading hounds, we forced him into the stream, where he stood ducking bound after bound as they attacked him, till overpowered by numbers and killed. No foxhunters of England, think of bowling along at this rate, thirty miles right off, after an animal that runs upon two legs, of which a squirrel is a miniature portrait.—Impressions in Australia.

GREAT PIGEON SHOOTING MATCH.—Mr. R. Seed, of Preston, has accepted the challenge of Mr. Edwin Wood, of Manchester, to shoot a match at pigeons for £200 a-side, at 210 birds each, four days' shooting; the first three days at fifty single rises each, 2oz. shot; and on the concluding day thirty double rises, 12oz. shot. It is probable that the match will come off about the middle of next month, the first two days' shooting to take place in the neighbourhood of Manchester, and to be concluded at Preston.

Two men fired at an eagle at the same time and brought him down. An Irishman observed—"They might have saved their powder and shot, for the full would have killed him."

CAPACITY OF THE PIKE.—Last Monday an angler, while fishing in the Severn, captured a couple of small fish, with which he immediately baited a couple of "trimmers" and flung them into one of the large brick pits near the river's bank. Almost instantaneously a fish was observed to take one of the baits, and an old fisherman, who ought to have known better than pull out the line before the prey had gorged the bait, immediately drew the line up the bank of the pit, and with it a jack about 18 inches long, which, not having been severely hooked, rolled back again into the water. The fish was observed to sink a short distance below the surface, and then become almost motionless, and at the same time intently watching the proceedings of the fisherman with his keen hungry eyes. Seeing this, the former threw the trimmer back into the pool, and instantaneously the jack struck at it with the fury of a bulldog, bolting bait and hook. This time he was less fortunate, and he was soon securely landed, with the hook fastened safely in his jaw.—Gloucester Chronicle.

Mr. GEORGE PALMER, head park-keeper, Wood Nook, Wentworth Park, has at this time a bird called the "Flycatcher," which has built her nest for four successive years on a buck's head placed over the front door. She has again taken to the same head, hatching her eggs, five in number. "She appears quite at home."

CAPTURE OF AN EAGLE IN THE BALTIC.—As H.M.S. Amphion was cruising in the end of May, in the Gulf of Riga, a fine eagle, which had flown too far from the land and got tired, was seen at daybreak one morning resting on the flying jibboom. He was captured, and a wooden house made for him, to which he was attached by a strong brass chain; but as the sails were letting fall one day he got frightened at the noise, and striking out with his wings to the full length of his chain, such was his strength that he wrenched the brass bolt from the wood, and the Emperor (as the sailors had named him) soared away, chain and all.

Mr. Edwards has given the following names to his yearlings and foals.—Yearlings: Brown colt by Malcolm out of Young Altesidora; "Frederick;" b filly by Shellhold out of Blamless, by Reullen, "Cutlery." Foals: ch colt out of Clara by Jereed, "Bon-Bon;" ch f out of Child of the Mist by The Cure, "Undine;" b f by The Cure out of Susannah, "Robina;" b colt by The Cure out of Little Bandle, "Knapsack;" 3 yr old b f by The Cure out of Little Bandle, "Small Parcel."

ROYAL RAT HUNTING.—Mr. Charles Baxton related at a Licensed Victualler's Dinner this week, that when the Duke of Oporto visited his brewery "he expressed a strong wish to get up a rat hunt in the malt-loft."

CAMP SPORTS AT VARNA.

On Tuesday last we had a great day at the camp. General Airey wished to do something to break the monotony of the men's existence, and suggested that the officers should get up some sports. The result was most successful. A whip of a dollar a head went round, and at 2 o'clock leave was given to all the men who liked it "to go to the races." With the innate love of sport and sporting which possesses our countrymen wherever they were placed, about 2,000 of them assembled in a fine meadow at the extremity of the camp, a course was cleared, hurdles erected, and leaps thrown up, and the races commenced soon after half-past 2 o'clock. The sports began by the Grand All-Ireland Hurdle-race, 15 entries, 1 dollar each, won by Wardlaw, 19th Regiment. In this race Mr. Murkhum, of the Rifle Brigade, received a fall, which shook him at the time, but he is now quite well except from stiffness of the arm and shoulder. His horse (a fine charger belonging to Major Norcott, and which had borne Dembinsky through the Hungarian war) fell on his head, and was killed on the spot. The Light Division Cup, 18 entries, one dollar each, was won by Colonel Lovings, riding a horse belonging to Mr. Mitchell, R.A.H. The Devna Scurry Stakes were won by Mr. Lempriere's (77th) horse, Atargul. The Varna Stakes, for donkeys and mules, were won by Colonel Blake's (33d) mule in gallant style. Next came athletic sports and games, under the direction of Sergeant-Major Heywood, of the Rifle Brigade. A foot race of one mile was won by Hayle, Rifle Brigade; Harrison (same corps) second. The quarter mile race, was won by Lewis, Rifle Brigade; Hickey (33rd) second. Hurdle race, won by Kirwan, 19th regiment. Jumping, won by Morrissey, 77th; second, Macdonald of the 7th Fusiliers, &c. The Brigadier was on the ground, which was crowded with officers, and not an accident or incident of any kind except the one already mentioned occurred to mar the good humour which prevailed throughout the day.

TURFIANA.

The Great Yorkshire Handicap and the Cleveland Handicap for the ensuing Doncaster Meeting, will close and name on Thursday next. The former has 74 subscribers at present. The Racing Times states that Osborne, jun., was promised £50 in case he beat Kingston in the Ascot Stakes.

Eleven of Lord Exeter's yearlings are to be sold at Tattersall's next Monday. Six of them are by Nantwich, who has long been a great favorite with the Marquis. Filles and nine others, from Sir Robert Pigot's stud, are to be sold on Thursday, at Newmarket.

Mr. Magennis has withdrawn his Salford Cup objection to Typeo.

THINKER CASE.—The Stewards of the Jockey Club have removed the prohibition from Mr. J. T. Hughes running horses, and appearing on the race ground at Newmarket and elsewhere, in consequence of the great regret expressed by him for his conduct in obstructing the Clerk of the Scales at Newmarket during the Houghton Meeting, 1852, and in consideration of his youth and inexperience at the time.

The Hon. G. W. Fitzwilliam has named the following yearlings:—by Bay Middleton out of Iuhemienne, "Milton," by c by Bay Middleton out of Dart, "Wentworth."

The recent successful Royal paddock sale has given birth to the following new stake:—Newmarket Craven Meeting, 1856. Tuesday.—The Sale Stakes of 50 sovs each, for now yearlings, purchased at the annual sales in 1854 of the Hampton Court stud, Althorp Park stud, Maresfield stud, and Marble Hill stud; colts to carry 8st 9lb, fillies, 8st 5lb; those by stallions or out of mares that never bred a winner allowed 3lbs, and those sold for less than 500gs. allowed 3lb, for less than 200 gs., 6lb; A.F. To close and name on the Tuesday after the July Meeting 1854. Eight subscribers, or no race. Those members who have candidates to propose for the Brighton Race Club, must send their names to Messrs. Wetherby by the end of the July Meeting. No fair dunsel has claimed the "Perrini" donation this year, so the 31 sovs will be forfeited by Hymen to the winner of the Town Plate.

IRISH TURFIANA.

KILCOCK RACES.—These annual sports are announced to come off on Monday and Tuesday, the 14th and 15th of August, under the stewardship of Nicholas J. Gannon, J.P., and Francis E. M. Donnell, Esq., J.P. Three events, to which £100 will be added, form the bill of fare.

DEATH OF PADDY HEFFERN.—This promising three-year-old colt, the property of George Watts, Esq., was destroyed last week, having met with an accident whilst at exercise.

LORD WATERFORD'S bay colt, by Seahorse, out of Red Rose, engaged in next year's Derby, fell on pulling up at the end of a long gallop at Curraghmore, on Thursday week, and broke his back. Mr. Wbaley's Toby Fillpot, by Burgundy, out of Betty Swipes—also engaged in the Derby—met with a similar accident at Curragh, on Monday last.

IRISH FOALS.—At Ardee, Mr. Hatch's Touch-me-Not, a filly by Crozier. Mr. Hatch has named his colt by Crozier out of Andromeda, "Wynnstave." Lord Howth's yearling filly by Sweetmeat, out of Foinnuala, is called "Mincepie."

GALWAY RACES.—This meeting is announced to come off over the Kiltulla Course, on the 8th and 9th of August. Lord Dunkellin, Sir Thomas Burke, Bart., T. M. Blake, Esq., and P. S. Conyn, Esq., are to be the stewards. The programme consists of a Handicap Sweepstakes of 8 sovs. each, 50 sovs. added; Sweepstakes of 3 sovs. pp., 25 sovs. added; Sweepstakes of 3 sovs. pp., 25 sovs. added, over walls; Handicap Sweepstakes of 5 sovs. pp., 25 sovs. added; Selling Stakes of 3 sovs. pp., 25 sovs. added; and a Handicap Plate for the beaten horses of the meeting.

BELLEWSTOWN RACES.—This annual meeting will take place on the 5th and 6th of July, under the stewardship of Patrick Casey, Esq., Mayor of Drogheda; M. E. Corbally, Esq., M.P., James M'Cann, Esq., M.P., and James Matthews, Esq. Five events are announced for decision, including Her Majesty's Plate, and the Drogheda Tradesman's Plate of 60 sovs., added to a Handicap Sweepstakes of 10 sovs. each, 11 ft.

BOLD BOY (late Themistocles), by Fanev Boy, a winner of several races, including the Lord Lieutenant's Plate at the Curragh last year, beating Chaseaway and several other first-class horses, is now the property of a car-owner in the county Kildare, and is to be seen every day in the shafts.

WESTMEATH FOX HOUNDS.—The sporting gentlemen of Westmeath will not, we trust, forget the important fact that, a first-rate pack of foxhounds are now in safe keeping at Knockdrin Castle, the seat of Sir R. Levinge, Bart.; that the season is rapidly approaching when, "to join the chase at break of day" will be the ambition of every breast capable of participating in this noble pastime; and last, not least, that the subscription list is invitingly open for subscriptions; forward then, let the exertions of the gentlemen who have undertaken this onerous duty not be unaided.

HINTS ON DRIVING, FOR BEGINNERS.

DRIVING IN THE COUNTRY.

Railroads are now so numerous, that you can be put down almost at any place in England you may wish to visit, so that long drives are very seldom taken, although in the summer, and if you are not pressed for time, there is no doubt that driving is by far the most pleasant way of travelling. Should you take a driving tour, the following articles you might find very useful in case of mishaps, and they would not incommode you. 1. Lamps with wax candles all ready to be lighted in them; they are rather indispensable in the country, especially if you don't know the road, and they may prevent other people from coming in contact with you.

A hammer and a few nails, and a pick too, may be often required, as stones frequently get into horse's feet. A knife, and some strong cord and string, you would be in a fix without, in case of breaking a shaft or spring, or harness, perhaps a long distance from any habitation. Say you are going from fifty to a hundred miles, and don't wish to hurry (if you do, I should recommend the train), as thirty miles a-day is enough for any horse, and a man who is fond of his beast will not drive him more, stopping now and then to wash his mouth out, and give him two or three mouthfuls of wet hay. It is bad to give a horse much to eat on a journey, except when stopping for the night, when they ought to be properly fed and looked after. Of course they require a feed in the middle of the day, the same as we do our dinner; at such times see to your horse's comfort before your own; have his feet well washed out, and look to his clinches—the nails sometimes protrude too far through the hoof and cut the horse—and rub his shoulders and back, where the collar and saddle have been, with salt and water, if possible, but do not take his collar off until he is cool. The following is a sufficient feed when on the travel—viz., a quart and a-half of oats, a handful of beans to entice him to eat, mixed with a little chaff, the latter being intended to make him masticate the food; always have the chaff taken out of the water before he drinks; shut him up, and let him feed quietly, and after he has done so, have him groomed. Should your horse lose a shoe, drive very gently until you can get another put on, otherwise you break the horse's hoof and make the foot tender. Should you prefer to pic-nic, which is very agreeable in a pretty country and on a fine day, do not forget a nose-bag for the horse, with the before mentioned mixture in it; in such cases you would most likely have to take your own horse out, and then you would find out the necessity of knowing how it should be done, and which you can learn much better by assisting some one who understands it, than by any one telling you. One thing I will remark,—never remove the bridle before the horse is clear out of the shafts. I have witnessed several accidents by such tricks being done.

Once, at a race-course, a gentleman, lady, and little child, drove in just behind where I was stationed, and immediately on stopping, the gentleman came from the chaise to the horse's head and pulled the bridle off. The horse, at once seeing to what he was fastened, gave a bound and went through the carriages, when horse, chaise, lady, and child, rolled completely over the ropes on to the course, though luckily there was no fatal result.

It is never pleasant driving unless your horse pulls at you slightly; if he will not do so, and shakes his head when you try to feel his mouth, loosen the curb chain, or put the reins to the check, that being the hole by the side of the bit that is level with the piece that goes through the mouth. In going a long journey, the bearing rein should not be too tight, but just tight enough to allow the horse to carry his head in its natural position.

Many a horse, in going into the country, will shy at an object he is not familiar with, but do not beat him when he does so—it will only tend to make him worse the next time. Coax him, and, if possible, get him up to the object, when his fear will be dispelled. If you flog him, on the next occasion his shying propensity will increase, as, expecting the whip, he will start on before you are aware of what he is going to do, and will run you against anything that may be in the way. For example, a friend of mine had a very nice young horse that he used to drive, but he was unfortunately given to shying, and my friend being rather hot-tempered, flogged him whenever he did so; the consequence was, that the horse at last got fright after fright, and one day jumped over a hedge into a field, gig, master, and all; the gig was smashed, and the horse, to my knowledge, never lit to drive again.

With a dog-cart, when carrying more than two, a false belly-band is required; I have been turned out backwards for the want of it.

You should always lean forward going up hills, and backward going down. Never drive fast over the top of a hill, as the weight will fly forward suddenly, and cause the crupper to become suddenly tight, which will very often be the cause of making your horse kick, and perhaps run away. You should not drive fast up hill in taking a long journey, as doing so takes a great deal out of your horse; and I think it a great risk to drive fast down, unless in a four-wheel chaise, when there is no weight on the horse's back. There is a certain steady pace—about seven miles an hour (and your horse well in hand), so that, should he make a blunder, he may be saved, but in going fast, the horse is extended and off his balance, and if there should be a blunder, nothing can save him. From seven to eight miles an hour, and walking up all the hills, is about the pace that ought to be done in going a great distance. Should your horse go lame, stop directly, and examine his foot with your pick, as, by so doing, you may prevent a serious lameness. To show you the necessity of paying attention to this,—once, in driving tandem, my wherlver went dead lame. I immediately stopped, and found a flat-headed nail driven half-way into his foot, and it was with great difficulty I could get it out. Had I gone on any further without looking, I should very likely have ruined a valuable animal, or, perhaps, have been the cause of his death. The interior of a horse's foot is the most dangerous part on which he can receive a wound, as it is almost impossible to do anything for its cure.

I do not know a more fearful or disagreeable sensation than that of being run away with in harness. Some horses do it from vice, others through fear—perhaps a noise behind them will set them off. I have known some start behind having been driven fast from a smooth and noiseless road on to stones; some by getting the reins under their tails. Then is the time when safety reins are of great service. Horses that switch their tails when touched with the whip, if not carefully looked after, are likely to catch the rein, and should your horse do so, let the rein loose instantly before he knows what he has done, and you may be able to get it all right again without any mischief. But should you pull the rein, the horse immediately sticks down his tail; the only thing to be done then is, if possible, to get hold of the rein beyond his tail, and pull him up (on such occasions) quickly. This is a dangerous experiment, and not always to be accomplished.

If a horse cannot be stopped when he first makes a start, by violently sawing his mouth, the best thing to be done is to sit still and endeavour to guide him out of danger: should you attempt to throw yourself out, you are likely to get more hurt than by waiting to let him do it for you.

A gentleman, after having visited me, was driving home alone in a gig, and, in lighting his cigar, let the reins out of his hand, which directly slipped over the splash-board and fell round the horse's heels, who started into a gallop, and ran some distance, when the gentleman, being a tall, long-reached, and good-nerved man, sprawled along the horse's back and got hold of the reins again. But this is not to be always done, and luckily this took place in the country.

Accidents of this sort seldom happen with good coachmen, and by paying attention to what I have stated, they need not happen to you.

No doubt many could explain the art in a clearer way, but I feel that I have done my best, and hope that my feeble efforts will be of some service to the young world. If I have not been sufficiently explicit, I know how it should be managed. I think I was told that I was born with the reins in my hand. I have in my time driven one, two, three, four, five, and six in all shapes, and hope that my readers may all get off, as regards accidents, as scot free as I have done.

Throughout these hints I have only alluded to the driving of one horse, as a man ought to thoroughly understand that before trying more. When he understands that properly, and wishes to try something more scientific, the knowledge may soon be obtained.

THE VICTORIA YACHT.

The Victoria, 13 tons o.m., was built by Mr. Melling, Hon. Secretary R. M. Y. C. in the year 1849, to try the American principle with a sliding keel, and we believe she was the first yacht on that principle built in England. She is a wholesome boat, and decked all over, with a cockpit to sit in. Her dimensions are 32 feet over all, and 11 feet beam. She draws 3½ feet aft and 1 foot 9 inches forwards. Her sliding keel is 10 feet long, cased with iron, and drops down about four feet. She carries one large mast with mainsail and fore-staysail. Has two tons of iron ballast. In the drawing there is a dark line on her deck, through which the keel slides, and which is held by a chain on each end on deck. [See page 601.]

GREAT GRIMSBY REGATTA.

The first regatta ever held at this port will come off on Thursday, the 3rd of August, under the patronage of Lord Yarborough, and the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire Railway Company. We understand that £200 will be distributed in yacht and rowing prizes, and that the North of Europe Steam Navigation Company will have a steamer in attendance to convey visitors round the course with the racing yachts, among which, the "crack" vessels of the Royal London Yacht Club will be present. John James Andrews, Esq., having undertaken the arrangements, we have full assurance that everything will be done to secure success. The port of Grimsby can be reached by train from King's Cross.

ROYAL HARWICH YACHT CLUB.

This regatta bids fair to be the best Harwich has ever seen. The schooner yacht Novice, Vice-Commodore Areddeker, will be the head-quarters of the Committee, the owner having again generously placed her at their disposal. The date has been fixed for Saturday the 15th of July, and we understand the Royal London Yacht Club will visit Harwich on their way to Lowestoft. We shall in our next enter into details of the sports.

ROYAL THAMES YACHT CLUB.

The monthly meeting of this club will be held on Wednesday next, at the Bedford Hotel, Covent Garden, at half-past 8 p.m. The following are on the candidates' list for ballot:—Messrs. Samuel Smith Travers, John Shapland, Dugald Stuart, R. M. Dunn, Lieutenant-Colonel Sir Hew Dalrymple, Bart., and Messrs. James Scoley Poundriner, P. Hammond, and C. H. Newton, Esq. On Thursday last, the 29th ult. the following yachts were entered for the match of Thursday, the 6th of July inst., and, consequently, there will be no race—St. Ursula and Lily of the Test; the rules requiring three yachts, but only the above two were set down.

ROYAL LONDON YACHT CLUB MATCH.
In "THE FIELD" of last week we reported the match of the R. L. Y. C., sailed on Tuesday, the 20th of June; and to-day we have the pleasure of giving an illustration of it, from the pencil of Mr. T. G. Dutton, the marine artist to the club in question, taken at the moment the yachts Thought and Phantom were approaching the Nore Light, in their way down the river. The Vigilant, revenue cutter, is in company, and one of Green's Indiamen is also seen proceeding to sea.

THE WEEK.—On Monday the 3rd, rowing at Westminster; on Tuesday, the London Model Yacht Club presentation of prizes, at Anderson's Hotel; on Wednesday, the meeting of the Lilley Club, and also of the Royal Thames Yacht Club at the Bedford; on Friday, the Prince of Wales Yacht Club Meeting, at the Freemasons' Tavern, Great Queen-street (a very large meeting expected); and on Saturday, the "crack" sailing match at Liverpool. Verily, our amateur blue-jackets will be active enough in this first week of July. 'Tis lucky we have just begun a fourth volume of "THE FIELD," to record their patriotic proceedings.

LONDON MODEL YACHT CLUB.—The next General Meeting will be held on Tuesday, July 4th, at Anderson's Hotel, 104, Fleet-street, at 8 p.m., when the following gentlemen will be balloted for:—Mr. William Skiller, High-street, Poplar; Mr. Francis Maybery, Billiter-street; and Mr. James Jackson, Billiter-street. The prize sailed for on Monday last by the first class yacht, will be presented to the winner. An illustration of the race, with portraits of the Gnat, Quick-Step, and Blue-Eyed Maid, appeared in "THE FIELD" of June 24th (page 577).

LONDON MODEL YACHT CLUB.—At a meeting of the sailing committee, at Anderson's Hotel, on Tuesday evening, Commodore Tuckwell withdrew his protest against the Gnat; the owner of which vessel will accordingly receive the Silver Tankard at the meeting on Tuesday next.

THE LILLEY CLUB.—A large muster of the members of this circle took place at the Nell Gwynne, on Wednesday, when a general committee of seven were elected, and the names of several candidates for admission received. The club will again meet on Wednesday next, at 8 p.m.

ROYAL LONDON YACHT CLUB.—More than twenty names are already on the list of candidates for the ballot, taking place on the third Monday in the present month.

ALEXANDRIA, June 19.—Abbas Pasha's son, El Hamce Pasha, who has just paid a visit to Constantinople, intends shortly to proceed to England in the Viceroy's magnificent steam-yacht Fahi Ghaud. El Hamce Pasha is an intelligent, pleasing young man, but his prospects of succeeding to the government of Egypt are very remote, his three uncles and a number of cousins having the precedence from their greater age.

REGATTA PRIZES.—We have inspected with great pleasure the splendid Vases selected by Her Majesty and Mr. Peto, for the Cowes Regatta and that at Lowestoft, gifts speaking highly for the taste and magnificence of the sovereign and her high-minded subject. Nor must we omit to state, that they fully sustain the great reputation of Mr. Gerard for works in the precious metals. We shall soon give illustrations of these magnificent works, and at the proper period, illustrations of the matches for which they are offered a prizes.

ROYAL CORK YACHT CLUB.—A special general meeting of the members is fixed for Thursday, the 6th of July instant, when the day will be fixed for the Regatta, and other business transacted. There will also be a ballot for members on the same day.

* * * We shall feel obliged by the Secretaries of "Rowing Clubs," and others, forwarding their appointments of Matches or Notices of Meetings to come, at their early convenience.

WADHAM COLLEGE SCULLS.

The above races were decided at intervals last week. Six started in the following order:—

HEAT I.

- | | | |
|-------------|-----------|---------------|
| 1. Mineluir | 3. Salmon | 5. Harrington |
| 2. Pratt | 4. Carr | 6. Crowder. |

Mr. Carr, without much difficulty, succeeded in catching Mr. Salmon, who indulged in a very devious course, and became entangled among weeds on the Oxford shore.

HEAT II.

- | | |
|------------|----------------|
| 1. Crowder | 4. Mineluir |
| 2. Pratt | 5. Harrington. |
| 3. Carr | |

Mr. Mineluir was overtaken a little below Freshman's River.

HEAT III.

- | | |
|------------|----------------|
| 1. Crowder | 3. Pratt |
| 2. Carr | 4. Harrington. |

Mr. Pratt was bumped at the first corner in the Gut.

HEAT IV.

- | | |
|------------|----------------|
| 1. Carr | 3. Harrington. |
| 2. Crowder | |

Mr. Carr fell a victim to Mr. Crowder in the Long Reach between the Gut.

HEAT V.

The above heat was a time race between Mr. Crowder and Mr. Harrington. The toss was won by the latter gentleman, who chose the upper post. The race, which was most evenly contested throughout, ended by two or three seconds in favour of Mr. Harrington.

KING'S COLLEGE BOAT RACES.

The annual boat races of the students of King's College, London, took place last Monday and Tuesday.

First race. Putney to Hammersmith—three o'clock—for a Silver Challenge Cup, to be sculled for annually, by students in any department of the above college. To be retained by the winner if held for two successive years. The cup (furnished by Mr. Collins of Regent-street) was a very handsome one, having the college arms beautifully engraved in relief, and "King's College Challenge Cup, 1854," around the lid.

Mr. Wobber, of the "Leander Boat Club," was kind enough to act as umpire, and, at a little after three, the following gentlemen were prepared to start, and came in in the order they are named:—

- | | |
|---------------|------------|
| Walters, Jun. | Pink. |
| Dickson | Orange. |
| Stavely | Dark Blue. |
| Tripp | Scarlet. |

An excellent start was effected: Mr. Walters, however soon gaining the lead, which he held throughout, and won easily by six boats' lengths, the same distance between second and third. Owing to the boisterous state of the weather, the water was very rough; if it had been otherwise, we think the race would have been quicker and more closely contested. Hammersmith bridge, being the place where the race was to terminate, was pretty well filled with the relatives and friends of the competitors; and we were pleased to see so many ladies there, notwithstanding the fickleness of the weather.

SECOND RACE.

Hammersmith to Putney. Four o'clock.

Junior Sculls.

- | | |
|-----------|---------|
| Hobberton | Purple |
| McPherson | Scarlet |

Owing to the rough state of the river, only the two gentlemen above-mentioned started, out of the five who had put their names down.

A very good start was made, the race being smartly contested at first, but Mr. Hobberton, after a short time, gained the lead, and won very easily.

The Scratch-four-oar race was postponed until Tuesday evening, on account of the boats being swamped as they were being towed to the starting-place.

TUESDAY.

SCRATCH FOUR-OAR RACE.—Hammersmith to Putney.

The following crews started and came in, in the order they are named.

- | | | |
|------------|---------------------------|----------|
| BLUE. | | 3 Salter |
| 1 Smyth | 4 Walters, sen. (stroke). | |
| 2 Dashwood | Parkinson, Coxswain. | |
| PINK. | | 3 Enson |
| 1 Southby | 4 Walters, jun. (stroke) | |
| 2 Lower | Swann, Coxswain. | |
| PURPLE. | | 3 Stono |
| 4 Rogers | 4 Hobberton (stroke) | |
| 2 Dickson | Medd, Coxswain. | |

A splendid start was effected, the three boats being abreast for the first third of the race, when "Purple" went slightly ahead with Blue next, but did not hold the lead long, as the greater weight of the other crews told against the wind, which was rather strong, "Blue" now having the lead, a spirited race ensued to the pier at Putney, which terminated in favour of "Blue," by two boats' lengths, and barely a length between the 2nd and 3rd.

The style of rowing, and the time kept by the crew in "Purple," was allowed to be the best, though, as above stated, they were much the lightest, and were not able to pull against the wind so successfully as the others.

THAMES NATIONAL REGATTA.

This grand undertaking well merits the title it has assumed; and the list of its patrons and subscriptions shows very plainly that the love of rowing has not decreased in the estimation of Englishmen. We subjoin a programme of the races,—a more liberal one could not have been provided; and great exertions have not only been made, but must continue to be so, if the committee are to carry it out. Judging from what has been done already, we can form a shrewd guess as to the result. And we hope all those of our rowing friends who can lend a helping hand, will do so,—it will deserve it; and we will stake our veracity that no aquatic, with a soul as large as a half-quartern loaf, will stay away from such prizes as the £1000 Champion Prize, in which race alone not less a sum than £135 will be divided between the first four boats, or the eight-oared Watermen's match, North of England v. South. If the prizes given don't get entrances nothing can; and for the edification of the unenlightened, we give the published programme.

THAMES NATIONAL REGATTA.—President: the Right Hon. the LORD MAYOR.

This regatta will take place at Putney, on the 25th, 26th, and 27th of July, when prizes will be given for the following races:—

WATERMEN'S PAIR-OARS.—First boat, £30; second, £10; third, £5; fourth, £2.

A SCRATCH RACE, for handsome plated pots, for Gentlemen and Tradesmen, or money prizes for Watermen, will terminate each day's amusement.

The laws of boat racing usual on the Thames will be enforced.

Secretary's Office, 11, Great James-street, Bedford-row.

C. CLIFFORD, Hon. Sec.

C. H. TIDBURY, Sec.

The most remarkable change, and we may add beneficial one in the race, is the watermen's pair-oared, which instead of being a scratch race in which men draw lots for partners, and the result all a chance who shall win, every man chooses his own partner, and we shall have some first-rate rowing in consequence, as the best men, both from London and Newcastle, intend entering. A coat and buckle, for below bridge apprentices, to be rowed in old fashioned boats, is an admirable suggestion. All we can say is pay up, and there is no fear of a true "National Regatta."

On Tuesday last the draw for the apprentices to row for the badge, freedom, and money prizes took place at Mrs. Dinnor's, Dockhead. 35 names were entered, showing the interest felt by the young men below bridge, and their desire to have a fling at the national life, and from them 18 were drawn by lot who will now be entitled to contend. Everything passed off admirably, on the night in question, and we subjoin a list of the lucky ones:—Christopher Jones, Fountain-stairs; Henry James White, Mill-stairs; William Britelord, Horsleydown Old-stairs; Charles Vailor, Shadwell-stairs; Henry Ledger, Church-stairs; Henry Blackmore, Greenwich-stairs; William Thornton, Garden-stairs, Greenwich; James Cuneway, Battle-bridge-stairs; William Wallinger, Tower-stairs; William Sing, Tower; Samuel Pope, Alderman-stairs; Thomas Thompson, Wapping Old-stairs; William Gurrity, Hanover-stairs; William Deal, Cherry-garden-stairs; Charles Blake, Greenwich; Richard Hale, Ratcliffe Cross-stairs; Joseph James, St. George's-stairs, Horsleydown; Thomas Morris, Prince's-stairs.

OLD CRUSTY AND NOVICE,

TWO FLY-FISHERS.

Crusty. Well, what sport?
Nove. Oh, none; but, 'pon my soul, 'Twas too provoking, for throughout the whole Day I've been so unlucky, for I should Have caught a glorious lot if—Crusty. If you could!
Nove. No—but it really was no fault of mine. First, my rod came asunder, and the line—
Crusty. You tied your rod, of course?
Nove. Why—no—I thought—
Crusty. Well, next time, you'll remember that you ought. Well, and the line?
Nove. With the first fish, I found—
Crusty. That it was old and rotten, I'll be bound!
Nove. Why—yes—it broke, but always had been sound.
Crusty. Well, next time, try it previous to beginning And more especially if used for splinching.
Nove. The second fish, the finest I ever saw—Snap went the gut.
Crusty. There must have been a daw!
Nove. Oh, no; the man said it would hold a horse—
Crusty. But not a fish. You'd soaked it well, of course?
Nove. Why, no; it was quite new, and so I thought—
Crusty. Well, next time, you'll remember that you ought. What next?
Nove. Why, one hook broke, another bent; Just as I thought I had 'em, off they went.
Crusty. That's a bad job. But when you bought the lot, You saw them tried?

No vice. No, really, I did not.
Crusty. Well, any more misfortunes?
No vice. Yes, at night
The fish were rising round me left and right;
I whipt, whipt, whipt, and couldn't get a rise—
Thinks I, I cannot have the proper flies!
I went to change them, when, I do not think,
You ever saw a line in such a kink!
Crusty. Well, but you had another ready tied,
And broke it off!
No vice. Why—no; and while I tried
To set one up, of wind a d—!—sh puff
Blew away all my flies. This was enough;
The rise was over, and I came away,
Cursing it for a d—d untucky day.
Crusty. Well, 'prays it was; but, in your ear, my buck,—
Just take more care, and you'll have better luck.

PISCATORIAL PROLUSIONS.

BY THE HAMPSHIRE FLY-FISHER.

HAMPSHIRE AND ITS RIVERS.—EAST HAMPSHIRE.

Below the William Wood, and in the valley to the west of the South down hills, on whose tops the Cronicleths of the Sea Kings are yet to be seen, the Ems, a gentle rivulet, takes its rise; and travelling by the side of the road, passes the church and village of Sloughton in its course to Wulberton. In the summer months the tiny stream scarce serves to cover the hebeled pebbles that sparkle in its bed; but in the winter, after a thaw, or when an abundance of rain has fallen, the springs burst from the high grounds, the rivulet, forming what is called the Lavant, swells into a brawling current, and pours a volume of water to the cross-roads at Walderton. At this point it diverges to the left, still fringing the road until it divides—one streamlet bearing to the west, and one sending its quiet way through the meadows to the east. Below this the western branch passes Lordington, at one time the property and residence of Sir Richard Pole, the husband of Margaret Countess of Salisbury, executed by King Henry the Eighth, who was the mother of Cardinal Pole. Geoffrey Pole, her grandson, sold the manor, which is now the property of Admiral Phipps Hornby. A part of the mansion has recently been pulled down, but enough remains to show what the place was in the olden times. The rooms are panelled and decorated; the vestibule was originally gilded, and elegant in the extreme; and the staircase is a fine specimen of oak-carving, bearing the Royal Arms previous to the Union. There is a terrace-walk below the garden, and the whole is sheltered by beautiful timber. On the opposite side, in a meadow adjoining the road, stands a solitary pollard; there is nothing about it to indicate the remains of a mansion, but it serves, nevertheless, to mark the site of Racton House, for many generations the seat of the Gounter family, deduced in an unbroken line from Jenkin Gounter, "who came in with the Conqueror." Early in the reign of Henry the Sixth, Roger Gounter, who had acquired large property in Wales from the grants of King Edward the First, in whose army he had served, obtained this manor as a mesne tenant of the Honour of Arundel. The House of Gounter had ever been strongly attached to the Crown, and many had suffered in the Civil Wars; but it was not until the mansion was some years since dismantled, that the history and services of the Gounters were fully appreciated. Amongst the furniture sold on that occasion an old bureau was disposed of for a few shillings; the purchaser discovered a secret drawer, and in it was found the very interesting and important MS. now in the British Museum, containing an account of Colonel Gounter's services in securing the escape of Charles after the battle of Worcester. To the house of Colonel Gounter, who married a daughter of Sir Lawrence Hyde, Charles found a temporary asylum; and from thence, after a multitude of perils, he made his way, accompanied by Colonel Gounter, to Brighton, where a vessel was obtained for a passage to the Continent. In Racton Church, near which the streams are again united, Stephen George Gounter and his trusty wife; there is a monument to their memory, representing them as kneeling on either side of a faldstool in the attitude of prayer; and in the chancel, the window of which bears three gauntlets argent within a bordure on the Gounter's Coat, there are various mural and monumental slabs to other and earlier members of the family; among the rest of two, a husband and wife, who were born on the same day and died on the same day—the one by a fall from his horse, the other in confinement. Opposite to the church is the road leading through Racton Park, and at a short distance below this point the stream becomes part of the ancient Lordship of Stanstead, in former days parcel of the Honour of Arundel; and where, for many centuries subsequent to the Conquest, the Earls of Arundel resided. It is strictly preserved, and the trout, though not large, are numerous. The bottom is a clean gravel; and, as the current is quick, the fish are usually in good condition. At Westbourne the stream serves the mill, which stands on the site of that mentioned in "Domesday," and uniting with the tributary waters from Stanstead decay ponds, winds onward to the church of Westbourne, built in the reign of Henry the Seventh, containing a richly carved piscina, and windows once decorated with stained glass, of which no trace now remains. In the churchyard there is an avenue of eight yew trees of singular size and beauty; leading to the northern porch of oak, the doorway of which is carved with the arms, cognisance, and supporters of Thomas, Earl of Arundel, Lord Maltravers, and an inscription, almost illegible, of "Dominus Thomas Maltravers," and indicating probably that he rebuilt the present church. From the church of Westbourne, the stream runs due south through the pasture grounds, and were it preserved there would be some fair fishing. Passing the pond below, it serves Lumley mill. Lumley House and premises, of a pretty but fantastic style, were built by Mr. Tollervey, once the owner of this and other property. They are not maintained in their former state, and are painfully suggestive of the strange vicissitudes of fortune. Mr. Tollervey, a wealthy merchant, lived here in luxury and comparative splendour for some years; but reverses came, extravagance beggared his princely fortune, and in his latter days he was to be seen sweeping a crossing at the corner of Fleet-street. In his garden the fish were preserved, and the water below was supplied from this source. After winding south through the meadows, where it is crossed by the London, Brighton, and South Coast Railway, and where there is still a good basket of fish to be caught, the stream serves the mill at Emsworth (the village of the Ems, worth signifying village in Saxon), and hurries onward till it debouches into the harbour. It would seem that the river between Westbourne and Emsworth was always a source of profit, for in the Arundel Feodary Book, compiled about the reign of Henry the Sixth, and containing the survey of the manor of Bourne, the "fishery of Emsworth" is entered as of the yearly value of 3s. 4d.

THE SALMON FISHERIES IN THE TYNE.—The salmon fisheries in the Tyne were very productive in the early part of the present week, owing to the heavy rains and freshes in the river. An immense number of fine fish were brought to market on Monday and Tuesday, the price of which ranged as low as 8d. per lb.—Newcastle Journal.

THE GENTLEMEN OF THE MARYLEBONE CLUB v. THE GENTLEMEN OF ENGLAND.

In this grand match the Gentlemen of England were the victors by 49 runs. The Gentlemen of the Marylebone Club were short of double scores, seeing that two of them only obtained two figures in this hauls—namely, Mr. P. Knight, who was not removed until he had placed 38 runs upon the paper by means of a six, a five, 2 fours, a brace of threes, ditto of twos, and a balance made up by singles; and Mr. Drake, who contributed 11 by a three and four twos.

The ultimate state of the score was as follows:—

UNITED ALL ENGLAND v. OXFORD UNIVERSITY.

This grand match, between fourteen gentlemen of the University, and the Eleven United All England, was played on the Christ Church ground, on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday last. The University went in first, against the excellent bowling of Grundy and Nixon, and on the fall of the last wicket, succeeded in making 86 only, a comparatively small number for fourteen of the best bats in the University. The "United" ran up their score to 116, being in advance of their opponents 30 runs. Hunt began his score with a drive for four, which he increased by singles, another four, a pair of threes, and a pair of twos, to 31, when he was admirably caught by Balfour, off Hankey. The fielding of the University was as usual of the very first order, no less than six of the All England being caught out. The University, in their second innings, made a most successful and determined stand against the bowling opposed, and ere the thirteenth wicket fell, the great score of 270 had been obtained. That old and first-rate cricketer, Mr. W. Ridding, writhing 50, made up of two fours, three threes, four pairs, and the remainder singles; Mr. Hankey 57, comprising a five, five fours, three threes, and 11 singles; Mr. Bateman 44, consisting of a pair of fives, a pair of fours, 4 threes, 4 twos, and 6 singles. The "United" had to obtain 231 to win, but owing to the interruptions caused by the heavy weather, the game could not be played out, and consequently the match was a drawn one. The players, as the score will show, pulled up well, having obtained 165 for the loss of half their men, leaving a balance of 126 for the remaining five to rub off. It should be stated during this innings that the showery weather had made the ground very slippery, and as several substitutes were suddenly enlisted to field for some of the fourteen who had left Oxford without their cricketing shoes, the consequence was, that several chances were missed in the field. The play, on the whole, was a rich treat to the numerous spectators.

NOTTINGHAMSHIRE R. RUGBY CLUB.

The annual match between Nottinghamshire and the Rugby club, was played on Thursday and Friday, the twenty-second and twenty-third of June, on the ground of the latter, which was in most excellent condition. The Nottingham team were too strong for the Rugby club, and, after their second innings they took the lead by 201 runs. W. Wright, Esq., in his second innings, caused fifty-six of this number to be scored; and it appeared difficult to say how many more he might have added, had not T. W. Wills, Esq., the star of the school's first eleven, been put on the bowling. The Rev. J. Bradshaw put down 2 twenty-fours, J. Marfleet, Esq., added thirty and twelve; and the bowling of T. C. Goodrich, Esq., was too sure to allow the Rugby side any other chance than a bad one to come up to anything like the mark. On the side of Rugby, E. Sawyer, Esq., scored thirty-one in his second innings, but receiving a fowler on his fingers from the ball, his hand became less firm, and he hit his wicket. R. A. Seu, Esq., scored twenty-four in his first innings; the Rev. E. Elmhurst sixteen; and E. Vickers, Esq. added eight and sixteen. It will be seen by the score that Rugby made but eighty-one in their second innings, leaving their Nottingham friends masters of the game by 121 runs.

THE "ALL ENGLAND ELEVEN," v. TWENTY-TWO OF WEST GLOUCESTERSHIRE.

This match was played on Thursday, June 22nd, and two following days, in Bristol, in a field close to the Full Moon, North-street. The weather was most delightful, and the lovers of cricket had a great treat in witnessing the game. No expense or trouble was spared by the spirited landlord, Mr. Wintle, for the accommodation of spectators; and a printing press was on the ground, which issued cards at the fall of each wicket. On the last day the eleven were invited to dine with the gentlemen, and all passed off most pleasantly. We regret to say that early in the game, Mr. Ray, one of the principal bowlers of the twenty-two, received so severe an injury to the thumb of his right hand, as to prevent his continuing to play. The West Gloucestershire also were disappointed of Mr. Kempson, who had unexpectedly been obliged to leave for France the day before the match. The absence of these two excellent bowlers, whose places it was impossible to fill, made a great difference to the game; also the over anxiety of the twenty-two caused them to field less well than they usually do; and had the chances given by G. Parr, Caffyn, and A. Clarke, in the second innings, been taken, the score would have been only about 70, instead of 100 more than that number. The bowling was excellent on both sides; Bickley bowled 10 maiden-overs in succession, twice in the match, and Mr. H. Grace 7; the long stopping of Mr. Miller for the twenty-two was very good throughout, only one bye being obtained in the two innings. Mr. Marshall's for the eleven, was also good. Oseroff was umpire for the twenty-two, and A. Myan, Esq. for the eleven.

VALE OF AYLESBURY v. KING'S LANGLEY.

This highly interesting game was played at Aylesbury on Wednesday last, when, for the interest of the game, great numbers assembled to witness the play; amongst whom we noticed John Brown, Esq., of Tring; A. L. Slater, Esq., of Chipperfield, and all the neighbouring lovers of cricket. The day was beautifully fine but not sultry hot. The ground was in very fair order, considering that this is the first time that a match has been played on it this season. The marquee were more numerous than is general. There were the players, the scorers, the ladies, &c.; for which great credit is due to the stewards for preparing the last, as it is not very often that a booth is prepared expressly for the fair sex, of which there were a great many. The game throughout was very desultory, which made it more exciting. King's Langley gentlemen were regaled in the morning at Tring by John Brown, Esq. King's Langley won the toss and sent the Vale of Aylesbury gentlemen first to the wicket, who sent T. Wootton, jun., and Richard Fowler to the wicket. The bowling of Grace was again good, hitting Wootton's knuckles the first time, he obtaining a run; all was going on steady, when a ball from Hedge rose off Fowler's hands and was caught at short slip by W. Wootton. H. Wheeler was now sent to the wicket, but was bowled by Hedge, only obtaining three. This, it was thought, would make the lads of the Vale rather out of spirits; but, nothing daunted, they went well to it. Nothing worthy of notice was done till Jones was in, who played steady and well till T. Gurney, jun., came in, being last man, who was caught by G. Chennels, obtaining two runs, consequently Jones carried his bat. The score amounted to 58. King's Langley gets now took the bat, and sent G. Chennels and Darvell to the wicket to the slow bowling of Poulton, who throughout the day howled first-rate, and the bowling of Jones was far from bad. T. Gurney soon missed a catch from Darvell at short leg, but he was soon caught by Dickens. Gurney throughout the day scouted bad. Betts played steady and well, and proved a regular teaser; but if he were to hit away more he would be a first bat. W. Wootton played well, obtaining seven and not out. The score amounted to 35, the lads of the Vale heading 23.

The Vale of Aylesbury again took the bat, when the slow round hand bowling of Bone was put on, who it was soon howled for catches. C. Wootton was set full four runs from the wickets, but made some very fine catches. The score amounted to 34, giving the King's Langley 57 to go in against. They again took the bat, but this time also Poulton's bowling was too good. Betts again was a teaser. The score amounted to 34, the Vale of Aylesbury thus winning by 23 runs. It might be necessary for the arrangement of matches to state here that T. Picken, Esq., of Aylesbury, is Secretary to the Vale of Aylesbury, and A. S. Slater, Esq., of Chipperfield, Rickmansworth, to the King's Langley. The following is the score:—

CUTTING CATS EARS.

Sir,—Your correspondent, "An Enemy to Cruelty," makes use of very strong language. If he be such a great enemy to cruelty, he should not call people "brutal fools," "country elods," and "ignorant fools;" he may be a kind-hearted man, but certainly intemperate. It is his written in a passion, without considering that if we were to allow all domestic animals to remain as nature made them, we should run rather short of good beef, mutton, and pork. I wonder if your correspondent ever eats these things. It should remember that all domestic animals are kept either for their use or beauty. If cats and other animals were to cease being useful, they would soon be exterminated. Surely he will not deny that I may bring a blind kitten into the house and if I think proper, let us bring the matter home to ourselves, and see how the case stands—let us suppose your correspondent to have been some animal born into the world, with all his senses about him, and it was left to his choice, whether he should have his ears (however long they might happen to be) cut off, or be knocked on the head at once, which of the two evils would he choose? If I live in the country and wish to keep a cat, to keep down the rats and mice, surely I may do so without being either a brutal fool, or an ignorant fool, or a country elod, or all these fine things at once. Really I do not think I am such a shocking fellow, and yet I should not have much hesitation in clipping off a young kitten's ears, because I know well that unless I did, I could not keep a cat at all. Let your correspondent leave off eating beef, mutton, and pork, and above all let him eschew game—and then he may let off his dry fulsome allusion at me. C. F. W.

BLOODHOUNDS.

Sir,—I would feel obliged by your inserting in your paper of this week, my thanks to your correspondent signing himself "A Stag in the Woodlands." At the same time let me give him a description of my dog for his approval. His colour is black and white with a little white; his head is large, with ears about eight inches long, upper part of the head black, extending down and covering the nose; the lips hang from the nostril, with a slight curve back, fully an inch clear below the outside of the lower part of the mouth; the side of the head, back to the ear, is bright tan, so are the lips, darkening at the edge; the body is large and heavy, legs tan, tall long and tapering. Hearing this may meet your correspondent's eye, when, if not too much trouble, he might give me his opinion, with thanks for your kindness in allowing my former note insertion, I remain, &c., FIFESHIRE.

SATURDAY, JULY 1, 1854.

AUSTRIA and Turkey have entered into a treaty by which the former power agrees to march its forces into the Danubian Principalities, whether Russia withdraws voluntarily or not. If such withdrawal does take place, the Austrian soldiers are to occupy the territory in question; if it does not, Austria is "to drive the Russians out." Such was the announcement made by Lord John Russell on Thursday night, and it certainly appears to solve the doubts relative to the part which Austria is to take in the war. It also seems completely to negative the statement which was authoritatively made in the early part of the week, to the effect that the requisition on the part of Austria that Russia should evacuate the Principalities had been acceded to by the latter power out of its high favour for the former.

The public mind is settling itself, somewhat advantageously, in regard to the objects of the war, and the respective duties which may be required from the three departments of the allied forces. It is now pretty well understood that Sir Charles Napier will, for the present at least, confine himself to a blockade, varying his watch by any little incidental "killing, sinking, burning, and destroying" (as the privateer language used to run) which may come in his way without unduly endangering the lives of those under his command. He is to make the unfortunate Russians feel, to the utmost of his power, the miseries entailed upon them by the criminal ambition of their Emperor; and then, if ruined commerce and insulted honour should induce the Czar to permit his fleets to come from behind their stone walls and give battle, then Sir Charles will know what next to do. The army in Turkey will, it is thought, not be retained there, should the Russian retreat be confirmed, but will be brought in aid of the one great object upon which the energies of Dundas and Hamelin will, it is said, now be directed. Sebastopol is to be taken, and the Crimea seized and retained as a guarantee that Russia shall keep the peace for the future. Who will occupy it is, of course, a question for later consideration; but it has been suggested, and not without show of reason, that the best garrison which can be placed in it would be drawn from the hardy and gallant Circassians, whose hereditary hatred to Russia is the best assurance that they would keep the Crimea like true allies.

Lord Aberdeen has seen fit to explain away the extraordinary speech to which we adverted last week. He was moved to such retraction by Mr. Layard, "the honourable member for Nineveh," having threatened him with a motion in the Commons upon the subject of his language—a threat which, though rather out of order, had its effect. Lord Aberdeen astonished the Peers with the declaration that he had always been earnestly opposed to the policy of Russia, against which he had strongly remonstrated; and he still more astoundingly announced that he, of all the Cabinet, had been the most earnest in pressing for the advance of the British troops to the seat of war. Lord Clanricarde, like Messrs. Cheyble's hutler, was "unconvinced," and argued, rather effectively, that Lord Aberdeen had always been a friend of Russia, and that he had, by his speech of Monday week, done very great mischief, for that the Continental press had described him as having "justified Russia," and that such a representation of the course of the Minister of England had been circulated all over Europe.

The Parliamentary proceedings of the week, with the above exception, have not been interesting. The question of the admission of Dissenters to Oxford has been settled by the House of Commons. The proposal that on matriculation no oath or subscription should be demanded except the oath of allegiance, was carried; but a proposition to go further, and to throw open to Dissenters all the advantages and emoluments of the institution, was, on Mr. Walpole's motion, rejected. But inasmuch as it would seem illogical as well as unjust to admit a person to a certain course of study, and then to deny him the reward of successfully prosecuting it, a compromise has been effected, and it is now provided that the degree of B.A. may be taken without further oath than above mentioned. This arrangement is, of course, subject to revision by the House of Lords, which will probably reject the scheme so far as it concerns schismatics. A debate of great importance, but little apparent interest, has taken place with a satisfactory result, and the House of Commons has affirmed a resolution to the effect that the present law of partnership, which makes all partners unlimitedly liable, is unjust, and ought to be altered, and legislation in the spirit of the French law of partnership en commandite will ere long be adopted. The working of this will be to make small capitalists, who have sufficient confidence in a scheme to invest a certain sum therein, but who dread speculation which may involve them in ruin, to join in such scheme with limited liability. This will have the double advantage of letting loose much locked-up capital, and of breaking down the monopoly at present enjoyed by the great capitalists. In proof of the evils of the existing system, we may record an anecdote given us upon good authority. A farmer, who had saved, by years of care, some eleven thousand pounds, got it all in from the various small securities in which, from time to time, as it accumulated he had invested it, and brought it to London to buy into the funds. He did so, retaining only a hundred pounds, and, calling upon a London friend, he told him that with this sum he intended to have a holiday before returning to his farm. "O," said his friend, "don't throw away your money. I'll show you a better way to dispose of it." And he induced him to invest his £100 in a new Company which was going to do wonders. The Company failed, the shareholders were held liable, under the law of partnership, and not only did the unfortunate farmer lose his £100, but at no great distance of time, thanks to "law and equity," arising out of the unlucky investment, the odd £10,000 into the bargain.

The Crystal Palace daily receives a large attendance of visitors, varying, on the shilling days, from 12,000 to 15,000. The King of Portugal has been on a tour of inspection of the manufacturing and commercial towns in the provinces. Orders have been given to prepare her Majesty's yacht for her annual excursion, and this and some other signs recognisable by the initiate, induce them to believe that the season and the session will ere long be brought to a close.

THE NEW MAP OF EUROPE.

After all, the discoverer of Nimevol's shell, full of words, big with the fate of clerk Aberdeen and Co., proved to be a bottle of smoke, and only burnt the plaidy of the travelledthane "till it smelt like a singed sheep's head." The fact is, the Derby party were not ripe for office, and the explosion would only have left Palmerston master of the bone of contention. The Premier's love of peace is laudable, if real and not Russian cavare to the million; but peace at the price of honour, life, and limb, would be a disgrace upon our annals, and tinge the hitherto page of our history with blood. No, the Bear's claws must be clipped, the black two-headed eagle must be nailed to a limit, like a crow to a barn-door, that he may play the fool no more but in his own house, as a warning to kings not for their sole pleasure to wickedly expend the blood of hundreds of thousands of their fellow-creatures, the wealth of their country, and the produce of bounteous nature. And yet the Czar, the "gold bound braided" monster, we are told, is possessed of divine rights, has "about him all the sanctities of heaven," and that kings cannot err. It is impious, an offence against heaven! Such mockery of the attributes of sanctity and infallibility, superior even to those of the Father of Christianity, is degrading to common sense, and insulting to the age we live in. Now, come we to our theme, THE NEW MAP OF EUROPE, a pamphlet supposed to have emanated from a high quarter, and afterwards suppressed, we think, without just cause, except as a conciliatory step of diplomacy on the part of France, when hopes were still entertained of the Russian Emperor's sense of honour and honesty.

But, unfortunately for Europe, though the brains of this madman are out, he rises with a million mortal murders on his head to push us from our commercial stools. This state of doubt must end. There must be no flinching for fear of consequences. Not only must the peace, when attained, be honourable, but it must guarantee to the world a lasting peace for the future; and not only prove the power, but the right of civilization to respect and obedience. Neither moderation, patience, diplomacy, nor the sufferings of industry and commerce, have been able to disarm an ambition which menaces all Europe. The power of Russia, which does not consist in exterior commerce to any great degree, has no colonies to protect, has accumulated during the last half century a vast maritime and military force. Constantinople, and the adjacent countries of the Mediterranean, are the temptations; and the present Sovereign of Russia aims at being the executor of the will of the founder of his race. The resources of Russia are doubtless great, but they are derived from the annexed provinces rather than the body of the empire. Russia, then, is not vulnerable in the centre, but at the extremities; and if we drive the blood back to her heart, she stifles. The head of the colossus is at Helsingfors, the right arm at Warsaw, the feet at Sebastopol. We must, therefore, wrest Finland, Poland, and the Crimea, from the talons of the two-headed eagle. The loss of Finland is a sore wound in the flank of Sweden; because she has seen this fine province torn from her bit by bit, from whence Russia derives nearly the whole of her maritime population, and her timber for the construction of her navy. By Finland then should commence the reclamations of aroused Europe; and the restitution of this country to its ancient possessors, would be an act of policy of which no one could contest the prudence and the justice. A line drawn from Viborg to the gulf of Onega, should become on this side the extreme northern limit of Russia. The laud of Gustavus Adolphus and Charles XII., will again ascend to the rank she so long and worthily occupied in the councils of Europe.

If it was possible to re-establish the ancient Polish nationality, so great an act of reparation would make many generous hearts leap with joy. But in the actual state of affairs such an attempt would be more pregnant with serious complications and difficulties, than those which arrested the first Napoleon. Nevertheless, would not Poland, again opposed to her mortal enemy, serve to guarantee the independence of Germany? Since the partition of Poland, when Russia appropriated the lion's share to herself, she has been the nightmare of Germany whom she hates and despises. The Russians have a saying, when they speak of a man of German origin: "God has punished him enough, he has made him a German!"

The measure of precaution, which gave to Prussia the Duchy of Posen, will only be attended with good results when completed. Deduced to her actual limits, what force Poland would bring to Western Europe, if united henceth to Prussia, she drove back in the other side of the Niemen and the Bug her ancient oppressors, and became on this side the advanced guard of civilisation.

Notwithstanding a new dismemberment of this noble body, already so cruelly mutilated, would wound the public sentiments of Europe generally, it seems that the idea of adjoining to Prussia all that remains of Poland is justified, not only by the geographical disposition, but also by the affinity of race, language, and religion, which exists between the Poles and the inhabitants of Posen and Silisia. Condemned, at present, to the silence of slavery, and a political death, Poland would then have a place and deliberative voice in the assemblies of a state which has given many proofs of her religious tolerance, and a wisely progressive spirit.

NEALE TWINN'S TAVERN, near the Adelphi Theatre. Table d'hôte at half-past five every day. Chops Steak &c., until one in the morning.

WHO has ever enjoyed a good day's duck-shooting, that does not look back to the time with pleasure, and hail approaching July with unfeigned delight? Has not the sedgy pool more claims for him than any accustomed amusement? The excitement of the rise of the fowl, or the sound of its plunge in the waters; the quick report of the fowling-piece; the fall of the bird; the movements of the dogs, trained to bring the spoil to the hunter's feet; and lastly, the pleasurable feeling which accompanies the knowledge that you are rapidly filling your game-bag,—all these help to give weariness the slip, and time flies on until you find the shades of evening gathering in. Then your walk home, made cheerful by the cries of birds and beasts; the bark of a dog from a neighbouring homestead; or a merry peal of bells from a distant village. On your arrival the prey is exposed to view, admired, and criticised, and a portion laid by for the night's supper. Alas! for the unhappy wight whose bag is empty: no emotions with a tittle of pleasure in them are his; but fagged, and, perhaps, a little out of temper, he longs for to-morrow's sun, to retrieve his damaged reputation. May that fortune always be his! Is not life itself to be compared with duck-shooting? Man, with determination in his hand as a fowling-piece, and money or talents for his ammunition, is ever ready to let fly at whatever may rise in the shape of profit or self-aggrandisement. Those who have a steady hand and sure aim generally bring down as much as they could desire; but how many fire almost with their eyes shut, and after wasting their resources, return to their last home broken spirited and empty handed.

GERMAN DUCK-SHOOTING IN JULY.

In the south, Austria should add to her empire Moldavia and Bessarabia, and prolong her frontiers to the banks of the Dniester; she would thus gain some fertile provinces, and on the Black Sea for, which would marvellously assist her in the development of her marine; whilst, by the possession of Galatz, and the mouths of the Danube, she would profit by the transit of her productions from Central Europe. A Convention should be properly regulated, with a just consideration for the commercial interests of all European States, and in harmony with the principle of the liberty of navigating the Black Sea. It is superfluous to demonstrate how, by the advance of Austria on the Danube, Constantinople would have a sorer barrier yet than the line of the Balkans.

If it be objected that the Ottoman Empire would thus lose her right of sovereignty over Moldavia, think well to the magnificent recompence which would be offered her: in Europe, the Crimea, the object of her constant regrets, with the Asiatic sides of the Euxine; in Asia, the Transcaucasian countries, where the Russians established themselves to take Constantinople in the rear. This double restitution would have the effect of assuring the independence of the intrepid mountaineers of the Caucasus, who, single handed, have for twenty years kept the entire Muscovite forces at bay.

By this arrangement Russia would find the road to Persia and India, that she has planned with so much perseverance and energy, closed against her. She could no longer possess on the Black Sea more than the coast comprised between the mouth of the Dniester and the Dnieper; but Odessa, Nicolief, Kherson would remain to her, for the requisite outlet and exportation of her commerce, and for the arsenals of her marine, reduced to proportions sufficiently worthy of a great people, but no more menacing to the peace of the world.

Would it be presuming too much on the wisdom of Austria, to expect that in exchange for this aggrandisement of her territory and extension of her commerce and maritime power, she should renounce Lombardy? Milan, reunited to Piedmont, would strengthen without danger to any one, a state of secondary consideration, the prosperity of which concerns France. Is it not of importance to end the squabbles with Switzerland, to give satisfaction to the national feeling of Italy, and by this means deprive the spirit of revolution of one of its pretenses, and perhaps the most apparent of its grievances? The Venetian States, which include Frioul and Illyria, would remain to Austria under the conditions of the treaty of Campo-Formio. The empire would extend from Venice to Aekerman; from the mouth of the Adige to those of the Dniester. Her extreme points would touch on two seas, one of which, that she most needs, is now closed to her.

Such appear to be the only proper measures on which to establish the true basis of the equilibrium of Europe, at present compromised by the preponderance of Russia. To those who may be tempted to treat this plan as chimerical, we ask if they conscientiously believe that otherwise it will be possible to preserve the statu quo which existed before this infamous war was forced upon England and France? Our propositions would put an end to all cause of division between the two powerful Western States, nor peril the interests of either one or the other. The balance would be maintained between the two German States, which, largely added to in the Slavonic element, and in nearly equal proportions, shall no more trouble the breast of the Germanic Confederation with new pretensions. Sweden would be strengthened by the restitution of Finland, the Ottoman Empire by that of the Crimea and the line of the Caucasus. Compelled to disgorge the usurpings of an age, the aggressor would alone suffer by an arrangement which, north, west, and south, operates against his revenue. We can see no other certain way of probing to the quick this oriental question, which Russian ambition has made a subject of continual iniquity to every civilised nation. After the war will come the sovereign deliberations of an European Congress. Whether the way we propose be considered the best to attain the solution so ardently desired or no, we would do all justly, but resolutely; that is the secret of a far-seeing and enduring policy. The time has arrived when the power of one man shall no longer endanger with impunity the security of all.

HOME NEWS.

THE COURT.—The fashionable season may now be considered at its zenith. The salons of the nobility are crowded with rank and beauty on those frequent occasions when the hospitality of their aristocratic owners is dispensed. Her Majesty and her illustrious Court are unsparing in their patronage of places of public resort, and however threatening an aspect affairs abroad may assume, at home they have a brighter and more cheering influence. During the week the Court has sojourned at Buckingham Palace; and the Queen, together with the other members of the Royal Family, have enjoyed their customary exercise in the Parks, which have been thronged by numerous and fashionable parties of equestrians and pedestrians, attracted to the spot by the freshness of the weather, and the presence of the Sovereign and her suite.

On Wednesday morning, the Queen and Prince Albert, with the Prince of Wales, Prince Alfred, the Princess Royal, and the Princess Alice, went to the Egyptian Hall, Piccadilly, and honoured Mr. Albert Smith's entertainment, "The Ascent of Mount Blanc," with her presence. Her Majesty and his Royal Highness were attended by the Duchess of Atholl, the Hon. Matilda Fane, the Hon. Mary Seymour, Major-General Buckley, Captain the Hon. Dudley de Mos, and Mr. Gibbs. Her Majesty was graciously pleased to express her approbation of the entertainment.

His Royal Highness Prince Albert, attended by Captain the Hon. Dudley de Ros, inspected the Essex Militia, in Hylo Park, on Monday morning.

His Majesty the King of Portugal, and his Royal Highness the Duke of Oporto, left Buckingham Palace at 20 minutes past eight on Monday morning, for the Euston Square terminus of the London and North-Western Railway, and proceeded to Birmingham, on a tour through the manufacturing and mercantile districts. His Majesty was attended by Le Marechal Due de Terceira, Viscount de Carrelen, Baron de Sarmiento, Chevalier de Melo, Colonel Rolque, Lord de Tably, Major-General Wyld. The illustrious travellers, on Tuesday, visited the princely mansions and beautiful grounds of the Duke of Devonshire at Chatsworth.

The reigning Duke of Coburg had a narrow escape from severe injury on his birthday, the 21st. Whilst driving himself from his country palace, of Cullenburg, to that of Ehrenburg, in the town of Gotha, one of the horses of his phaeton fell, broke the pole, and caused such an abrupt shock to the vehicle that his Highness was thrown out, but fortunately received no injury, so that he was enabled to hold a Court immediately after.

FASHIONABLE WORLD.

Among the fashionable entertainments of the week we must not omit to mention those of Lady Ashburton, who gave a grand ball on Wednesday night, at Bath House, to their Royal Highnesses the Duchess of Cambridge and the Princess Mary.

The ball was preceded by a banquet to a distinguished party.

Shortly after 10 o'clock the saloons were thrown open for the reception of a brilliant re-union of the leading members of the diplomatic corps and the aristocracy.

Their Royal Highnesses the Duchess of Cambridge and the Princess Mary, attended by Lady Suffolk and Major Purves, arrived shortly after 11 o'clock, and immediately dancing commenced to the music of Coote and Timmy's orchestra.

At one o'clock a sumptuous supper was announced.

The Duchess of Cambridge and the Princess Mary of Cambridge subsequently returned to the ball-room when dancing was resumed, and the festivities were prolonged to an advanced hour.

The Earl and Countess of Derby whose grand banquet took place on Wednesday evening to their Royal Highnesses the Duchess of Cambridge and the Princess Mary, at the family residence in St. James's-square. The Royal Duchess and Princess arrived at eight o'clock.

Lady Wetherell Wrenford, who gave a grand matinee on Monday last, at her residence in Eaton-square, to a distinguished circle.

The Marquis of Lansdowne who gave a grand concert on Monday evening, at Lansdowne House.

Their Royal Highnesses the Duchess of Cambridge and the Princess Mary honoured the noble Marquis with their company. Their Royal Highnesses arrived shortly before 11 o'clock, attended by Lady Suffolk and Major Purves.

A distinguished party of Oriental Princes attended the concert.

Lord Blantyre has arrived at Stafford House, from Scotland.

The Earl and Countess of Clare and Lady Elinor Fitzgibbon have left London for Paris.

Lady Constance and Miss Cliechester have left the Clarendon, for Burton Constable.

FASHIONABLE ARRANGEMENTS.

Mrs. Petre's first concert in Berkeley-square will take place on Friday next, the 30th of June.

Mrs. Selwin's balls, announced for the 4th and 7th of July, are unavoidably postponed.

Mrs. Dodd's morning party will take place on Tuesday, July 4.

July 3—Viscountess Cambermere's morning party. July 5—The Countess (Frances) Waldegrave's concert. July 6—Mrs. William Painter's ball. July 8—Horticultural fête at Cliswick. July 10—Madame Oury's matinée musicale, at the residence of Lady Vassall Webster, Giamard Lodge, Roehampton. Lady Caroline Moxe's ball. July 13—Lord Spearman's soirée dansante. July 14—Lord Manners' concert.

Parliamentary.

MONDAY.—LORDS.—The Earl of Aberdeen, with the view of removing certain misapprehensions as to the character of his speech in reply to Lord Lyndhurst, moved for the production of a despatch addressed by himself when Foreign Minister in the Government of the Duke of Wellington, to Lord Heytesbury, our ambassador at St. Petersburg, upon the subject of the treaty of Adrianople. The noble earl declared that there was nothing in his speech which he had to retract or to contradict. The astounding declaration had lately been made, by very high authority, that he had claimed the honour of having framed the treaty of Adrianople. This despatch would show how far he had been engaged in the framing of that document, and also what were his opinions, and those of the Government whose organ he was, as to the nature of that unfortunate and disastrous treaty. It was contemplated before that treaty to constitute Greece, not into an independent kingdom, but into a vassal state under the suzerainty of the Sultan, somewhat similar to Wallachia and Moldavia; but, after the treaty, it was deemed necessary to erect it into an independent kingdom. He had always contended that the treaty itself was in the highest degree disastrous and prejudicial to Turkey. He had said the other night that, however disastrous and prejudicial the treaty was to Turkey, Russia had acquired no territorial possessions in consequence of it. This he said in answer to the exaggerated and unfounded denunciations of the extension of the Russian empire since that period. It might be comparatively incorrect to say that she had acquired no extension of territory; but there certainly had been no extension to the degree asserted. At the same time he was not unaware of the value of the acquisitions made by the treaty in respect to the navigation of the Danube, and of several posts in Asia of the highest strategical importance. In proof of this the noble earl read one paragraph from his despatch to Lord Heytesbury, which strongly condemned the proceedings of Russia in making these acquisitions, and mentioned, in reply to a question, that the despatch was dated the 31st December, 1829. With the treaty of Adrianople a change commenced in the policy of Russia. Had the Empress Catherine had the execution of it, Russia would probably have obtained great acquisitions under it; but since that time it had been the policy of Russia to look for the extension of political influence rather than increased territory. The policy was to attempt the same object by different means, in order not to alarm the European Powers. He supported this view by references to the treaty of Unklar-Skeless and the mission of Prince Menschikoff, and then noticed the assertion that he had recommended a return to the status quo ante, or, at least, that he had not objected to it. What he said the other night was, that though Austria and Prussia might be bound by their desire of the status quo, that had no application either to England or France. Before the declaration of war the status quo was all this country had attempted to obtain, and the Turkish Government consented to give it; and if the Emperor of Russia, listening to anything but the voice of the passions by which he was at times moved, had accepted it, we should have been spared the calamities of war. But the moment war was declared the question entirely changed; everything then depended upon the results of the war; and the status quo, as far as we were concerned, was at an end; and he would again say that the independence and integrity of Turkey must be permanently and effectually secured. That was an object from which we could not depart; and without it, peace would be impossible. As to the danger of Russian aggression upon Europe, he had certainly expressed no fear, because he felt none; and he was inclined to feel less every day. But how did he wish to make war, now we are at war? Why, by carrying it on with the greatest vigour and determination in order the sooner to secure the return of peace. And his colleagues knew that he had always been most ready to co-operate with them in the most active measures of hostility and warfare preparation. Nay, more; he had personally been more urgent than any other man for a speedy advance and concentration of the allied forces, in order to support the gallant army of Omar Pasha, and for enabling Austria to take a more effectual part in the war. This, perhaps, he ought not to have said, but it was the truth, and he had invariably pursued the same policy. Now that we were entered into the war—a war which he unequivocally declared to be perfectly just—it should, so long as he had anything to do with its conduct, be carried on in the manner best calculated to lead to a speedy, safe, and honourable peace.

The Marquis of Clanricarde urged that the noble earl, instead of producing a despatch written after the signature of the treaty of Adrianople, ought to produce the instructions given to the British minister at Constantinople before the treaty was made; and he was inclined to feel less every day. But how did he wish to make war, now we are at war? Why, by carrying it on with the greatest vigour and determination in order the sooner to secure the return of peace. And his colleagues knew that he had always been most ready to co-operate with them in the most active measures of hostility and warfare preparation. The Earl of Aberdeen said he had not had any communication whatever with Prince Metternich, directly or indirectly, for the last year and a half. He hoped, however, that the Emperor of Austria would take the counsel of so old and valuable a servant.

Lord Brougham deprecated discussion at the present moment, but considered the course taken by the noble earl at the head of the Government as consistent in itself and judicious in its character. He hoped, however, the Western Powers would not be committed by anything done at Vienna, for certainly it was reported that a proposition had been made by Austria to Russia, with a view to peace. Peace, however, ought not to be made without security against Russian aggression at a time when Europe might be less prepared to resist it.

The motion was then agreed to, and their lordships adjourned.

COMMONS.—Lord John Russell stated that no official information had been received that Russia had acceded to the demands of Prussia and Austria; but he added that Government had been apprised by the Earl of Westmoreland of his lordship's having heard, from Bucharest, that the siege of Silistria had been raised.

On the third reading of the Oxford University Bill, Mr. Philip moved the addition of clauses providing that the Vice-Chancellor's court should be governed by the rules of the common and statute law, and not by those of the civil law, that any three of the judges might make rules for the procedure in such court, which should proceed in conformity with the practice in the county courts.

The clause was agreed to.

Mr. Heywood said that he had modified the second of the clauses which he had proposed on the previous Thursday, and he had sought to shape it in accordance with the opinion of a majority of the House. The House had assented to the matriculation of students without other oath or declaration except that of allegiance, and he, desiring that the students so admitted should have a definite object before them at the expiration of three years, proposed to make his second clause extend only to the degree of bachelor in arts, law, and medicine. The bachelor had no power in convocation, and no voting power. But he avowed that he accepted this as an instalment only, and should be glad, next session, to move for a select committee for inquiry into the whole subject.

Mr. Milnes Gaskell seconded the motion.

The Speaker announced that notice ought to have been given of the clause in its altered form.

After some conversation, further proceedings were adjourned until Thursday.

The adjourned debate on the consideration of the Public Revenue and Consolidated Fund Charges Bill as amended was resumed, and, after considerable discussion and opposition by Irish members, an amendment for recommission of the bill was rejected by 90 to 53. The bill was considered as amended.

On the motion for going into committee of supply, Mr. Ashurst called the attention of the House to the conduct of the late Governor of New Zealand in delaying and partially frustrating the new constitution granted to that colony. He charged Governor Grey with being attached to the old autocratic colonial system, and with having set himself to retard the working of recent constitutional legislation, not only by availing himself of the utmost period of legal delay in concerning the Legislature, but by certain illegal acts in regard to the colonial revenue, Crown lands, and otherwise.

Mr. F. Peel defended the course which had been adopted by Governor Grey, and said that it was unfair to assail him for using the discretion allowed him by law. The constitution, he said, began with the colony as early as Parliament had intended should be the case, and the delay spoken of was no more than was necessary for the due working out of the details of the electoral system.

Sir John Pakington bore general testimony to the merits of Sir G. Grey as a colonial governor, but he could not consider that recent acts of Sir George in the colony of New Zealand had been successfully vindicated by Mr. Peel. He thought that Sir George had acted indiscreetly in regard to the disposal of the land, and that he had not acted in conformity with the intentions of Parliament in delaying the convening of the Legislature.

The subject then dropped. The House went into committee of supply on the colonial estimates, the discussion of which occupied the remainder of the night.

On the vote for £20,000 for captured negroes, a discussion arose and Lord Palmerston, in a brief and animated speech, described the protracted reluctance of the Brazilian Government to put down the slave trade, the mode in which the suppression had been forced upon them by the English cruisers, and the beneficial results of our interference.

The House resumed. The report of supply (navy) was brought up, and some discussion took place on the vote for the accommodation of Russian prisoners.

The other business was disposed of.

TUESDAY.—LORDS.—The Earl of Clarendon, in reply to a question from Earl Fitzwilliam, said that Lord Elgin had negotiated a treaty between this country and the United States relative to the colonial fisheries; but he had not yet had time to give it all the consideration which its importance deserved. He could, however, state that it contained no new provision for permitting American citizens to establish factories for the purpose of curing their fish upon the colonial coasts. In this respect it was founded upon the same principle as the treaty of 1818. Some concessions had certainly been made by the colonies, but he believed they would be found productive of as much benefit to the colonies as to the United States; and he hoped that nothing would occur in respect to this treaty to mar the great work of endeavouring to settle all differences between this country and the United States.

In reply to a question from the Earl of Harrowby,

The Earl of Clarendon said that no progress had been made in inducing the United States to open the trade between New York and California to foreign vessels.

The Duke of Newcastle, in answer to the Earl of Derby, stated that the assent of the colonial legislatures would be necessary to give effect to the provisions of the treaty.

A division took place upon the motion for the second reading of Sir Thomas Wilson's Fincley-road Estate Bill. The numbers were—

For the second reading 34

Against it 11

Majority for 23

The bill was consequently read the second time.

Lord Lovat's Restitution Bill was read the second time.

The Witnesses Bill was read the third time and passed.

The Duke of Richmond inquired whether it was the intention of the Government to recommend that medals be conferred upon the officers, non-commissioned officers, and private soldiers, who had served in the late campaigns in South Africa.

The Duke of Newcastle replied in the affirmative; but the medals would be delayed until the arrival of Sir G. Cathcart. Adjourned.

COMMONS.—The morning sitting was taken up with the Merchant Shipping Bill. The bill passed the committee, and was reported.

At the evening sitting,

Mr. Layard mentioned that in consequence of the notice he had given, relative to a speech delivered in the House of Lords by the Earl of Aberdeen, that noble lord had made an explanatory statement. Mr. Layard trusted that the explanation so given would have the effect of removing from the public mind the general misconception which prevailed as to what the noble lord did concerning that policy which had been so boldly shadowed forth by the Lord President of the Council, and the Minister for Foreign Affairs. Under the circumstances, he thought he would act in conformity with the feeling of the House, if he did not persevere with his motion.

Lord Palmerston, in answer to Mr. Bright, explained that in consequence of the objections urged to the Police Bill, he had resolved to withdraw the measure.

Mr. Collier called the attention of the House to the law of partnership, and moved "That the law of partnership, which renders every person, who, though not an ostensible partner, shares the profits of a trading concern, liable to the whole of its debts, is unsatisfactory, and should be so far modified as to permit persons to contribute to the capital of such concerns on terms of sharing their profits, without incurring liability beyond a limited amount."

Lord Coleridge seconded the motion.

Mr. Lucas drew attention to the case of Ireland as regarded the injurious operation of the existing law of unlimited liability. The want of a well-defined law of limited liability obstructed individual and national enterprise. Mr. Lucas moved the addition of the words—"And such modification is especially necessary for Ireland, regard being had to the peculiar social and industrial condition of that part of the United Kingdom."

The Attorney-General was a decided friend to the proposition now submitted, but he thought the House ought not to be asked, under existing circumstances, to pronounce upon it. No good could arise from affirming a mere abstract resolution. He would submit, therefore, to Mr. Collier the propriety of withdrawing his resolution, and submitting at a convenient time to a substantive proposition, surrounded with all the safeguards that ought to accompany a change in the law.

Mr. Napier joined in the same request.

Lord Palmerston also tendered the like advice. The Government would not have acted a becoming part had they rushed at a conclusion before perusing carefully the report of the commissioners. He assured the House that the Government were exceedingly anxious to introduce such changes into the law of partnership as were calculated to promote the prosperity and stability of commercial enterprise, and to throw all safe and reasonable facilities in the way of working men elevating themselves in the social scale.

Mr. Collier, looking at the expressions of opinion which his motion had drawn forth, deemed it immaterial whether a division was taken or not. If permitted, he was willing to withdraw his motion. (Cries of "No, no.")

Mr. Lucas's amendment was agreed to; and Mr. Collier's motion, as amended, was adopted without a division, and amidst much cheering.

The other business was disposed of, and the House adjourned at a quarter past 12 till Wednesday afternoon.

WEDNESDAY.—COMMONS.—Mr. Potter gave notice of his intention to bring in a bill to legalize the principle of limited liability in partnerships in Ireland.

On the order of the day for going into committee on the Mortmain Bill,

Mr. Mowbray moved that the committee be postponed until after the fourth order of the day should be disposed of.

On division this motion was carried by 74 to 55—majority 19—and the postponement took place.

The Public Libraries Bill went through committee.

Mr. Napier, for Mr. Willester, withdrew the Property Disposal Bill.

The Tithe-rent Charge (Ireland) Bill was postponed.

The fourth order having then been disposed of in a few minutes,

A fresh discussion arose as to proceeding with the Mortmain Bill in the absence of the Government. An unsuccessful attempt was made to obtain further postponement, and the House at length went into committee.

Mr. Heatham undertaking to postpone certain clauses to which it was understood that the Attorney-General was opposed.

In the course of the subsequent discussion two divisions took place, and after disposing of six clauses, the Chairman reported progress, and obtained leave to sit again.

The House soon afterwards adjourned.

PROVINCIAL.

THE OXFORD COMMEMORATION.

OXFORD, June 28.—The morning opened very unpropitiously with continuous rain, which fell most heavily at the time when visitors flock to the Sheldonian Theatre, i. e., from about 9 to 11. The undergraduates were allowed to enter as early as 12 o'clock, and no overcrowding or difficulty of any kind was experienced in their gallery or staircases. The usual practice of exhibiting by cheering and groaning their political and ecclesiastical sympathies was followed, and for the space of above an hour before the procession entered the theatre the lungs of the younger portion of those present, and the ears of their seniors were put to a severe trial. The warmest feelings of the academic youth seemed to be about equally shared between the chief naval and military leaders engaged in the war against Russia, and the officers under whose discipline they themselves either are now or have been recently placed. The popularity of the late and present Practor was only equalled by that of Sir Charles Napier, Lord Raglan, and Omar Pasha. The names of Chase, Cholmerley, and Stokes, sometimes singly, sometimes conjoined with "the ladies," were greeted with loud and frequent plaudits, decidedly beyond those accorded to any but the most favoured individuals. Of the Russian war heroes "Charley Napier" had very clearly the call; and in connexion with the same subject Louis Napoleon received very hearty applause, while the Emperor Nicholas was more groaned than perhaps any other name which was given. Political leaders were but little mentioned, and their names often excited neither approval nor disapproval. Of University personages, besides the Practor, we heard cheers given for the Public Orator, the Dean of Christ Church, Dr. Scott of Balliol, and the Marquis of Lichfield (who has recently taken an extraordinarily good first-class in the modern history school), while groans were given more than once to the Moderators, who are evidently viewed with much disfavour by the noisiest of the undergraduate body.

Soon after 11 o'clock the great doors were thrown open at the south end of the theatre, and the procession entered. It was smaller and less imposing than usual. Of the heads of Houses no more than 11 were present; these were—the Vice-Chancellor, the Masters of University and Balliol, the Wardens of Merton and New College, the Rectors of Exeter and Lincoln, the Presidents of Trinity and St. John's, and the Principals of Brasenose and Magdalen Hall. No noblemen accompanied the procession, and only 12 or 14 Doctors. The most important personages in the procession were two bishops, the Bishop of London and the Bishop of Ripon, who both looked remarkably well. The first attempt made by the Vice-Chancellor to speak was the signal for a burst of cheering in favour of the Practor, which lasted nearly five minutes. After this a further difficulty was experienced by the Vice-Chancellor in obtaining a hearing, owing to a somewhat ludicrous circumstance. The chair of the Regius Professor of Medicine is situated in the hall's circle, and it so happened that two or three ladies could not obtain seats were standing near the Professor, who occupied the throne of right belonging to him. Undergraduate notions of gallantry received a shock from this juxtaposition, and efforts were made from time to time with most amusing vigour and pertinency to convey to the Professor the impression which his apparent inability to beatty in distress produced upon the more juvenile of the auditory. Whether owing to the drowsiness under which we understand the excellent Professor to labour, or owing to a conscientious objection to relinquishing his academic rights, all the efforts made for about two hours failed to move him. At last, while the English essay was being recited, he gave up his chair, and was rewarded for the act of self-renunciation by thunders of applause, silently indicating the real good nature that lay at the root of what at one time almost seemed to be becoming an unpleasant personal attack.

The Vice-Chancellor having been allowed to open the proceedings, only interrupted some half-dozen times with requests that he would "speak up;" the candidates for honorary degrees were presented in succession by Dr. Phillimore, who accompanied the presentation of each with a short Latin speech. Prince Lieben, Darmstadt, who was presented the first, met with a most enthusiastic reception. Dr. Colenso, the Bishop of Natal, Mr. Henley, M.P., and Admiral Morshy were also very warmly received. In connexion with the last, three cheers for the Navy were given. The Admiral evidently felt most highly gratified by the warmth of his greeting. Colonel Fane elicited a cheer for the Oxfordshire Militia. Mr. McDougall and Sir George Grey were also well received. With regard to the other personages presented some not very unnatural inquiries were made from the undergraduate gallery, who they were, and why they were to have degrees. After the D.C.L. degrees had been conferred, the Rev. H. Cuswell was presented by the Public Orator to receive the honorary degree of M.A., and the Rev. Josiah Crofts, M.A., of Carbecine-hall, Cambridge, was presented by the Dean of Oriel College (Mr. Marriott) and admitted ad eundem. The Professor of Poetry then delivered the Cretian oration in commemoration of the University benefactors, and furnished a remarkable contrast to the English essay which followed it, a vigorous production, strongly in favour of progress. This essay was excellently delivered by the author, Mr. Fremantle, of Balliol, and was well heard in all parts of the theatre. The Latin poem followed, which was recited by Mr. A. Blomfield, Scholar of Balliol, and son of the Bishop of London, who came from town expressly to have the pleasure of hearing him. The proceedings terminated by the recital of the Newdigate, the production of Mr. Frederick George Lee, of St. Edmund-hall, the first member of that society, we believe, who ever obtained a University prize. The procession then left the theatre by the great doors, and the company dispersed.

THE KING OF PORTUGAL AT BIRMINGHAM.—The King of Portugal and the Duke of Oporto arrived at the New-street station, Birmingham, by the London and North-Western Railway, at 12 o'clock on Monday. They were accompanied by the Duke de Terceira, Viscount Carmo, Lord de Taubley, Colonel Wythe, and a numerous suite. Although the visit was understood to be of a strictly private nature, there was a numerous attendance of influential gentlemen assembled in the station-yard to receive the august party; and among them were Mr. James Baldwin, Mayor of Birmingham, Lieutenant-General Reid, Commandant of the district, Lieutenant-Colonel Bamford, Major Wynward, Mr. J. P. Leisam, Mr. Moon, and Mr. Bartow, Directors of the London and North-Western Railway, Mr. Robinson, manager of the Birmingham station, and several members of the corporation. After a short stay at the Queen's Hotel, His Majesty and his Royal brother, accompanied by the Mayor, proceeded to visit some of the principal manufactories of the town. The first was the establishment of Mr. George Richmond Collier, in Church street; and afterwards they visited in succession those of Messrs. Elkington and Mason, electro-plate; Messrs. Muntz's rolling mills; Mr. Westley Richards, gun-maker; Messrs. Jomens and Betteridge's paper-machinery works; Messrs. Clive, gun-barrel makers; Messrs. Elliott, button-makers; Messrs. Baldwin and Son, paper-makers; Messrs. Rice, Hurris, and Son's glassworks, &c. The party intended to have visited the glassworks of the Messrs. Chance, Spon-lane, and the Town-hall, but time prevented. After partaking of a splendid repast, provided by Mr. Scott, at the Queen's Hotel, the Royal party inspected with great minuteness the interior of the new stallion of the London and North-Western Company, with which they expressed themselves highly delighted. They left for Matlock, where they sleep to night, by the 7.15 p.m. train, and to-morrow visit the estate of the Duke of Devonshire at Chatsworth.

THE ATTEMPTED MURDER NEAR SHEFFIELD.—It is with pleasure that we learn that Elisha Parker, the man whom it was attempted to murder, at Dore, by drawing him out of his house and shooting him, is progressing satisfactorily, and there is now every hope that his arm will be saved from amputation. The Sheffield Tradesmen's Protection Society at once offered £100 reward to any person who would give such information and evidence as would lead to the apprehension and conviction of the miscreants who shot Parker. The whole circumstances of the case have been laid before Lord Palmerston, the Home Secretary, and his lordship has directed that an additional reward of £100 from Government shall also be offered with the same view. His lordship will also advise Her Majesty to grant a pardon to any accomplice (not being one of the persons who actually shot Parker), who shall give such information and evidence as will lead to the conviction of the offenders.—Sheffield Examiner.

Police Intelligence.

BOW-STREET.

ASSAULTING A CHANCELLOR.—John Murray, a rough-looking fellow, was charged with assaulting Vice-Chancellor Sir W. P. Wood. His honour stated that he was walking through Princess-street, on his way from Lincoln's-inn-fields to Drury-lane, at half-past five, on Monday evening, when he saw a man running along, with a basket of glass in his hand, followed by a woman, who was calling out "Stop him." The man slipped and fell upon the pavement, which enabled the woman to come up to him. On raising himself, he approached her in a fighting attitude, and was about to strike her, when complainant interfered by placing his hand on the man's shoulder, and begging him not to do so. He instantly turned round upon complainant and gave him a violent blow on the head, which happily did more injury to complainant's hat than to his person, although it would have been a serious matter if it had struck him in the face, as was probably intended. A police-constable happened to come up at the moment, and the prisoner was taken into custody. The assault was witnessed by Mr. Pugh, one of the clerks of the Vice-Chancellor's Court, who was walking behind his honour. His honour stated that the prisoner was drunk at the time, and no doubt his excitement was considerably increased by the aggravating conduct of the woman. He did not wish, therefore, to press the case severely against him, although it seemed desirable to teach men of his kind that they could not commit such assaults with complete impunity. Mr. Jardine mitigated the penalty to 30s., and in default of payment, committed the prisoner for three weeks.

Patrick Callaghan, a well-known begging impostor, who was found pleading "attribution" in the public streets, and looked as destitute as usual, was brought up by a mendicant officer, and charged with the old offence. The constable stated that the prisoner had £2 7s. 6d. in his possession when apprehended. Mr. Jardine committed him to prison for a month, and directed the money to be handed over to the governor of the goal, to defray the expense of the prisoner's maintenance.

GREENWICH.

John Dawkins, of No. 12, Keppel-street, Southwark-bridge-road, lighterman, and George Wood, of No. 5, Peary-rise, Sydenham, appeared to a summons, at the instance of the railway directors, charged with the firing of a cannon near the Forest-hill station, Sydenham, by which Mr. G. W. Franklyn, M.P. for Poole, had been in great danger of losing his life. The affair took place on the premises of Mr. N. Pegg.

Mr. George Faithful, solicitor, appeared for the directors of the Brighton Railway Company, and Mr. Pegg attended to explain and watch the proceedings on the part of the parties complained of.

Mr. Pegg said he had seen Mr. Franklyn, and that gentleman had expressed himself satisfied. He had a letter to that effect from Mr. Franklyn, and it was hoped that would be deemed sufficient.

Mr. Faithful said he had nothing to do with Mr. Franklyn; he appeared on the part of the railway company for the protection of the public generally.

Samuel Kingsworth, of 21, Regent-street, Deptford, said he was on Mr. Pegg's grounds, at Forest-hill, when the defendants were firing off cannon. He saw them load the cannon with powder and wadding of lured oakum, and ram it down very hard, and then drive it in with a large hammer. Witness remarked, "that will be as hard as a bullet." When they had fired five or six times, a train passed; and Mr. Pegg, who gave orders each time to fire, said, "Now fire! now fire!" when the defendant Dawkins fired it with a red hot poker. Witness saw it strike the train, and observed what he thought to be small pieces of paper come out of the carriage window. The loading and firing was done under the direction of Mr. Pegg.

Sutton, a railway porter, said he saw a gentleman get out of a break van. He went and examined it, and found a piece of wadding inside of it (now produced) the size of his fist. It was sunk in the wood, and had made quite a hole. It passed through the window and the hat of the gentleman, which was very much damaged; the hole in the hat was the size of the palm of his hand.

Sergeant John Carpenter, an active officer of the detective police, doing duty at the Crystal Palace, of the R. division, said he was at the Crystal Palace station between 11 and 12 o'clock in the forenoon, when the train arrived. He saw the gentleman (Mr. Franklyn) on the platform, with a large hole in his hat. The hole was in the front, and at the side near the back part of the hat. Witness now produced a large piece of stuff-wadding. It appeared to be tarred oakum. The gentleman and two friends were together, and appeared to be much agitated. Mr. Franklyn remarked that it was a pretty thing to fire with while trains were passing. The gentleman then went forward by a train. Sergeant Carpenter said he then went forward to Mr. Pegg's residence at Forest-hill, and saw that gentleman at his house. The defendants were then loading a gun or cannon of about a foot long. One of them was ramming a gun, and several other cannons were lying on a plank elevated and facing the railway line. Mr. Pegg was looking on. There was a basket and some oakum, and two white flags. Wood held a stick for spouting the cannons. Witness told Mr. Pegg, and asked him if he knew of it. He said he did not—they must have done it. Witness told him that it had passed through a gentleman's hat, who seemed excited and much frightened. He thought that the gentleman had been injured. Mr. Pegg said, Dawkins must have done it. Witness turned to Dawkins, and said, "What a fool! not you have been guilty of it, to fire while a train was passing." He replied that he thought it had passed. Mr. Pegg said he told Dawkins to fire as soon as the train had gone on, as a salute. He had some friends and customers on a visit, and they came to spend a holiday and dine with him, and the firing the cannon was intended as rejoicing.

Mr. Franklyn having failed to attend this day, Mr. Secker said he would adjourn the further hearing for a week.

The parties then retired.

SIGNIFICANCE.—The following notice is posted in a plantation in Everton:—"If the boy who left two of his toes and part of an old boot in a shiel trap in Ainsfield plantation, on Sunday night, will apply at the gardener's cottage, they will be restored to him.—Ainsfield, June 12, 1854."—Liverpool Chronicle.

THE EMPEROR OF THE FRENCH.

(To the Editor of the Times.)

Nous vous serions bien particulièrement obligés, Monsieur, si vous vouliez bien insérer la rectification ci-jointe dans le numéro du Times de demain matin.

Recevez, Monsieur, l'assurance de ma considération très distinguée,

Le Secrétaire de l'Ambassade de France,

JULES DE SAUX.

Albert-gate-house, le 26 Juin.

"Palais de St. Cloud, le 23 Juin.

"Monsieur l'Ambassadeur,—Les détails contenus dans le petit article extrait du Glasgow Citizen, que j'ai l'honneur de vous communiquer, sont en tous points contraires à la vérité. L'Empereur n'a jamais connu, jamais vu, le Professeur Anderson. Sa Majesté le déclare formellement, et désire que cette déclaration reçoive la publicité nécessaire.

"Ayez, Monsieur l'Ambassadeur, l'assurance de ma haute considération et de mes sentimens dévoués.

"Chef du Cabinet,

"PROFESSOR ANDERSON AND LOUIS NAPOLEON.—On Tuesday se'night the Wizard made a very interesting communication to his audience. He stated that many years ago, when Louis Napoleon was in London, and his fortunes were not in the ascendant, he had the honour of lending the Prince £500. He had been most honourably repaid by the Minister of the Emperor in Washington, when he (the Wizard) was in America. But, in addition to this, the Emperor had just now invited him to visit Paris, before his final departure for the United States. He intended to accept this gracious invitation, and his only regret in connexion with it was that it would compel him to abridge his season in Glasgow by at least 12 days. This curious and interesting communication was received with great applause."—Glasgow Citizen.

LYCEUM THEATRE.—Mr. Alcroft's benefit takes place on Wednesday next, when Mr. Charles Matthews and Madame Vestris will appear in three pieces. In addition to which Mr. Summs Reeves, Miss Ransforth, Miss Isaacs, Mme. Anadei, Messrs. Richardson and Lazarus, and many other artists of eminence will appear. Conductor M. Benedict.

STRAND.—On Wednesday next the 5th inst., Miss Fitzpatrick will take her benefit at this theatre, appearing in Lady Teazle. This will be the last night of her engagement. We need not remind our readers that Miss Fitzpatrick is considered to be the only legitimate successor of Mrs. Nerbit, and we have no doubt the house will be crowded to the ceiling, a reward which the fair beneficee richly deserves.

CREMORNE GARDENS.—The successful issue of the daring aeronautic experiment of last week, attracted immense numbers to this favourite resort, on Tuesday afternoon. Long before the time announced for the ascent every approach to the gardens was thronged by anxious and expecting crowds, while the gardens themselves presented an unusually gay appearance from the large concourse of well-dressed and fashionable visitors. Shortly before seven o'clock the signal guns were fired, and the majestic machine, with its scientific apparatus, immediately afterwards commenced its aerial flight. Mons. Létour at least furnishes evidence of being able to guide his parachute in its descent, so as to avoid unpleasant contact with any obstacle that might present itself in its approach to the earth. This is accomplished partly by means of two supplemental valves, which can be opened and shut at the will of the aeronaut, who thus regulates the rapidity of his descent, and of course graduates the inclination of his approach to terra firma, whilst by means of two large wings, which he can move like small sails 40 or 50 times in a minute, M. Létour is also enabled to steer clear of any obstruction that he may find on his nearly reaching the earth. The capability of thus directing the movements of the parachute has now been fully proved, and the two successful attempts made by M. Létour at Cremorne, after two failures, arising from the want of sufficient ascending power in the balloon, at another place of entertainment, must have been as gratifying to the bold experimentalist and the spirited proprietor of Cremorne, as it was satisfactory to the large portion of the public assembled upon both occasions. We understand the descent was made at Tottenham.

WILLIS'S ROOMS.—On Wednesday, Madlle. Siona Levy's last "Séance Declamatoire de Musique" was well attended, though chiefly by ladies. Herr Sigismund Leheneyer was the accompanist on the piano-forte, and the other instrumental performers were M. Silas, violinist (who received the honour of an encore); Mons. Jacquard, violoncello; and Herr Adolph Terschuk, flute. Madlle. Siona Levy gave Le Songe d'Athalie (by desire); Les Imprecations de Cléopâtre; L'Ange et L'Enfant; and Une Bonne Fortune, evincing in each great dramatic powers. There was no singing, but the whole performance was very gratifying.

ROYAL VISIT TO MONT BLANC.—On Wednesday morning her Majesty and the Prince Consort, with the whole of the royal children, and a large number of the children of the nobility, paid a visit to the Egyptian-hall, to witness Mr. Albert Smith's Ascent of Mont Blanc. The royal party enjoyed the entertainment thoroughly. Her Majesty in particular was much amused, and laughed heartily at Mr. Smith's voluble commentary on the topics of the day in the famous "Galilæan" song. At the conclusion, her Majesty expressed her warm appreciation of the merits of the entertainment, and was pleased to accept a copy of the "Story of Mont Blanc."

THEATRE-ROYAL, EDINBURGH.—On Saturday a farce, on the last popular folly—the moustache movement—and bearing that title, was produced with a success which can scarcely have been inferior to what it has experienced in London, where it has been played, at the Adelphi, continuously for more than fifty nights. It is from the pen of Mr. H. H. Brown, and, like all Adelphi farces, is of the most extravagant characters. Miss Helen Bennett, as Louisa Fitzjohnson, and Mr. Wood, as the clerk, convulsed the house with laughter. Indeed, while we congratulate the manager on the entire success of the farce, it is to us doubly satisfactory from the manner in which it represented how valuable an accession he has received in the persons of these two performers. While Mr. Wood is daily progressing in public estimation, Miss Helen Bennett is proving herself to be decidedly one of the cleverest actresses that has, for a long time, graced these boards.

COLCHESTER ANGEL LODGE, No. 59.—At the recent annual election and installation of officers of this old established lodge, Br. Richard Ellisdon (late senior warden) succeeded Br. Edward Williams as worshipful master; and the other officers all took a higher grade—viz., Brothers George Lewis, senior warden; William Sparling, junior ditto; Robert Bewick, chaplain; William Slaney, treasurer; William Williams, secretary; John Pattison, director of ceremonies; Thos. Hall, senior deacon; and W. A. Neek, junior deacon. Br. John Partridge, Stratford St. Mary, was elected to the vacant post of inner guard; and Br. Howe was reappointed Tyler. The initiations during the past year have been more numerous than usual. On Wednesday the annual festival of St. John the Baptist was celebrated in the lodge-room, Cups Hotel, where a sumptuous repast was served up by that excellent host and brother, George Chaplain. The worshipful master presided, with the senior deacon in the vice-chair. The visitors from other lodges included Br. Thompson, P.G.D., representing the Grand Lodge of England; Br. E. Dorling, secretary to the Provincial Grand Lodge of Suffolk; P.M.S. J. Snriddgo and P.M. the Rev. L. S. Wilson, of the North Essex Lodge; Br. Foster, S.W. 186 (Roehford); Brs. James Webb, W.M.; J. C. Parker, P.M.; S. L. Coppin, Cooper, and J. T. Harmer, of the Brightlingsea Lodge; Br. G. A. Turner, Ipswich; Br. W. Brown, Wivenhoe, &c. The members and officers of the Angel Lodge present were the junior warden, treasurer, secretary, director of ceremonies, inner guard, and Tyler; with Brs. J. Haddeck, P.M.; W. Griffin, jun., P.M.; G. Chaplin, P.M.; S. D. Forbes, W. K. Dawson, R. Pargeter, T. Fenning (Mersea), R. Moore, T. Railing, J. Saunders, J. Boot, jun., A. J. Prior, R. Palmer, &c. After loyal honours to the Sovereign, her Royal Consort and family, with "Health and Success to our Army and Navy," the masonic toasts commenced with the "Health of Grand Master, the Earl of Zetland," Deputy Grand Master, the Earl of Yarborough, and the officers of the Grand Lodge," to which that venerable and distinguished mason, Br. Thompson, responded. The "Visiting brethren, with the health of Br. Rev. S. L. Wilson," and of "Br. Dorling and the Grand Lodge of Suffolk," were also duly honoured, with the other usual toasts connected with the Angel Lodge. In song, too, the honours of the craft were stoutly, though, at the same time, harmoniously upheld—

"From the prince to the poor, be he rich or be he poor,
Each mason is a brother, and each will help the other—
So grateful is the tie of Freemasonry."

In this department the company was chiefly indebted to Brs. Turner, Dorling, Foster, Palmer, and Prior; and it is unnecessary to add that their vocal efforts contributed very greatly to the general enjoyment of the banquet.—Essex Standard.

ARCHERY.

NATIONAL ARCHERY MEETING, 1854.

The great national gathering of archers, which will be held this year at Shrewsbury, is expected to be the best meeting that has yet taken place since the establishment of the annual meetings at York in 1834. Although a greater number of competitors is expected, and among others some very promising archers hitherto unknown to fame, yet there seems no probability of any one being able to wrest the laurels from the brow (or bow) of the present champion, H. A. Ford, Esq., of the Royal Toxophilites, who has held the gold medal every year since it was awarded, as the badge of the championship in archery.

The prizes amount to £364 (in addition to the usual medals, &c.)—viz., £104 for ladies, and £260 for gentlemen.

The meeting will continue for three days, the 5th, 6th, and 7th July; the above mentioned prizes, the champion's gold medal, the ladies' silver bracer, and the wooden spoons, will be awarded for the hits, scores, and golds, obtained during the first two days, and the third day will be spent in shooting a handicap sweepstakes, for various extra prizes. The locality selected this year by the Committee, is in every way suitable, and the scenery and other attractions of Shrewsbury will, there is no doubt, cause a first-rate muster of archers and general company at the meeting.

Last year, we gave in "THE FIELD," a full report of the annual meeting at Leamington, with a complete return of the hits and scores made by each competitor at the various distances, and it is our intention, this year, to publish, in "THE FIELD" of the 8th of July, a copy of the judges' award of prizes for both ladies and gentlemen, and also a target list giving a similar return of the hits and scores got by each archer at the meeting. This will make "THE FIELD" of that date a valuable reference to all who take delight in the noble and manly sport of archery during the next twelve months. To insure copies an early application for the paper should be made, as great difficulty was experienced last year in meeting the demand.

ANCIENT SCOTTON ARROW.—We are authorised to state that the next annual meeting to contend for this ancient prize (for the one hundred and eighty-first time), will be held at Richmond, Yorkshire, on Wednesday, the 20th July. It has hitherto been compulsory to have it shot for within twenty-four miles of Eryholme-on-Tees, on the borders of Durham and Northumberland.

THE ROYAL ARCHERS.—We have heard it stated that the Queen's Body Guard for Scotland are to meet here about the middle of next month, to compete for the Silver Arrow.—Montrose Standard.

ROYAL COMPANY OF ARCHERS.—The Edinburgh arrows, given by the magistrates to the Royal Company of Archers, the Queen's Body Guard for Scotland, was shot for in Hope Park, on Saturday last, and gained by Henry George Watson, Esq., secretary to the Royal Company.

THE METROPOLIS.

METROPOLITAN IMPROVEMENTS.

In compliance with the wishes of many of our country subscribers, we shall occasionally give views of such metropolitan improvements, either of a public or commercial character, as may tend to social advancement. We this week give exterior and interior views of the premises occupied by the Messrs. Nicoll and Co., one of those gigantic and splendid establishments which give character to the finest street in Europe—Regent-street. As will be seen by our illustrations, they are of great extent, and replete with every luxury and refinement to decorate the "outward man" or woman.

METROPOLITAN ASSOCIATION FOR IMPROVING THE DWELLINGS OF THE WORKING CLASSES.—This association has just held its annual meeting, when the tenth report of the directors was submitted to the shareholders. It states that there has been a steady extension of the operations of the association, both in the metropolis and the provinces. In the latter, branches have been formed, with an aggregate capital of nearly £30,000, viz., at Brighton, Dudley, Ramsgate, Southampton, Torquay, and Newcastle-on-Tyne. At Liverpool a provisional committee of between 80 and 90 of the principal merchants, brokers, and bankers, has been appointed, who propose to make the capital of that branch £50,000 or £100,000. Applications to be affiliated are also expected from Bristol, Coventry, Derby, Exeter, Gloucester, Plymouth, Wolverhampton, &c. Shares have been taken during the last year to the extent of £20,475, and the year's profits are £1,351 6s. 5d. The directors intend to increase the capital of the association.

THE EARLY MOVEMENT.—A movement, which promises to become general, for closing business at an early hour every Saturday, was commenced on Saturday last in some of the principal City warehouses. In several instances the closing took place at One and in others Two o'clock, and among the firms by whom it was adopted were Messrs. Morison and Co., Pawson and Co., Brettell and Co., &c.—a favourable feeling being manifested with regard to it in almost all quarters. The plan has been pursued by the Stock Exchange and the principal firms in the East India trade for a long period, and there seems now to be a very strong disposition to facilitate its uniform introduction.

The following letter has been addressed by Lord Palmerston to the Secretary of the Crystal Palace Company:—"Whitehall, June 20. Gentlemen,—It is with much satisfaction I inform you that I have received the Queen's commands to convey to you the high approbation of Her Majesty and of His Royal Highness Prince Albert of the admirable manner in which everything was arranged and conducted on the occasion of the opening of the Crystal Palace at Sydenham, on Saturday, the 10th inst. The Queen has been pleased to express the especial gratification she derived from the very magnificent music which was performed, and has graciously signified her opinion that it had the finest effect which Her Majesty had ever heard. I have the honour to be, Gentlemen, your obedient servant, PALMERSTON."

GENERAL MORIN, who was sent with some other gentlemen, on the part of the Imperial Commission of the Exhibition of 1855, to be present on the part of France, at the opening of the Crystal Palace at Sydenham, has just addressed a long report on the subject to the Minister of State.

CALL.—The directors of the Crystal Palace Company have given notice that it is intended to call up the £1 10s. still unpaid on the second series of shares (50,000), upon which £3 10s. only has been paid.

ENORMOUS PENSIONS DRAWN FROM THE POST-OFFICE REVENUE.—From a return to the House of Commons it appears, in the year ended the 5th of January, the following payments were made:—To His Grace the Duke of Marlborough, £4,000; to His Grace the Duke of Grafton, £3,407 10s.; and to the heirs of His Grace the Duke of Schomberg, £2,900.

RACKETS.—BELVEDERE TAVERN, PENTONVILLE.—On Monday next, several grand matches will be played between four of the finest professionals and amateurs in the kingdom. Admission free. A second elegant billiard room, and the American Bowling Saloon, re-decorated, are now open. Gratuitous instruction in Rackets given daily, by George Erwood, racket master.

RACKETS.—BELVEDERE TAVERN, PENTONVILLE.—The grand match which was to have been played at this court on Monday last, was postponed in consequence of untoward events having occurred to two of the gentlemen engaged. The match will, however, come off in a few days. The Public, although they had not the entertainment they anticipated, had a fine evening's amusement in witnessing an extempore match, between the London Amateur and Bull, against George Erwood and the veteran Sandon. The two former gentlemen won eleven out of the twelve games played. On the following day some admirable play took place between the London Amateur and a highly skilful player, against George Erwood and an Amateur of great talent. Each party won three games, the failure of the daylight preventing the conquering game being contested for.

NICOLL'S ESTABLISHMENT.

FIRE AT THE PALACE.—On Sunday a fire broke out in the "kitchen department" of the Crystal Palace at Sydenham. A large body of policemen were near the spot, by whose exertions the fire was quickly subdued. An escape of gas was said to have had something to do with this accident.

MASTERS AND WORKMEN.—Upwards of 40 mechanics, lately employed at the Crystal Palace, under Mr. Myers, in Belvedere-road, attended at Lambeth Police office in the present week, to hear the decision in a case in which they were all equally interested. The case was that of one of the men who summoned Mr. Myers for 6s. 6d. for two half-days' wages. The defence to the claim was this—that the complainant had been paid for five hours on the day of the opening of the Crystal Palace, and five hours on the Monday following, and that being knocked off at the end of the five hours, and only working five hours on the second day, he (complainant) was not entitled to the sum claimed. It was also shown that the general practice at such jobs was that of paying by the hour, and that the workmen were at liberty to leave off, or the employer to knock them off work, whenever they pleased, without notice; and Mr. Elliot, under the circumstances, dismissed the complaint.

The receipts in the refreshment department of the Crystal Palace continue to increase, and the arrangements appear to give general satisfaction. A time-table has been issued for the starting of trains to and from the Palace, which prevents unnecessary delay. In other respects the working of the establishment steadily improves, and there seems no reason to doubt that a prosperous and brilliant career awaits the enterprise of the company. The public are taking possession of the building and grounds with a goodwill and satisfaction written agreeably on the countenance of every visitor. Between the money taken at the doors and in the refreshment department the receipts cannot be less than £1,000 per day, so that the financial prospects of the undertaking are highly encouraging.

LIFE ASSURANCE.

REPORT of the SELECT COMMITTEE of the HOUSE of COMMONS, and the DEPOSIT SYSTEM. The new and important feature of Life Assurance adopted by the DEPOSIT and GENERAL LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY.
The following is an extract from the Report of the Select Committee:—

"The objects which persons have in view in effecting insurances upon their lives, are generally of an important and solemn character, viz., the provision for widows and orphans after the death of their natural protectors; unlike any ordinary transaction of trade, a contract once entered into cannot be discharged or abandoned, if doubts of the stability of an office should arise, without a sacrifice of premiums paid in past years, and the necessity of effecting new policies in other offices at increased rates of premium, owing to the greater age of the assured; persons are thus placed in the anxious and unhappy dilemma of being compelled to persevere in paying premiums from year to year, with some suspicion and doubt as to the ultimate advantage of doing so, or of incurring the serious loss which, under the most favourable circumstances, must attend the abandonment or sale of a policy."

"On the deposit system a person is not 'compelled' to pay, from 'year to year,' and he does not, if desirous of 'abandoning' his policy, incur any 'serious loss,' but, on the contrary, he may pay such amounts, and at such times, as he may find money convenient; he can stop paying whenever he pleases, and he can withdraw the whole or part of his premiums. If the whole be withdrawn the policy is cancelled; if part only, then the value of the policy is diminished by the assured value of the part withdrawn."

A. B., aged 20, opens a deposit policy with a payment of 5l., which it will be seen he increases from time to time, and occasionally diminishes. For example.—The following abstract of a Ledger Account will show the operation of the scheme:—

WATER
LEADEN
PIPES.

"The above engraving represents accurately a section of a leaden pipe, which was employed for a short time in conveying water from a well on the grounds of Mr. Dick, of Bonchurch, Isle of Wight. The original section of pipe is 8 1/2 in. long, 2 1/2 in. diameter, and 5-16 in. thick. A great part of the internal surface is corroded by the action of the water; but, as shown in the drawing, four deep excavations have been made, and another is shaded out of view by the manner in which the section of the pipe has been cut. The water has cut these deep pits almost through the pipe, and not only upon the portion which we have illustrated, but has formed similar channels throughout the entire length."—Expositor.

N.B.—The corrosive water of the Isle of Wight has no effect on Gutta Percha Tubing. See Testimonial below:—

DURABILITY OF GUTTA PERCHA TUBING.

Many inquiries having been made as to the durability of Gutta Percha Tubing, the Gutta Percha Company have pleasure in giving publicity to the following letter from SIR RAYMOND JARVIS, Ventnor, Isle of Wight.

(Second Testimonial.)

March 10th, 1852.

"In reply to your letter received this morning, respecting the Gutta Percha Tubing for pump service, I am able, with much satisfaction, to answer perfectly. Many builders and other persons have lately examined it, and there is not the least apparent difference since the first laying down, now several years; and I am informed that it is to be adapted generally in the houses that are being erected here."

UMBRELLAS.

THE "PARAGON," made on Fox's Patent Frames, is the only Umbrella that combines strength with such extraordinary lightness, weighing only from 9 to 10 ounces.

From the experience of the last twelve months, during which time several thousands have been sold, W. and J. SANGSTER have such confidence in its merits that they will undertake to keep in repair for a period of two years all that may be brought to either of their Establishments.

To gentlemen going to India, or any other hot climate, as also to tourists, the "PARAGON," is a valuable, and will be found invaluable.

W. and J. SANGSTER beg likewise to call attention to their ALPACA Umbrellas, which, on account of their durability and cheapness, continue to be so largely patronized.

TEETH.—By Her Majesty's Royal Letters Patent.—Newly-invented and Patented application of Chemically-prepared White India-rubber in the construction of Artificial Teeth, Gums, and Palates.—Mr. EDWIN MOSLEY, Surgeon-Dentist, 61, Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, sole Inventor and Patentee.—A new, original, and invaluable invention, consisting in the adaptation, with the most absolute perfection and success, of CHEMICALLY-PREPARED WHITE INDIA-RUBBER as a lining to the ordinary gold or bone frame. The extraordinary results of this application may be briefly noted in a few of their most prominent features, as the following:—All sharp edges are avoided; no springs, wires, or fastenings are required; a greatly increased freedom of suction is supplied; a natural elasticity, hitherto wholly unattainable, and a fit perfected with the most unerring accuracy, is secured; while, from the softness and flexibility of the agent employed, the greatest support is given to the adjoining teeth when loose, or rendered tender by the absorption of the gums. The acids of the mouth exert no agency on the chemically-prepared White India-rubber, and, as it is a non-conductor, fluids of any temperature may with thorough comfort be imbibed and retained in the mouth, all unpleasantness of smell or taste being at the same time wholly provided against by the peculiar nature of its preparation. To be obtained only at

The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite retarding power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post, on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 218, Piccadilly, London.

Price of single truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d., postage, 1s.; double, ditto, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d., postage, 1s. 6d. Post-office orders to be made payable to JAMES WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly ELASTIC and COMPRESSIBLE, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of WEAKNESS and SWELLING of the LEGS, VARICOSE VEINS, SPRAINS, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price from 7s. 6d. to 16s. each, postage, 6d.

HEALTH RESTORED.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.

AN EXTRAORDINARY CURE OF DROPSY, AFTER SUFFERING FOR EIGHTEEN MONTHS.

Copy of a Letter from Mr. G. BRIGGS, Chemist, Goolie, Dated February 15th, 1853.

To HENRY HOLLOWAY.
Sir,—I have much pleasure in informing you of a most surprising cure of Dropsy, recently effected, by your valuable medicines. Captain JACKSON, of this place, was afflicted with Dropsy for upwards of eighteen months, to such an extent that it caused his body and limbs to be much swollen, and water oozed as it were from his skin, so that a daily change of apparel became necessary, notwithstanding the various remedies tried, and the different medical men consulted, all of no avail, until he commenced using your Pills, which, and a strict attention to the printed directions, he was effectually cured and his health perfectly re-established. If you deem this worthy of publicity, you are at liberty to use it.

I am, Sir, your respectfully,

(Signed) G. BRIGGS.

Sold at the Establishment of Professor HOLLOWAY, 244, Strand, (near Temple-bar,) London, and by all respectable Druggists & Dealers in Medicines throughout the civilised world, at the following prices:—1s. 1d., 2s. 6d., 4s. 6d., 11s., 22s., and 35s. each box.

THE FIELD OF WAR.

OUR WOODEN WALLS.

THE BALTIC FLEET.

STORES FOR THE FLEET.—The Rhodamantus paddle-wheel steam store ship, Master Commander John Belam, arrived on Sunday morning at Woolwich, from Portsmouth, having brought round a quantity of stores and parcels for the Baltic fleet. They are to be put on board the Hannibal, 91, for immediate despatch to the Baltic.

LAUNCH OF THE DESPATCH AND GUN-BOAT ARROW.—On Monday afternoon the Arrow, one of the four gun-boats ordered by the Admiralty to be built by Mure and Co., of Blackwall, was sent off the stocks. The Arrow has been built within ten weeks, and to the credit to her builder it should be stated that she has been launched in so complete a state that, instead of requiring some scores of men to finish her in the docks, she proceeded next day to Deptford, to be placed in the engineers' hands. Messrs. Humphreys and Co. have the machinery all ready, and with equal rapidity it is expected her engines will be fitted and the ship will be completed for sea in the course of a fortnight. As a proof of the great expedition used in building this swift despatch and formidable gun-boat, we understand that no less than £900 were paid on Saturday for shipwrights' wages alone for last week. The ship looked well, her lines promise a good rate of speed, and her quarters evince excellent capacity for working the immense guns with which she is to be armed.

STOCKHOLM, June 16.—The friends of Lieutenant Crewe Read, of the Hecla, who was so severely wounded at Ecknees, will be glad to hear that that gallant young officer is going on most favourably, and that he hopes in a few weeks to be in a condition to report himself recovered, and to return to his duty.

SAILING OF TROOPS.

PORTSMOUTH.—The Kangaroo, bled steam-transport, went into Portsmouth harbour on Monday, from Deptford, and is being fitted up for the conveyance of troops to Varna. She was surveyed by the dockyard officers, and is taking in a large supply of coals for her voyage.

JUNE 27.—Drafts of the 42nd, 79th, 93rd, and 95th Regiments were this morning embarked on board the Vulcan troop-ship, for Constantinople, numbering altogether about 250 men. Drafts of the following regiments arrived this morning from London, and embarked on board the Vulcan screw troop-ship, to join their regiments in the East:—2nd battalion Coldstream Guards, 1st and 2nd battalion Grenadier Guards, 2nd battalion Scots Fusilier Guards, 150 from each regiment.

THE TROOPS AND TRANSPORTS.—THE GUARDS.—The 1st detachment of the auxiliary force of Guards left London, en route for Varna direct, Tuesday. Thus the three battalions at the seat of war will amount to the roster of 1,000 men each. The remaining portion left next morning at the usual starting hour, half-past five o'clock. The officers were, of the Coldstream, Colonel the Hon. J. Upton, Lieut. Colonel Lord F. Paulet, Lieut. Colonel the Hon. George Boyle, M.P. for Frome; Colonel Trevor, Captain Stronge, Captain Lord Dunskeith, Lieutenant Disbrow, Lieutenant Freemantle, Assistant-Surgeon Trotter. There were of this division three sergeants, and 150 rank and file. Of the Scots Fusilier officers there left, Colonel Onslow, Captain Viscount Chewton (son to the Earl Waldegrave), Lieut. Thistlethwaite, and Mr. Baker, Surgeon; 150 rank and file, and four Sergeants. Lieut. Colonel Douglas has been advanced to the command of the 11th Hussars, in the East, vice the Earl of Cardigan, promoted to the rank of major general. Lieut. General his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge is now second in command of the British army in the East.

THANKS TO CAPT. KELLOCK.—"Himalaya, off Varna, June 13. The officers of the 5th Dragoons Guards cannot leave the Himalaya without expressing to Captain Kellock their sense of his constant attention to their comfort during the voyage from Queenstown to Varna. They wish also to congratulate him on the success of this unprecedented experiment of conveying so large a body of cavalry, artillery, and infantry, consisting of 21 officers, 450 men, and 320 horses to the seat of war, in the short period of 11 days and 19 hours, under steam. They also beg that Captain Kellock will offer to all the officers of the Himalaya their thanks for the ready assistance they have at all times received from them, and which so much contributed to the prosperous termination of the voyage. To Mr. Lane, especially, they would tender their thanks for his unremitting attention to the welfare of both men and horses during the time they have been on board; as also to Mr. Triscott, the first officer of the ship.—T. Le Marchant (Major 5th Dragoons commanding), and by every other officer."

OUR FRENCH ALLIES.

VARNA, June 9.—Since the date of my last letter, a French division, 7,000 strong, under General Canrobert, has landed here, and, as well as that of General Brown, is now encamped about eight miles from Varna, on the Shumla road. Infantry, cavalry, artillery, and stores now follow each other in rapid succession, and are landed at the quay every day. The remainder of the 7th Hussars arrived on Wednesday, at the same time as Brigadier-General Tylden of the Engineers and his staff, and are encamped on the opposite side of the bay, where the Sappers and Miners have constructed an excellent wooden pier, run out into deep water 140 feet from the shore. The French have made one for themselves at this side, adjoining the old quay, but it does not at all support the pretensions made on its behalf. They are, however, certainly displaying extraordinary activity in almost every department. The streets have been already named, on painted boards stuck up at the corners, to the great astonishment of the Turks. The street in which they have established their hospital is of course Rue de l'Hopital; a long straggling sort of lane, with one or two good houses in it, but chiefly remarkable for danglehills, the sale of stinking fish, and being the chosen "beat" of a very savage dog, has received the pompous designation of the "Corso." What would a Roman think if the board happened to catch his eye?

TROOPS ON THE MARCH, OR UNDER ORDERS FOR FOREIGN SERVICE.

In consequence of the constant practice of smoking on board ship, and the dangers apprehended from it since the loss of the Europa transport, the attention of the Horse Guards has been directed to it; and a general order has been issued, a copy of which arrived in Cork garrison on Monday, prohibiting troops when about to embark for foreign service from taking lucifer matches or other combustible matter with them. Tobacco smoking is permitted in the army and on board ship, but the attention of commanding officers will in future be directed to the practice, so as to prevent danger from fire.

46TH REGIMENT.—Orders were on Wednesday received at the Infantry Barracks, Windsor, for the 46th Regiment, now quartered there, under the command of Colonel Garrett, to be prepared for embarkation to the seat of war in the East, early in next month. The regiment, including the guard supplied to Kensington Palace, is now more than 1,000 strong, and should the recruits continue to arrive in the same numbers as has been the case during the last fortnight, it will soon attain the full complement of 1,200. It is understood that Colonel Garrett, who distinguished himself in the Peninsular campaigns, and is considered one of the best infantry officers in the army, anticipates taking out with him at least 1,000 bayonets. To that end the troops are drilled incessantly, and make perceptible progress. The service companies are taken out in heavy marching order, every day, when they go through their evolutions sometimes in Home Park, and at others in the Great Park. It is understood that the 46th will be relieved by the Royal Bucks (King's Own) Regiment of Militia, now quartered at Weedon, under the command of Colonel Lord Carrington.

SOLDIERS' WIVES AND FAMILIES.

HAYMARKET THEATRE.—A performance was given here on Monday night, under the patronage of Australian colonists, the proceeds to be applied towards the support of the wives and families of soldiers and sailors engaged in the war. The entertainments commenced with Mr. Planché's drama, "The Knights of the Round Table," which was played for the 32nd time. The chief feature of the evening, however, was the début of Mr. Coppin, the Australasian comedian, who gave his gratuitous services on this occasion. This gentleman, who enjoys considerable reputation in the Australian colonies, appeared in the two-act drama (from the French), "The Young King," in which he played the part of M. Putzi, the Maire—and also as Crack in the farce of "The Turnpike Gate." In both these impersonations Mr. Coppin proved himself an accomplished actor. His performance roused one strongly of the late John Reeve. Mr. Coppin is evidently an experienced artist, and his performance fully deserved the warm applause with which it was received.

THE EUROPA TRANSPORT.—[From The Times.]—Sir, Application having been made this day to this office on behalf of the widows and orphans of five brave Dragoons who were drowned in the Europa transport, the committee take the opportunity of calling public attention to their rules for widows and orphans:—

"That relief in the shape of a donation not exceeding the undermentioned sums, being the same as agreed to by the Waterloo Committee on the 28th of June, 1815, be adapted as a scale for the widows of non-commissioned officers and soldiers now serving against Russia.

"A pension may be granted in the place of the whole or part of such donation, should it appear expedient to the committee.

THE SIEGE OF SILISTRIA RAISED.

BELGRADE, JUNE 25, 12 O'CLOCK NOON.

The Monitor of Bucharest officially declares that, in obedience to orders from St. Petersburg, the siege of Silistria is raised, Giurgevo is evacuated, and the whole Russian army is about to retreat across the Pruth.

CONSTANTINOPLE, JUNE 12.

General Ussuf has been named commander-in-chief of the Bashibazouks, and Colonel Magnan second in command of Prince Napoleon's division.

The whole British force is now being pushed up to Varna. The Himalaya has arrived with the 5th Dragoons, which she took up this morning to the Black Sea. To-morrow a large force will be despatched. All the Guards are to leave, and the Scotch brigade, consisting of the 42nd, 72nd, and 93rd regiments, will accompany them. In a few days the whole force will have left, and the slopes of Scutari, so lately covered with the tents of 10,000 men, will be as lonely and bare as of yore.

A "hell" has been established near Scutari barracks by certain enterprising persons from the neighbourhood of St. James's-street, but hitherto the worthies have been very unlucky and have met little custom, and none of it lucrative. An Italian has erected a very comfortable casino, an eating and smoking room, in the same place. Our commissariat has got 40 days' bread in advance for the army; the French have not got 20 days' bread. The 74th Regiment of the line (French) has arrived at Bourgas, to lay out camps and break ground for the French columns which are now marching up there. In a week they expect to have 25,000 men in the place, but, except in grain, the supplies are deficient.

There has been a serious scuffling fight at Gallipoli between the 1st Royals and the 30th Regiment, in which all the men on both sides were engaged. Only broken heads were the result, and the combatants are now as good friends as ever.

According to accounts from St. Petersburg, of the 17th, the Emperor was deeply affected by the intelligence of Prince Paskiewitch having been wounded. His Majesty immediately summoned the Minister at War and the Imperial Princes to a deliberation.

The official list of the Russian army of the Danube shows a "loss of 50,000 since the crossing of the Pruth." But noted that this amount of loss is admitted by the Russians. Fifty thousand human lives have thus been sacrificed on one side alone as the price of a despot's diseased appetite for a neighbor's territory. How long will men permit the earth to be cursed by despots?

THE WAR IN EUROPE.

THE ADVANCE OF OMAR PASHA.

A WAR SONG. BY MAMMOUDA EFFENDI.

To the front! To the front! Up with Crescent and Star!
Be our war-cry, O Muslims, the name of Omar!
'Tis a name causing fear in each Muscovite breast,
From Silistria's walls to the far Bucharest!
To the front! To the front! Up with Crescent and Star!
To the charge! To the charge! And strike home for Omar!

Yes! the day is now come for unflinching advance,
Side by side with the soldiers of England and France!
Osmanli, and Egyptian, and Arab, are here,
And undaunted they stand with a staunch Scutari!
To the front! To the front! Up with Crescent and Star!
To the charge! To the charge! And strike home for Omar!

Forward! Bashibazouks! Show a forest of spears
On the field where the Cossack invading careers!
As the foam of the Danube o'er flies fore the wind
So the Cossack must lie front our forces combined!
To the front! To the front! Up with Crescent and Star!
To the charge! To the charge! And strike home for Omar!

Charge! ye sons of the Crescent! and let not Stamboul
Ever degraded bow down to the Muscovite rule!
See, the Enxline is free; and the Czar's flying fleet
But breaks on shore a like fatal defeat!
To the front! To the front! Up with Crescent and Star!
To the charge! To the charge! And strike home for Omar!

To the charge! To the charge! Up with Crescent and Star!
Be our war-cry, O Muslims, the name of Omar!
'Tis a name causing fear in each Muscovite breast,
From Silistria's walls to the far Bucharest!
To the front! To the front! Up with Crescent and Star!
To the charge! To the charge! And strike home for Omar!

VARNA, Friday, June 9.—Captain Wallace, of the 7th Fusiliers, has been killed by a fall from his horse. His death has cast a great gloom over his regiment. It took place last Saturday, and the deceased was buried with all military honours on Sunday last.

On Monday morning, at 3 o'clock, the Light Division of the British army, commanded by Sir George Brown, and consisting of the 7th, 10th, 23rd, 33rd, 77th, 88th Regiments, with part of the 8th Hussars, the 17th Lancers, and a portion of a battery of artillery consisting of four guns attached, commenced its march from this by striking tents and getting baggage in readiness, and after breakfast proceeded on their way to their new encampment between Kojuk and Devna (called in some of the maps Downes). The infantry halted on a plain about nine miles and a half from the town of Varna, close to a freshwater lake, but the cavalry and artillery continued their march and pitched tents at the village of Devna, which is about 18 miles from Varna, the route being through a rich and fertile country, perfectly deserted and lifeless—not a house, not a human creature to be seen along the whole line of march. A thick scrub, said to abound in game of various kinds, covers the country towards Devna, and the district is rich in varied scenery of a sober agricultural character.

The vicinity of the lake insures a supply of water, for daily household or tent use, and the labours of the military anglers have been already rewarded by soundry fine dishes of perch. Altogether the station is excellent, and as the commissariat is not deficient in supplies of all the essentials of bread and beef, there is no need of complaint. It is feared there may be a scarcity of leguminous food, and that the health of the men will suffer in consequence. The fleet, which is in Baltschik-bay, has felt the evil effects of such scarcity already, and the Britannia and several other ships have been visited with scurvy. On Saturday last the Spitfire paid a visit to Bourgas, which is a town of some importance south of Varna in the Black Sea, and brought up between 20 and 30 tons of onions (soghun) for the use of the fleet, and 50 head of country cattle, but as some complaints have been made of these little interferences of the sea service with the commissariat of the land forces, Omar Pasha has issued strict injunctions all along the European coast of the Black Sea that no ships be provided in future with such stores or provisions under any pretence short of absolute want. Up to this order the scenes at the pier here have been highly amusing. The embarkation of cattle by the sailors for the ships in the roads is the most so. One holds an unfortunate beast by the tail, while two others, one on each side, excite him to a canter by their cries and blows with sticks. Away they go at a killing pace, the sailors bounding along in spite of their naked feet, with their hats blown back off their heads and hair flying loose. The creature is at length brought to the stage, where every species of encouragement to descend into the boat is given to him by poshing, by twisting the tail (this expedient is generally successful), by pulling at the horns, &c. Yesterday, after going through all these performances, the horse boat which contained the cattle was swamped; four of the bullocks swam on shore, one was drowned, and the remainder were rescued from a "watery grave" only to be devoured.

The following are the positions of most of the British corps, as known at Constantinople on the 15th:—At Alodyn, near Varna, the Light Division, under Sir G. Brown, consisting of two brigades, the 1st commanded by Brigadier-General Airey, including the 7th, 22nd, and 33rd Regiments; the 2nd brigade, commanded by Colonel G. Buller, including the 10th, 77th, and 88th Regiments. The 2nd Battalion Rifle Brigade will be attached to the light division, under Sir George Brown. At Varna, the Duke of Cambridge's division, which disembarked on the 14th, consisting of a brigade of Guards, commanded by Brigadier-General Bentinck, and a brigade of Highlanders, consisting of the 42nd, 70th, and 93rd Regiments, commanded by Sir Colin Campbell, K.C.B. Also at Varna, the 17th Lancers, 8th Hussars, and 5th Dragoon Guards. At Gallipoli, the 3rd division, commanded by Sir Richard England, consisting of the 1st brigade, commanded by Sir John Campbell, the 38th regiment, 1st Royals, and 4th regiment; 2nd brigade, commanded by Brigadier Eyre, consisting of the 20th, 44th, and 50th regiments. At Scutari, the division under the command of Sir De Lacy Evans, General Boquet, with the advanced guard of his division, entered Adrianople on the 9th. The Governor, Rustem Pasha, accompanied by a numerous escort, went out to meet the general, who was harangued at the gates of the city by the Armenian Archbishop, at the head of his clergy.

THE WAR IN ASIA.

ERZEROU, May 30.—The season is at present fine, the roads open; provisions here and at Kars in great abundance. The crops promise well throughout the province; water and provisions in quantity; the public health excellent; and trade as well as can be expected under present circumstances. Last week a Tartar arrived here from Kars, with intelligence of Urzogh having fallen into the possession of Selim Pasha, and that the Russians had evacuated the place without resistance.

The army is encamped before Kars, and the Musliar, as well as the European generals, have been in tents since the 15th of May. The troops at Kars at present, between regulars and Redifs, amount to about 15,000, besides the vanguard of 9,000, and five more in Ardahan, and four in Bayazid. Hence the total number may be computed at about 34,000 men. Supplies in cash and kaine (paper money) are daily pouring in from the capital, which has considerably improved the moral condition of the army. The soldier is always happy and in good spirits with a little money in his pocket.

It is to be hoped, and it is a measure of vital importance, that a portion of the Anglo-French forces should join the army of Anatolia without a moment's delay. Order and discipline, somewhat shaken by intrigue, would soon be restored by this means. General Intrigue (Ferhat Pasha) is jealous of General Gayum, the latter being the "pe" of the troops.

After the fall of Urzogh 26,000 Georgians submitted voluntarily, and swore allegiance to the Sultan; and Selim Pasha assured them that the slave traffic should be no longer tolerated, and named also native chiefs to preside, under the authority of the Porte, over the newly acquired districts.

Schamyl will soon attack the Russians. He has seized the Caucasus road, and not a drummer boy can be sent to reinforce the army except by the route of the Caspian. He is said to meditate an attack on Tiflis with a force of 20,000 men. On the 30th of May he was within eight hours' march of Tiflis.

A part of the army occupies Samgel, where there are six powerful batteries, and the remainder will advance progressively.

The Russians encamped at Arpatzhi have retired, it is understood, within the fortress.

Kars, May 21.—Several Russian deserters have come in within these few days (about 30). They state that the force at Alexandropol or Goumri does not exceed 10,000 men; little dependence, however, can be placed in their reports.

MAY 22.—To day some Cossacks, commanded by a captain and two subalterns, were escorted in from the outlying pickets, and while I was sitting with Koerschid Pasha in his tent they were introduced. The chief was a remarkably well-made fellow, about 30 years of age, dressed in a handsome Russian uniform, with several medals on his breast, silver epaulettes, and silver lace; his head covering was a low black lambskin Persian cap. After pipes and coffee and a short conversation, he (and his two subs) withdrew, having first presented the Pasha with a fine hawk, with bells on its feet. These Cossacks, who are Mohammedans, allege as an excuse for their desertion, that their religion and prejudices were interfered with. The captain has been at once taken into the Turkish service, with the rank of Alai-Emine, or Major. News of this promotion will reach Gumri in 36 hours, and it is hoped that many others will thereby be induced to follow his example, and quit the Russian ranks.

NAVAL OPERATIONS IN THE BLACK SEA.

The Soldaten Freund has a letter of the 10th from Odessa, which contains some interesting information relative to our captive countrymen. The officers and men, who seem to be in no want of money, are permitted to walk about as they please. The conduct of the officers is highly praised, but the common sailors every now and then take a great deal more to drink than does them good. On the 6th they got very drunk in an Odessa "ginshop," and a regular fight among themselves was the consequence. The combatants could not be separated until a detachment of troops interfered with levelled bayonets. The officers and midshipmen frequent the best houses in the place, and British and Russian officers may be seen after evening be seen walking arm in arm on the Wasser glacis, and listening to the military band. General Osten-Sacken, who is far from well, inhabits a villa on the coast belonging to General Loders.

Admiral Bruat, with his squadron, is going into the Black Sea, to take part in some great operation of the combined fleets.

LETTER FROM AN OFFICER OF THE TIGER.

The following letter has been received from Lieutenant Alexander Hamilton, late of her Majesty's steam frigate Tiger:

"ODESSA, June 9, 1854.

"Sir,—Lieutenant Royer left last Wednesday for St. Petersburg. Lieutenant Stone, Dr. Domville, and myself start for Kaizan to-morrow; the remainder of the officers and ship's company proceed to Kaizan on Monday. The four midshipmen, Messrs. Hammond, Lowden, Hind, and Robinson, accompany the officers and ship's company as far as Moscow, where they are to remain to study at the university. Mr. Sullivan, William Tanner (who was wounded), and a stoker, John Fitzgerald, and William Atterton (a man who attends on Mr. Sullivan), remain behind as sick quaters.

"Nothing can exceed the courteous treatment both officers and men have received since we have been at Odessa.—I have, &c., (Signed) "ALEXANDER HAMILTON, Lieut. R.N.

"Capt. Powell, H.M.S. Vesuvius."

Odessa letters of five days' later date state that an exchange has been arranged.

The latest movements of the Black Sea fleet are contained in a letter of the 15th ult., which states that the Fury, 6, paddle-sloop, Commander Tatham, returned to Constantinople on the afternoon of the 14th from Baltchik, where the combined fleets were then lying. Mrs. Giffard, widow of Captain Giffard, of the Tiger, arrived by her, after visiting the grave of her husband at Odessa.

The Vesuvius, 6, Commander Powell, got on shore off the Sulina mouth of the Danube, while chasing a emaster that she mistook for a gunboat. She was on shore twenty-six hours, but as the bottom was muddy she received no damage.

The Farions, Firebrand, and Inflexible were blockading the Danube. The Fury had towed into Constantinople two prizes which she took off the mouth of the Danube. The Bellerophon, London, Sidon, and another steamer were at Varna assisting in the disembarkation of the troops. The Banshee sailed on the 14th with the mail for the squadron.

The Fory, Caradoc, Cyclops, Sinooon, and Megara were lying at Constantinople on the 15th.

EXCHANGE OF THE PRISONERS OF ODESSA.

The following extract of a report of the Austrian Consul-General at Odessa, dated 8th (21) June, 1854, has been received at the Admiralty to-day:—

"A few days ago, the English steamer Vesuvius ran into these roads, and brought the wife of Captain Giffard, to whom General Osten-Sacken gave the permission, with a quarantine guardian, to visit the grave of her husband, who commanded the ill-fated steamer Tiger.

"H.M. the Emperor of Russia, not being aware of the death of that officer, had meantime ordered his sword to be restored, that he should be set free, and, with reference to the share he had taken in the battle of Navarin, to express his Majesty's regret at his being so severely wounded. At the same time his Majesty granted the exchange of eight English officers and 154 sailors for Russian prisoners of war, who had been taken by the united fleets on the Circassian coasts.

"As the officers of the straggled steamer Tiger consisted of 25 individuals, the selection of those who are to be set free will be made by lot.

"The midshipmen were all carried some days ago into the interior."

BLACKWELL'S BANNER.—An English tourist, Mr. John Blackwell, climbed, on the 15th instant, up the highest peak of the Wetterhorn (12,000 feet), upon which he planted an iron flag. His guides were Bahni, of Chamois, and Blauer, of Grindelwald, besides four chamois hunters.

TURKISH ARMY IN ASIA.

KARS.—The following are the names and ranks of the principal commanders of divisions and brigades.

The first is Mustafa Zarrif Pasha, Mushir and General-in-Chief of the Army and Military Governor of Kars. A few years ago he was a writer in a public office; he has never commanded a regiment or a brigade. His knowledge of tactics is consequently of a negative quality, and of strategy he must be altogether ignorant. He is a timid and indecisive character, and (it is reported) has obtained his present high rank by means which delicacy forbids me to describe.

2. Abdul Kerim Pasha, Ferik, or General of Division, Reis of the army, known only for his repeated failures in Syria whenever brought in contact with the rebel Arab force.

3. Koorschid Pasha (General Gnyon), Ferik, or General of Division, second in command, Reis and chief of the staff. His character for bravery and military talent is too well known to render it necessary to expatiate upon it for a moment.

4. Ziri Pasha, Ferik—commanding the Bashi-Bazouks at the outposts.

5. Hussien Pasha, Ferik—commanding the cavalry.

6. Tabir Pasha, Liva, or General of Brigade—commanding the Artillery. He was at Woolwich for four years. He speaks English well.

7. Ferhad Pasha, Liva (General Stein, a German). Said to be a talented officer. He is a renegade.

8. Kermety Ismail Pasha, Liva (an Hungarian)—commanding the Bashi-Bazouks, near the Archangel.

Lastly, Schahim Pasha (General Brimski), and Aslan Pasha (General Bystrowski), both Poles, Generals of Brigade, holding no command, but members of the Medjlis, or Military Council. There are many others, but of no note, the whole numbering 26.

ENGLISH COMMISSARIAT ON THE DANUBE.—Our commissariat has a hard task to play here. It is so tied down with orders, and so cramped by surveillance, that its energies are greatly diminished. It treats and contrives, where the French commissariat demands and takes; and in no department has the effect of our ill-judged economy been so painfully manifested as in the operations of that which is above all others essential to the progress of an army. Mr. Commissary-General Fidler has succeeded in entering into contracts with certain Armenians for a supply of 2,800 head of cattle a month. These Armenians have given satisfactory securities; but as their race is essentially Russian in feelings and sympathies, they will require to be well looked after in every way; for, as this country is situated just now, it would be difficult to feel us should the contractors fail in their undertakings.—Letter from Paris.

THE HERO OF SILISTRIA.—In his last despatch, Mussa Pasha spoke in high terms of the bravery of Captains Nasmyth and Butler, the two Englishmen, who were shot up in the place during the attacks by the Russians.

DESPATCHES FROM SIR C. NAPIER'S FLEET.

Her Majesty's ship Leopard, at Sea, 10th June, 1854—lat. 64 1 N. long. 22 41 E. At noon.

Sir,—In obedience to your orders of 5th May, 1854, I proceeded with the squadron under my command to examine, as far as practicable, the island of Aland, but not being able to procure a pilot, I found the hazard too great to proceed further in the execution of that duty; the reports of Captains Buckle and Giffard, numbered 1 and 2, will more fully inform you of the result and termination for the present, of that service.

Thence I proceeded up the Gulf of Bothnia, and I have now the honour herewith to transmit letters and papers, giving a detailed account of the squadron's proceedings up to the date hereof.

(Here follows the list of boats and officers engaged.)

From the hindrances the squadron have encountered in this service, it has spread over a greater space of time than I at first contemplated; the difficulties we experienced in disentangling the squadron, up to the 30th May, from the trees and fields of ice (of which we saw the last this morning), could not be surmounted in less time, or with less vigilance, by the officers in command, and that of the captain of my flag-ship, together with the constant perseverance and zeal evinced by Mr. George B. F. Swain, the master of the Leopard; which ship, to the credit of these two officers, has led the squadron from leaving the Aland Islands.—I have the honour, &c.

(Signed) HANWAY PARMELOE, Rear-Admiral.

Her Majesty's ship Valorous at sea, May 15, 1854.

Sir,—I have the honour to report to you that in consequence of thick foggy weather, I did not reach Grissellhamn until noon of the 6th instant.

On landing to communicate, I found that the commandant was absent at Stockholm, but the officer in command, Captain Ballby, very obligingly afforded me the information in his power, through the interpretation of Captain Philatelyn, the Director of the Electric Telegraph, which was to be in operation in about a week. No pilots for the Aland Islands could be obtained, and I believe they are not permitted to serve in our ships of war. The commandant observed that he believed that there were not more than 1,000 troops at Bomarsund, and that three hundred of them had lately been relieved by 500 from Russia; he did not appear to know anything about the gun-boats. The only information I could obtain relative to the Aland Islands was, that the inhabitants appeared to be well disposed towards the English, and that they had declined taking up arms to oppose us. He was anxious to know whether their post-boats, Bekers, would be intercepted by us. I replied it would not, unless it contained military despatches to or from the Russian government, but that I considered it advisable that a passport should be obtained from the Commander-in-Chief, to be produced when boarded by our cruisers.

2. I proceeded next morning in the direction of Warlo Island and Bomarsund, but in the afternoon found myself near some shoals, with ice on some of the patches; I, therefore, anchored to sound, and a fog soon came on which prevented my moving until noon on the following day. On standing to the southward on the 8th instant towards Warlo Island, I observed a barque running to the southward among the islands, and on my steering to cut her off, she bore up. I therefore stood in cautiously, and finding a good channel close to some rocks and small islands, I proceeded in, anchoring in fifteen fathoms, with Valorous in company, within a mile of the barque, in a good harbour formed by the Island of Sago and numerous others. On sending the boats, the barque was found to be aground and deserted, in a small cove. Russian colours and a paper found on board proved her to be the Princess of Uleaborg, of 346 tons, with a cargo of salt (part having been landed), from St. Ubes, bound to Abo. Observing a boat pulling away from her, I sent a gig which brought her back, with the master, mate, and three men, the ship's papers and private effects. I have sent her to Fare, with a prize crew of 11 men from the Valorous and Valture, in charge of the second master of this ship. The village, consisting of half a dozen cottages, was deserted, with the exception of an old woman. I left a paper in the largest house, on which I caused the master of the captured vessel to state that the English would not molest them, or touch their property, but would pay for anything they had in deposit of, and this was likewise explained to the woman. We also found a cutter, of about 55 tons, deserted and empty, called the Alford, which the master of the Princess said was a revenue vessel. The lampre having been got afloat and brought out during the night, I started the following afternoon with the Valture, towing the barque, and the cutter not being worth removing I directed her to be burnt.

3. While entering the anchor, three or four cables length from where we had been lying, the ship touched on a sunken rock.

4. The prize parcel company in the evening, and I proceeded with the Valture in the direction of Bomarsund. The master of the Princess stated that he had been three weeks at Marsund, and that the Russians had 500 troops there and 1,500 at different parts among the islands, but principally at Bomarsund. Some, he said, were in the vicinity of the spot at which we had captured his vessel, and several watch fires which were kept up during the night on the adjoining hills, which are rocky and covered with pine trees, supported the assertion, though we saw none.

Next morning, the Valture in company, I proceeded in the direction of Bomarsund, but found the channels very intricate between the innumerable small islands and rocks, which did not correspond with any of the charts, and which appear to be far from correct. Having no pilot, I proceeded cautiously by the eye and lead, the water being perfectly smooth. About two p.m. I observed a part of the works of Bomarsund, which proved to be two emplaced batteries, one of which appeared to have double loop holes below, and both with embrasures on the summit, with chimneys appearing between them, a sketch of which, as I observed it to be from our mastheads, was taken by Mr. Brondrick, mate, is enclosed herewith, the distance was about 5 miles from Bomarsund. I was led there by observing the mastheads of several vessels over the land. In standing cautiously towards them the ship touched ground once, but I succeeded in anchoring, in company with the Valture, about a mile from the vessels. We made out six or seven, and I sent in seven boats from the two ships; they found them deserted, six being small schooners, and the other was a brigantine, all empty and scarcely of any value. The boats brought out the brigantine and two schooners, the latter had the appearance of being fitted for gun-boats; I therefore burnt them. The others were apparently unseaworthy, except the brigantine; but as she was very badly found, and not fit for a voyage to England, and belonging apparently to the poorer people of the place, whose goodwill I consider it advisable to gain, I left her untouched. The lights of Bomarsund were visible above the trees of the adjoining island from the masthead, and with the assistance of a glass the sketch was necessarily made.

We started next morning without meeting with any opposition, only a few of the people of the village being seen at a distance. The channels between the innumerable rocks and islands are so intricate, and so different from the positions on the charts, that I considered it unsafe to proceed further south than Warlo without a pilot, nor could I find the channel track by which I entered; fortunately, the water was very smooth and clear, and the rocks bold, so that I could steer through them by the eye and lead, which generally indicated the approach to shoal water.

5. On the 12th instant I met the Odin, and received the rendezvous from her, since which I have been drawn away to the N.W. by chasing several vessels which proved to be Swedes and Norwegians.—I have, &c. (Signed) C. H. BOCKLE, Captain.

GEO. GIFFARD, Captain.

Sub-Enclosure No. 2, in Rear-Admiral Sir Charles Napier's Letter, No. 153.

Her Majesty's ship Valture, at sea, June 10, 1854.

Sir,—Having in obedience to your orders proceeded off Old Carlsby, on the morning of the 8th instant, the state of the weather obliged me to put to sea again; but, on the following day, the 7th, the wind moderating, we were able to return, and anchored abreast of Trullon Island, as near as we prudently could to the bar, in four fathoms water, the Odin in company.

The boats, as per enclosed list (1), were despatched under charge of the senior Lieutenant of the Valture, Mr. Charles A. Wileo, with signals and directions for his guidance, as per enclosed (Nos. 2 and 3).

It is my painful duty to report that they were not in force by the enemy, and hauled off, with the loss of the Valture's paddle-box boat.

Immediately on perceiving the attack, the reserve was ordered away, consisting of one paddle-box boat from each ship, accompanied by Captain Francis Scott, in his gig, who having gallantly volunteered his services, I readily entrusted with the charge of bringing the boats out of action, as I observed the fire of the enemy evidently proceeded from an overwhelming force.

Enclosed is Lieutenant Wileo's report (No. 4), as also the returns of killed, wounded, and missing from the two ships (5 and 6), and a copy of my letter to the Governor of Carlsby Gambia (7), and of my sailing orders (No. 8).

(Signed)

FREDERICK H. H. GLASSE, Captain.

Rear-Admiral J. Hanway Plumridge.

Her Majesty's ship Valture, off Gambia, Carlsby, June 8, 1854.

Sir,—I have the honour to report to you, that in obedience to your orders, I proceeded with the boats of her Majesty's ships Valture and Odin, armed in the margin, towards Gambia Carlsby.

Having anchored the boats in line abreast, their guns pointed towards the beach, I landed in the gig with a flag of truce, for the purpose of communicating with some persons whom I observed on the adjacent shore. The flag was duly received, and I addressed one who styled himself the burgomaster, demanding that all the property of the Emperor of Russia should be given up to me, and that on this condition, in compliance with Admiral Plumridge's notice, the town and private property would be respected. Not being able to obtain a satisfactory answer, and assistance in communicating with the Governor being denied me, re-embarked, and directing Lieutenant Carrington to proceed ahead in a boat of light draught to sound, ordered the boats to weigh, and form in two lines abreast, but before this was executed the enemy's fire, from storerooms on our right, armed with field pieces and musketry, which was promptly returned by our guns and small arms.

The enemy being in great force and rapidly increasing—their position well chosen, and protected among wood and houses, behind which they were completely concealed, and from which they poured a most destructive fire—I deemed it expedient to withdraw the boats, and accordingly made the signal for the general recall.

I did not, however, accomplish this without the loss of the paddle-box boat of this ship, which was destroyed by the enemy's fire; and it is with sorrow I contemplate the severe loss of officers and men we have sustained. Lieutenant Carrington, of the Odin, fell while in the act of carrying out my orders. His boat, a cutter, was the object of the enemy's first fire, by which she had eleven struck down, and gave us first notice of their proximity. Mr. N. J. Murphy, mate, in charge of the Valture's paddle-box boat, I observed encouraging his crew with great gallantry. Mr. C. P. H. Montague (mate), Odin, I am sorry to say, fell mortally wounded while most gallantly doing his duty in the paddle-box boat of that ship. I have to add that the conduct of every officer and man was most exemplary. I cannot close this report without mentioning my appreciation of the cool and prisoner's conduct of Lieutenants Menden and Follows, who commanded the other two boats with guns.—I am, &c.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

"FIELD" OFFICE, SUNDAY, 4 A.M.

THE BALTIC.

Mr. Pagan, a Sheffield cutler, forwarded about a fortnight since, through Mr. Osborne, a case of razors for Sir Charles Napier, as a mark of admiration. In writing to Mr. Osborne the donor says—"Allow me to beg of you to forward the accompanying jacket as soon as convenient to the Baltic, and believe me we heartily pray in this good old town that the British flag may be soon planted on the towers of St. Petersburg, and that the Sheffield razors may be one of the thousand comforts the gallant Admiral shall enjoy after his successful bombardment of the Russian capital."

The gallant Admiral acknowledged the gift in the following terms:—

"Duke of Wellington, Barro Sound,
June 20th, 1854.

"Sir,—I am very much obliged to you for the razors you were good enough to send me. It was not before they were wanted, as mine are none of the best. Every morning I shave, I shall think of you and the good people of Sheffield.

"I remain yours very truly,
"CHARLES NAPIER.

It is with gratification that we hear that her Majesty has expressed a wish that Mrs. Giffard should have the highest rate of pension (200*l.*) permitted by the regulations, and that she should have apartments at Hampton Court Palace. INSURRECTION IN GREECE.

SALONICA, JUNE 13.

The French steamer Solon, Captain Baron Roussin, arrived here the day before yesterday from Dafne, a port near Mount Athos. It brings news that in consequence of the attitude assumed by the new Greek Cabinet, Karatassos had capitulated to Baron Roussin, with all his men, on the following conditions, but without the intervention of the Turks:—

1. Djami Kuratassos and his followers, whom he stated numbered 600 men, give up their arms and baggage into the hands of Baron Roussin.

2. They are to be embarked at Dafne, on the 13th of June, either on board the French steamer, or by a transport, and to be taken to Calais in the island of Euboea.

3. On their arrival there, Karatassos, his men, and the arms and baggage, are to be placed in the hands of the Greek authorities.

COURT OF BANKRUPTCY, SATURDAY.

IN RE MR. C. J. MATTHEWS, THE COMEDIAN—JUDGMENT.—Mr. Commissioner Fane, in giving judgment in the case of Mr. Charles James Matthews, the comedian, lessee of the Lyceum Theatre, said, that the application to that Court by Mr. Matthews, the eminent actor, was unopposed; and not only so, but was signed by nearly the whole of his creditors, who most respectfully asked him (the Commissioner) to award him an immediate, as well as a high class certificate. This was signed by Mr. Alcock and the Marquis of Abercorn, and other creditors for sums of hundreds of pounds, as well as by creditors whose debts did not amount to 20*l.* When the matter first came before him he (the Commissioner) knew so little of it that he considered it right to defer it in order that he might carefully read over the papers; and having done so, he was now happy to say that he could comply with the wishes of the creditors and give Mr. Matthews a first class certificate. (Cheering in the Court.) As far as he (the Commissioner) could see, Mr. Matthews had not been guilty of any dishonesty or extravagance. He hoped he would not again place new creditors at the mercy of the old. If he (the Commissioner) thought such would be the case, he would not grant him an hour's protection; for he looked upon such a course as a great commercial crime. The learned gentleman concluded by saying, I give Mr. Matthews a first-class certificate with pleasure, and I hope his future career will be more successful than his past exertions have been (cheers).

The Solicitor for Mr. Matthews asked the Commissioner to allow his client a copy of the judgment, as it would be a consolation to him for all his past troubles.

The learned Commissioner immediately assented, and Mr. Matthews left the Court amidst the congratulations of a large number of his friends.

OLYMPIC.—A smartly Anglicised edition of the French vaudeville Mon Fiole, by Palgrave Simpson, was produced at this theatre on Thursday evening, under the title of "Heads or Tails." Robinson has a character in the farce which he gives with irresistible humour and breadth. He appears as an envelling, saffling lover of the young lady, who is perpetually suffering from a cold in the head. The novelty was very favourably received by a fashionable auditory.

THE ADELPHI THEATRE has produced an excellent bustling farce called Waiting for an Omnibus in Louther Arcade on a rainy day. The scene is perfect, and the acting full of fun. On Wednesday next we are promised an adaptation from the popular drama of La Joie fait Peur by permission of the authors, Madame Girardin. Webster, Madame Celeste, Miss Woolgar, Miss Mary Koeley, have parts. On Monday next will be produced another version of "The Courier of Lyons."

The Prince will arrive in Cambridge in time to attend the discourses of Professor Willis on the "Buildings of Cambridge," which will be delivered in the Senate-house, or on the spots to be alluded to. His Royal Highness will return to London the same evening.

RUSSIAN SCHOOLS.—The three annual exhibitions at this school have been awarded to Mr. Bowen, Mr. Fisher, and Mr. Tyrrell.

SOUTHAMPTON.—Orders have been sent by Government to the authorities here to prepare conveyance immediately to the East for 92 cases of swords for Omer Pasha's cavalry, and 2,000 barrels of bull cartridges.

SCREW STEAMERS FOR THE AUSTRALIAN TRADE.—Models of four immense screw-steamers have been constructed for a mercantile firm in this town. The vessels will be upwards of four thousand tons register, and will form a passenger line between here and Australia. These are exclusive of the six steamers to be built for Messrs. Gibbs, Bright, and Co.—Liverpool Albion.

CHATHAM.—The 35th Regiment of Foot assembled on the 17th and 28th of June at Chatham, at a quarter before nine o'clock, and were marched to the Royal Engineer stores, where they were supplied with scaling ladders, and proceeded to Chatham lines. Here they were instructed in the best mode of ascending fortifications by Captain Ord, Royal Engineers, under the direction of Colonel Jones, Commandant and Director of the Royal Sappers and Miners Establishment at that station. The men appeared much pleased with their instruction, and performed their duties with great spirit and rapidity. It is supposed the 35th are now undergoing instruction preparatory to the grand attack and siege operations which are to take place on the lines at Chatham about the middle of July.

LIVERPOOL, SATURDAY.

(BY ENGLISH AND IRISH MAGNETIC TELEGRAPH.)

The steamer sailed at noon to-day for New York, with seventy passengers. The steam-ship Bahiana sailed at two p.m. on her first voyage to Brazil, with thirty-one passengers. The Admiralty agent has advertised for two steamers, each to carry six hundred tons of provisions and two hundred men to Valparaiso.

LATEST BETTING.—Liverpool Cup, 5 to 1 agst Hungerford (taken); 6 to 1 agst Heapy (offered); 12 to 1 agst Indian Warrior (taken); 12 to 1 agst Dr. O'Toole; 15 to 1 agst Umhriel, Lady Bird, and Ulster; do. offered agst Early Bird, Kingston and Typee; 20 to 1 offered agst any other. GOODWOOD STAKES—10 to 1 Heapy (offered); 12 to 1 Muscovite and Diana (taken); 15 to 1 agst Adine and Dr. O'Toole (offered).

SHARE MARKET.—Dull, and closed flat. Midlands, 67½; Dovers, 19½. Cotton market firm but tame; 7,000 bales sold.

RACING.

"On the green, green turf."

SUR.—The Newmarket, Worcester, and Lancashire meetings are before us.

I FANCY a fresh success of Bonnie Mori will be ushered in on Tuesday next, and without the aid of his friend Dr. Cooke. The Chester, at this moment, appears to be the darkest of the dark. Unless the Boarding School Miss filly, or one of Lord Exeter's, can furnish the winner, I leave the matter, as beyond my ken, with the Newmarket "Broker."

Worcester is decidedly looking up both in the quantity and quality of its sport. We have now as many races in one day as formerly occupied the whole meeting. For the Worcester-shire Stakes no less than forty-four horses have accepted. Were not the times so "out of joint" this should be a good betting race; at any rate, we shall have a pretty large field. At 7st 4lb this should be within Lough Bawn's capability; but I doubt his going. Several old horses are in at light weights, the most likely being Titherstone, Sleeping Partner, Calot, Jack Leeming, and Waterfall. Aribbas and Knight of St. George head the list of 3-year-olds—I prefer the latter. Hope, Battery, and Whalebone are well in as 4-year-olds. St. Clair and Punchbox appear, in my humble opinion, to be the best of the light weights. St. Clair and Knight of St. George must be my selection, with Whalebone for a cock-bait.

The Trial Stakes would seem a good thing for Domino, but he has also an engagement at Lancaster. Let me, therefore, take a venture with Red Rose. The Two-year-old Stakes may bring out Helena, Rose, and Gossip, in the order named.

For the Witley Court Handicap, my inclination tends towards Hazelnut and John Ball.

Vestige and Ited Raso will probably dispute the Selling Stakes.

The Flying Stakes, half-a-mile for all ages, will be sure to furnish a pretty set-to. So much depends on the getting off that the endeavour to pick out the winner becomes trebly hazardous. Antonia, Domino, and Master Slender, must run forward.

The two-year old Cinicina should also have a chance. For the Handicap Plate mile and a half, with an entry of twenty-seven, I can see nothing better than Lurley.

1st July, 1854. Yours, TOBY PAPER.

RAILWAYS AND TELEGRAPHS.

THE DANUBE.—A telegraphic communication along the whole line of the Danube is about to be established, and M. Duval, a French engineer, has arrived, to carry the measure into execution.

ALEXANDRIA, June 19.—The railway in the direction of Suez has been begun by a branch line of about three miles, which is to be laid between the main line near Cairo, and the Viceroy's residence at Abbasseych, which is on the road to Suez.

PRUSSIA.—This Government has given directions for laying down six new telegraphic lines for internal communication. One of these will probably extend from Königsberg to Memel.

RAILWAY CARS IN AMERICA.—The Springfield Republican, describing some cars just built in that city, for the New York and Boston express line, says:—"They are of the length of the cars usually having seats for sixty passengers, and they are so constructed that, without any fussy machinery, a man can stretch his whole length and sleep in them. They are all furnished with Clemens' ventilators, and a man will accompany each train, whose business will be to look after the ventilators, and to secure their benefits to the passengers. The cars cost 2,400 dolrs. each, weigh 14 tons apiece, and are furnished with double floors, with an intermediate layer of shavings to keep out the noise. Each car has at each end a double door—that is, an outside door, a hall, and an inside door—so that there can be no gush of dust or cold air let in upon the passengers. They are to run without change from New York to Boston."

On the Paris Bourse the Three per Cents. closed yesterday at 73*l.* 10*s.* for the end of the month, and the Four-and-a-Half per Cents. at 98*l.*

Vienna advices state that Baron Meyendorff has received his letters of recall; but it is not believed that diplomatic relations with Russia will be broken off at Vienna in consequence.

THE BALTIC.

The Stockholm Aftonsblatt produces extracts of Finnish letters and journals, wherein it is stated that the English squadron in the Bothnian Gulf has contrived to make a whiling prisoner of one Ananias Michaelson, reputed the best pilot on the Finland coast. He was taken in what the journal calls a "tar hunt," and, according to the assertions of the Uleaborg seamen, has rendered great service to our vessels.

ELLSINORE, JUNE 22.—Hauled out of harbour—The British steam gun-boat Otter, for the Gulf of Finland, after repairing here.

(BY ELECTRIC TELEGRAPH.)

The Sveenska Tidning confirms the report of an attack on Bomarsund on the 21st.

The bombardment began at five in the evening, and by seven the masked battery was dismounted and abandoned, and at ten o'clock p.m. the Russian magazines were in a blaze. The English lost three men.

The Russians fought obstinately: their artillery were well supported by rifles.

One bomb burst on the deck of the Hecla. Midshipman Lucas threw another overboard before it burst.

THE WHITE SEA.

"ORDERS," says the Moniteur, "have just been sent to the commanders of the allied squadrons in the White Sea to establish from 1st August next an effective blockade of the Russian ports in that Sea. The blockade has hitherto been delayed, in order to leave time to traders to terminate the operations which they might have commenced before the declaration of war."

The French war brig Beamanolt has arrived in the Downs from Cherbourg to join the allied squadron operating against the Russians in the White Sea. The French transport Indefatigable has also arrived en route for the Baltic.

THE BLACK SEA.

A LETTER FROM SHUMLA states that the auxiliary troops, in concert with the fleet, and under the personal command of Marshal St. Arnaud, are certainly to undertake an expedition against the Crimea. Some 200 transports are being prepared in consequence at Varna and at Balisebek.

According to the Lloyd of Vienna, the Russians have rendered the Strait of Kerch, leading into the Sea of Azoff, inaccessible to the ships of war, by sinking 32 large barges laden with stones.

On the 20th and 23rd of June the Turkish vanguard, consisting of 25,000 men, attacked the Russian rear-guard, and drove it beyond Trajan's Wall.

The details of the battle are wanting.

Marshal Paskiewitch reports to his sovereign, that having undertaken to push forward a grand reconnaissance in the direction of the village Calopetri against the fortress of Silistria, he had placed himself on the 9th at the head of 31 battalions of infantry, of 32 squadrons of cavalry, with 800 Cossacks, and twelve batteries of artillery. When he came in front of the fort Abdul Medyid a cannon ball fired from the fortress, falling at his horse's feet, brought down the animal, and caused its rider to receive a severe contusion. In spite of the violence of the shock, the marshal remained on horseback to the end of the combat, but having returned to his tent his pains were agonising. He placed himself in the hands of the surgeons, and everything indicates that for some weeks to come he will be unable to sit in the saddle.

THE AUSTRIAN FLEET.—It is stated in a Vienna letter of the 25th, in the Post Anpt Gazette, that orders had been sent off by telegraph to Trieste that all the Austrian vessels of war ready to put to sea should leave for the East and that the frigate Venus had sailed at once.

VARNA, June 8.—The Earl of Errol has been left at Varna under arrest. I wondered at seeing Lady Errol's tent standing the morning we marched; but it was kept so close by the regiment that few knew the cause, and even now it is not generally known, so I can say no more about it. I am going to ride into Varna to-morrow, and shall finish this letter there, if there is any chance of sending it off.—Morning Post.

THE WAR.—PREPARATIONS AT HOME.

NAVAL.—Orders have been issued from the Admiralty for the launch of another 90 gun ship, to be called the Exmouth, from Devonport Dockyard, on Wednesday the 12th proximo. The King of Portugal, the Duke of Oporto, and other distinguished personages are expected to be present.

MILITARY.—Five more regiments of infantry, two regiments of cavalry, and a field battery of artillery, have been ordered to Turkey.

HENLEY ROYAL REGATTA.

This great regatta opened on Thursday. Although the number of races was scarcely equal to a first day's average, the supply of sport amply compensated for any deficiency, besides possessing the additional charm of determining the award of two of the valuable prizes, instead of confining the racing as heretofore too much to trial heats. There were features of lively interest in the programme shared in common by all classes of rowing men, while the character of the entries and brilliancy of the assemblage proved that the prestige of this most agreeable reunion is undiminished.

The sports commenced at two o'clock with the races for the Presentation Cup for local scullers.

FIRST HEAT.

Mr. E. J. Giles, Henley t
Mr. H. Seargent, Henley 0

Mr. Brocklebank was entered, but did not go. The course was, as usual, from the Island up to the Stewards' Stand.

Mr. Yates, a very capital sculler, took his station on the Bucks side, and they went off somewhat irregularly, but soon got to work excellently, and maintained a smart contest for a quarter of a mile, when Mr. Giles went away, and won as he pleased.

SECOND HEAT.

Mr. T. Piper, Caversham t
Mr. F. Bonham, Wargrave 0

Both men rowed very excellently. They were together for a few strokes, and then Piper drew ahead, and continued to lead, winning easily, although his opponent certainly deserves much credit for his game.

The Diamond Challenge Sculls and Silver Presentation Cup.

FIRST HEAT.

Mr. H. H. Playford, Wandle Club t
Mr. E. G. Dilton, Argonauts 0

The Diamond Challenge Sculls race was a matter of much excitement, and occasioned considerable speculation. Mr. Playford was the favourite of the boat, and was freely backed at small odds against his adversary. The takers were, however, very ready, and as Mr. Dilton had trained under T. Cole, the champion of the Thames, and was known in his trial to have done the distance in a very short time, he was looked upon as an awkward customer to his opponent, and so he really turned out. He took the Bucks shore, and although they started very evenly, dashed away with a slight lead, which he maintained for two hundred yards, and then, menaced by his opponent's coming almost scull and scull, again drew a slight lead, and a most determined struggle followed. Playford, opposite Remenham, was again scull and scull with his opponent, and then both shot towards the poplars; Playford nearing the point more than his length in advance of the other, who then injudiciously rowed too near the point, but had it been otherwise was evidently too much exhausted to have continued on with much chance of success, and Mr. Playford rowed the straight course to the finish, winning by three lengths.

SECOND HEAT.

Mr. R. C. Galton, 1st Trinity, Cambridge t
Mr. W. F. Short, New College, Cambridge 0

These gentlemen had their friends and partisans as in the previous heat, and Mr. Galton had clearly the choice, which was not ill bestowed, for the race was hollow enough. Short took the Berkshire shore, and his opponent the Bucks. They started well, but Galton almost immediately took the lead, and at Remenham was so much in advance that he rowed into his opponent's water, and finally won by four lengths.

FINAL HEAT.

The respective merits of Messrs. Galton and Playford were again discussed, and the friends of both were so confident that slight odds were given on each, according to the fancy of the backers.

Mr. Playford, Wandle t
Mr. Galton, 1st Trinity, Cambridge 0

It was extremely unfortunate that the race was put an end to in the middle by a foul. Galton took the Oxford side, his opponent the other, and both looked very confident. Mr. Playford took the lead by dint of real good rowing, but when about half a mile had been done, they were almost scull and scull. Again Mr. Galton began to make a spurt to go past his opponent, and considering that the latter was out of his course, rowed into him, and consequently lost the race.

Four-oared Race for the Steward's Challenge Cup.

Pembroke College, Oxford t

Mr. Hayward, stroke, ...

Twisdon, steerer, ...
LADY MARGARET CREW.

Mr. Shore, ...
Mr. Roy, ...

Mr. Stock, ...
Mr. Wright, ...

Catey, steerer, ...

This was a magnificent race. Cambridge had slightly the preference, and the greatest anxiety was manifested as the time of starting approached. Cambridge won the choice of stations, and certainly took the wrong side on going to the Berks shore. The start was beautiful and wide apart. They continued at the most extraordinary labour all the way down to the poplars, where there was scarcely a choice. Then Oxford made a beautiful shoot, and although the others rowed in the most gallant style, Oxford won by three quarters of a length. The winners rowed in a boat built by Messrs. Searle; the losers in one by Mr. King, of Oxford.

SECOND DAY.—FRIDAY.

THE FINAL HEAT FOR THE PRESENTATION PRIZE FOR THE SCULLERS.

FAIR-OARED RACE FOR SILVER GORLET PRESENTATION PRIZE.

First Heat.

Mr. Potter and Mr. Playford (Wandle Club) 0

Second Heat.

Mr. Craven, ...
Mr. Swaine, ... (St. John's College, Oxford) 1

This was a walk over, Messrs. Hooke and Mellish, one of Worcester, and the other of Pembroke, not going.

Final Heat.

THE LADIES' CHALLENGE PLATE FOR EIGHT-OARED BOATS.

Oxford (Pembroke College), Messrs. Crowther, Norton, Harrington, Walker, Gellings, Gellings, Humphreys, Andrews (stroke), Dolby (steerer) 0

Cambridge drew away in gallant style, with nearly three-quarters of a length in advance, and in spite of the beautiful rowing of their opponents held it up to Remenham, where the Oxonians came up, and an almost neck-and-neck race occurred to the Poplars, where the Cantabs put on a dashing spurt and won—the Cambridge's coxswain, at the time of coming in, being exactly level with the bowman in the Oxford boat. The time of this race was only 7 minutes 55 seconds.

VISITORS' CHALLENGE CUP.

Cambridge (Lady Margaret), Messrs. H. Snow, H. Roy, E. W. Stock, J. Wright (stroke), R. Cayley (steerer) 1

Henley Boat Club—Messrs. A. Ives, S. Cole, F. Parker, E. J. Giles (stroke), Liddle (steerer) 0

Henley took the Bucks shore, but their opponents soon out-rowed them, winning by three lengths.

GRAND CHALLENGE CUP FOR EIGHT-OARED BOATS.
Cambridge (1st Trinity Boat Club) t
Oxford (Wandle Club) 0

The race was hollow, compared with the preceding one, Cambridge, with the Berks side, taking the lead, and winning by two or three lengths.

THE RANELAGH YACHT CLUB.—At a meeting held at the Swan Tavern, Battersea, on Wednesday evening last, a club was formed to be called the Ranelagh Yacht Club, limiting its members to 50, to afford the owners of small yachts of the maximum tonnage of seven tons an opportunity of testing their powers on the River Thames, above bridge, as it is many years since the Royal Thames Yacht Club ceased to sail their matches over that course. The meeting was well attended, and after the preliminaries of selecting a chairman, business was commenced by the proposed rules being read, which were unanimously agreed to. The attention of the meeting was then drawn to the selection of their officers, when Mr. Tomleson, R.N., one of the few survivors of the Victory battles, was unanimously elected commodore; Mr. E. Guest, vice-commodore; Mr. E. Dunbar, hon. secretary; and other gentlemen to fill the usual offices of the club.

BELFAST, June 28.—Arrived—The Magician, Robert Hall, Esq., owner, last from Gibraltar, after a Mediterranean cruise.

YACHTS FOR SALE.—The Gauntlet, 66 tons; Antagonist, 25 tons; and several superior pleasure boats; also a new vessel of 101 tons O.M., of light draught of water. For further particulars apply to Smith and Theobald, 115, Leadenhall-street.

ADVANCE ON CRONSTADT.—BOMBARDMENT OF BOOMERSUND.

(BY SUBMARINE AND ELECTRIC TELEGRAPH.)

DANTZIC, Thursday Evening.

Her Majesty's paddle steamers Hecla, 6, Captain W. H. Hall; Valorous, 16, Captain Buckle; Odin, 16, Captain Scott; attacked Boomersund, inflicted great damage, and burned buildings in principal fort; seven wounded only.

Sir Charles Napier's fleet is at anchor 25 miles from Cronstadt.

Basilik, 6, paddle steamer, Commander Hon. F. Egerton, has arrived here from the fleet.

THE MURDER AT ESHER.

Eleven o'clock on Thursday was appointed for the examination before the magistrates of Mary Ann Brough, for the wilful murder of six of her children.

The spacious ground floor of the Bear posting and commercial house (Mrs. Storey's), opposite Esher-green, was fitted up as the justice-room.

The magistrates on the bench were—Mr. J. W. Spicer, Major Terry, Mr. Rosson, Captain Brown, Mr. Westcott, and Mr. Sharp.

Sir Edward Cust, the Controller of the Royal Household, was present to watch the case; and Mr. P. W. Lovett, of Guildford, attended on the part of the Crown; and Mr. Everett, of Ipsom, appeared for the prisoner.

Mr. Biddlecombe, the chief superintendent of police, and Mr. Inspector Murtell, drove up to the house with the prisoner in their charge. She alighted from the vehicle with a firm step, looked at several of the persons standing in front of the doorway, whom she knew, and then passed hurriedly into the premises. The prisoner, in appearance, is not at all prepossessing. She seems to be about 42 or 43 years old, about 5 feet 6 inches high, and something rather peculiar in her walk. She was dressed in black, and carried in her hand a small wicker basket. She was shown into a private room, where she remained for some time. She asked for a glass of wine, and after that for a glass of brandy.

Mr. Everett said that a warrant was now in the hands of Mr. Biddlecombe, their officer, which had been issued by Mr. Carter, the coroner, for the commitment of the prisoner on a charge of wilful murder; be therefore submitted to the Bench that, as to many witnesses had been examined as to cause the coroner to issue that warrant, there was no necessity to go over the same ground again, or to call any fresh witnesses.

Mr. Lovett said that he appeared there that day on behalf of the Crown, and had some additional evidence to offer beyond that given before the coroner. He wished to give the prisoner every chance of making her defence.

Mr. Everett.—My opinion is that the prisoner is not at the present time in a fit state to be examined.

The court was then cleared of strangers, and the Bench, after consulting, ordered the door to be reopened, when

Mr. Spicer (the Chairman of the Bench) said, they had come to the conclusion that it would be unnecessary to reopen this truly unhappy case.

Mr. Biddlecombe inquired whether the warrant he held from the coroner was to be put in force at once, and whether he was to take the prisoner to Horsefonger-Jane Gaol.

The Bench replied in the affirmative.

MURDER OF AN INFANT BY THE MOTHER, AND SUICIDE OF THE MURDERESS.

On Thursday morning, about six o'clock, the greatest excitement and consternation prevailed in the neighbourhood of Brandon-street, Walworth, in consequence of the wife of Mr. Gast, milkman, of No. 13 in that street, having been discovered by the latter, together with her infant (a girl about four months old), drowned in the water-butt. Dr. Marsh, of the Kent road, promptly attended, and used every endeavour to restore animation, but without success. The mother of the infant was, it appears, a well-conducted, sober, and industrious woman; but having been in ill-health ever since the birth of the child, that circumstance is supposed to have preyed upon her mind, and produced despondency, which had prompted her to the perpetration of the heinous murder of her child, and the subsequent destruction of her own life.

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE.—On Thursday morning, at ten o'clock, a respectable female, who refused to give her name, attempted self-destruction by drowning herself in the Thames, at Blackfriars. Just as she was in the act of sliding a waterman passing jumped out of his boat into the river and saved her life.

INTREPID CONDUCT OF A LONDON FIRE BRIGADESMAN.—On Thursday morning two youths, named William and Watson, residing near Harkside, were bathing in a very dangerous part of the river near Southwark-bridge, when one got into a hole, and his companion endeavored to save him. For some time the boys were carried along with the tide, and were in the act of being sucked under a barque, when G. Legg, belonging to the fire steam-heating engine near the spot, stripped off his coat and waistcoat, jumped into the boat and succeeded in saving the lives of both. This makes the fifth time the same party has been instrumental in saving life.

OUTWARD MAILES.—Her Majesty's government have postponed the departure of the Canada from Southampton, with the India, China, and Australian mails, from the 4th until the 6th of July. The Marseilles portion of the mails will accordingly be made up in London on the 10th instead of the 8th.

CALLAO, MAY 24.—The French steamer La Porte, 60; and Obligado, 14; and British ship President, 50; and Virago (s), 6; sailed on the 17th inst. for a cruise. They are in search of Russians.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

THURSDAY.—LONDON.—On the order of the day for their lordships' going into committee on the Legislative Council of Canada Bill.

The Earl of Darnley moved, as an amendment, that the further consideration of the bill be postponed for the present session.

The amendment was negatived by a majority of 63 to 39.

The bill then passed through committee; and Their lordships adjourned.

COMMONS.—In the morning sitting, on the order of the day for the house resolving itself into committee on the Common Law Procedure Bill.

Sir E. PEARCE moved an instruction to the committee, that they be empowered to extend the provisions of the act to her Majesty's supreme courts in India.

After some observations from Mr. Philip and Mr. W. Williams, the other members, Sir E. PEARCE withdrew his motion.

The house then went into committee, and the remainder of the sitting was occupied in the discussion of the clause in disposing of which considerable progress was made before the adjournment at 11 o'clock.

In the evening sitting,

In reply to a question from Mr. Lucas,

The Chancellor of the Exchequer said he was not prepared to bring any bill in accordance with Mr. Milner Gibson's resolution in reference to the stamp duty on newspapers.

In reply to a question from Lord D. Stuart,

Lord J. Russell said that information had been received by the Government that a convention had been signed by the Austrian Government and the Porte in reference to the occupation of the Principality by Austrian troops.

If the Russians voluntarily retreated the Austrians would occupy their places, and if they refused to do so voluntarily the Austrian troops would assist in turning them out.

In reply to a question from Sir H. Willoughby,

Lord J. Russell said that England was not party to the treaty between Austria and Turkey.

The adjourned debate on the Oxford University Bill was resumed by Mr. Heywood moving the following clause:—"From and after the first day of Michaelmas Term, 1854, it shall not be necessary for any person, upon taking the degree of bachelor in arts, law, medicine, or music, in the University of Oxford, to make or subscribe any declaration or take any oath, save the oath of allegiance, or an equivalent declaration of allegiance, any law or statute to the contrary notwithstanding."

Mr. Heywood moved as an amendment that the clause be read a second time that day six months.

The House divided, and the clause was carried by a majority of 233 to 79.

Mr. J. Phillimore moved the following clause:—"That from and after the 1st day of December next no member of the University shall be allowed, on account of his rank, to pass his examination or take his degree sooner than another undergraduate."

The clause was agreed to.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer moved a clause, the object of which was to modify the clause carried on a former evening by Mr. Roundell Palmer (for the protection of the college interests of public schools), so far as to exempt from its operation fellowships and studentships.

Mr. Roundell Palmer opposed the motion; and, after a lengthened discussion,

The House divided, and the clause of the Chancellor was negatived by a majority of 131 to 129.

This decision of the Government by a majority of ten was loudly cheered by the opposition benches.

The bill was then passed.

Mr. M. Gibson, on going into committee of supply, called attention to the proceedings of Admiral Plunkett at Ulcaborg and Brastadt, in the Gulf of Bothnia, and asked for explanations from the First Lord of the Admiralty relating thereto.

Sir J. Graham said the officers had only obeyed their instructions, and if blame attached anywhere it must lie to the Government. The whole of the dispatches, however, would appear in the Gazette of Friday evening, and then it would be seen that the officers and men had conducted themselves in the most admirable manner, and made Russia feel that war with England could not be carried on with impunity.

Lord J. Stuart called attention to the recent changes in the Ministry, and alluded to the disappointment of the recent changes in the Ministry.

Edmund appointed as War Minister, when the opportunity so palpably presented itself, and when the whole country were expecting it.

This reference to the noble lord elicited loud cheering from all parts of the house.

No member of the Government rose to reply, and

The committee of supply was then postponed.

The remaining business was then disposed of, and the house adjourned.

FIDELITY.—The House went into committee on the Divorce and Matrimonial Causes Bill, the clauses of which were agreed to with some verbal amendments.

The Bishop of Exeter moved a clause with a view to prohibit a wife divorced on the ground of adultery from marrying again during the lifetime of her husband.

The committee divided, and the clause was negatived by a majority of 25 to 19.

The House resumed, and the report was ordered to be received on Monday.

The Legislative Council (Canada) Bill was read a third time and passed.

COMMISSIONS.—In reply to a question from Colonel Glynne, Mr. St. Herbert said that militia depots were considered in the same light as barracks, and as such were exempted from local taxation.

In reply to a question from Colonel Glynne, the Lord Privy Seal said that the intention of the Government to issue a bill for the employment of the Scotch militia during the autumn, as it would be only interfering with the rural occupations of the population.

In the order of the day for the House going into committee of supply, Sir J. Lubbock once more drew attention to the withdrawal from the estimates of the salary of the Bishop of New Zealand, and some explanations were given, but terminating in a declaration from the Government, that it did not think it could place the salary of the bishop again upon the estimates.

The House then went into committee of supply, and Lord Russell entered into some explanations relative to the educational estimates, showing the progress which had been made during the past year, and the response which had been made to the public.

Mr. Mill thought that Government interference in matters of education ought to be limited with great jealousy, and, whatever to any increase in the estimates, proper of that which was submitted to the committee should be reduced from £25,000 to £15,000.

Mr. Glynne said, that nothing in the way in which the question had been handled, it had gone to the credit of the House, for which the noble Earl was most anxious to be a full ratifier for educational purposes.

Mr. Mill withdrew his amendment, on the understanding that a committee of inquiry would be appointed on the subject in the next session of Parliament.

The vote was agreed to as the vote of £133,610 for the national system of education in Ireland.

Some other votes were agreed to, after which the House resumed, and the report was ordered to be brought up on Monday.

Sir J. Young introduced the Hospitals and Infirmarys (Ireland) Bill, and adjourned.

In a former number we gave an illustration of the Pizza Vertical Turbine Cutter and Rust Slicer; we now present our readers with an interesting example of the patent application filed to the patent machine, with a description of the mechanism, feeling that the various human-headed apparatuses are not as a playing before agitators and lawyers in expectation of milking of its inventor, and securing the end which gives it value to breeders and feeders. As the Yorks program is attended, it really embodies "a novel principle of construction," and is one of the most important social inventions of the century.

The probability under present circumstances, that we shall be called upon to export to parts of the Continent exposed to the effects of the Eastern rupture. Russia alone has large stocks of grain, but nothing in the way of supply can be expected in that quarter, and we shall be thrown upon our own resources, and this, too, with a very scanty supply from our own ports and the country. Less than 2,000 quarters of wheat have been reported coastside, and the foreign arrivals were small. Notwithstanding, business has

TURF TALK.
"The chosen sport of a great and a free people."
OUR SAISON KING.
THE July Meeting at Newmarket has clashed with that of the "Faithful Cate" of Worcester. Not that the latter suffered by the collision, for the patricians of the turf would scarcely have cared to join what, till within a few years, was considered a mere country meeting; and still less was it damaged by a contrast with the courtly gathering at head quarters. On the opening day at Newmarket the sport consisted of a Handicap Plate of £70, bringing out five horses, and the famous July Stakes, for which three went to the post. At Worcester we had five races, including the Worcestershire Stakes, whose value alone considerably exceeded £500, and attracting the large field of sixteen to compete for the prize.
The "July" must have a little more vitality infused in its veins, or, despite its sound diaphragm in the shape of the brace of large races for two-year-olds, it will expire from sheer inanition. The attendance on Tuesday, as might have been expected, was select and scanty—in every respect a fit match for the sport. The success of Bonnie Morn was looked on as a certainty, and his superiority scared away all thought of opposition. Out of an entry of three dozen, two only were found bold enough to face him. Twilight fled the morn, and Simony shivered the day. Sandboy preferred being jolly in his stable at Canaby, while the redoubtable Dirk Hatterack probably reserved himself for mischief in the North. The loonnie grey-colt with the high odds of 10 to 1 on him, entered in alone, thus securing for his fortunate owner the tidy sum of 1,070 sovereigns. Redempton saved her stake; but poor Nutriment achieved nothing for himself but a beating, though he gave an additional proof, if any were wanting, of how staunch a sportsman his noble master is—Lord Exeter never declining battle when he possesses the shadow of a chance of victory. Casting a retrospective glance over ten years, we find the successful colts in the July and Chesterfield Stakes have furnished but two Derby winners—the Flying Dutchman, who carried off the July Stakes in 1843, and Tealington, who did the like good office with the Chesterfield in 1850. It is true that Cosack, at 6 to 4 on him, obtained only third place for the July of 1846, but that incident, we fear, holds out but a slender slice of hope to the tertiary Nutriment of Tuesday. We are convinced, however, that no sight would be more popular than the "blue and white stripes" sailing gallantly in advance to the winning chair on any future Derby day.

Two greys, Lord Alfred and Bonnie Morn, worthy sons of the game old Chanticleer, have already distinguished themselves; nor is a third, Mouge, by Mathematician, without merit—he must not be overlooked. A grey colt achieving Derby honours would be a novelty. But rumour will have it that Gracidas Esurians is some pennula better than Bonnie Morn; if so, Mr. Huxes must indeed be the most fortunate of the fortunate. The Greek should show at Goodwood or York, and no longer gain fame by proxy, or it will require no end of aith, or what is more, no small amount of money, to maintain him in his high position. But what can stem the strong tide of success that now sets in towards Whitehall? The two Johns are at this moment the veritable Pompey and Cæsar of the turf.

Most sportsmen will hail with pleasure any smile of fortune that falls on the colours of Lord Chesterfield. The stakes that bear his Lordship's name were won by the Boarding School Miss Lily, half-sister to Omo and Typer.

Epinomedas, though not without a smart struggle with Testy, made booty of the Town Plate with the addition of the Perran donation, divided by the recent gentleman of that name, who died about the beginning of the last century. As no two persons, purchasers of St. Mary's, Newmarket, were disposed to enter the hands of matrimony, and claim the dowry, or, what is still better, none were so poor as to be destitute of £20 wherewith to begin their house-keeping, the little £20 went to the winner of the Chester Cup.

The success of Knight of St. George, at Worcester, verifies the conjectures of the Newcastle morning, and proves his superiority, at least for a mile and a half, over Arridas; the latter being in the calculation, as with many horses of his class, to distinguish himself over a longer distance. Catharine Hayes at 7st 4lb, giving 20lbs for her year to the winner, might have been expected to cut a better figure in the race; but, it is evident that she is nothing like the champion we saw in her two-year-old form. Calot, too, with 6 lb, who did some good things last season, was nowhere. The old horses Titterstone, Liberty, and Waterfall, certainly turned loose, were before both. The Worcester Stakes must have proved a welcome solace for their repeated disappointments with Kingston and the luckless Indian Warrior. Nelly Hill cut down her opponents for the Flying Stakes in a style that gave significance to the name of the race. This daughter of Spring Jack out of Anne Page, who ran in the early part of the year under the name of Annabel, has good speed; and when in the humour, and not crushed by weight, will always be dangerous over a moderate scope of ground.

The Liverpool Meeting presents itself to notice next week, and nothing short of its usual attractions. We may not have so good an entry for the Cup as we have met with in former years, but enough is before us to realise the prospect of three days' capital sport. Kingston, according to custom, heads the handicaps; though, by the way, Rutaplan, to the evident discontent of his owner, appears likely to supersede him in such unprofitable honour. But for the cup, Kingston, at 8st 12lb, may be looked upon as declining to take part in the contest. The Indian Warrior, 7st 10lb, will be his representative; but are we likely to find the Warrior 4lbs better than we saw him at Chester? He certainly meets Dr. O'Toole on more favourable terms than when he encountered him on the Rooles, but the chance of improvement in form is generally in favour of a young one; still it is very probable that the Indian Warrior, on this occasion, will nobly redeem his former defeats and the credit of his stable. Hungerford, for his six years, is undeniably well in, though he may not possess the freshness that some of his opponents will bring to the contest. He is the favourite, and remains remarkably firm in the betting. Looking at his antecedents, the stable may be justified in forming the conclusion, that, when the leading horses reach the winning post, he will be there or thereabout. Typer, good as she is, would prefer the distance a little shortened. Catherine Hayes, after her Worcester display, can have no chance. Talford and Crusader may show, and both will run stoutly. Arridas is over-weighted, and of course an absentee. Ireland's Eye most probably will be reserved for some future event; but St. Faith, after his Newmarket win, may be sent to Aintree. Annie Sutherland is expected to show an amendment on her running. Heapy is a fine, slashing horse; and, as was the case with Brocket, has not been so long withheld for nothing. He has been heavily backed for this event in London, and as vigorously opposed at Manchester. Is the solution of the mystery to be found in his reservation for the Goodwood Stakes? or, is it intended that he shall, like Windischgratz, rush in and snatch the Derby? But, the task of selecting the winner of this, and the other races, must devolve on our friend Toby Peeps, who has been remarkably fortunate in hitting the mark of many large handicaps during the season.

Harrogate has its pleasant little meeting on Monday. Marlborough, Abingdon, and Ipswich hold their festivals later in the week.

RACING.

"On the green, green turf."

MR. EDITOR,—As alliteration on racing matters appears to be the order of the day, I shall briefly give you my LIVERPOOL LINKINGS; though, peradventure, they may, in pugilistic parlance, be set down against me as so many Liverpool Lichings.

THE MERREY STAKES, Lady Palmerston. LANCAHIRE OAKS, Sortie or Nelly Hill, with Monimia and Sister of Mercy in close attendance.

THE UNITED KINGDOM TRAINERS' STAKES is a new feature which cannot fail to excite interest, and perhaps some little amusement. As the conditions are peculiar, it may be necessary to give them in full:—

THE UNITED KINGDOM TRAINERS' STAKES (Handicap) of 5 sovs each. 3 lb, with 40 sovs added, for three-year-olds and upwards. The second to receive 10 sovs out of the stakes, and the last to pay the stake of the third horse. The winner to give a dozen of Champagne to the members of this race. To be ridden by professional trainers of five years' standing, who do not ride publicly or for pay in either Flat Races, Steeplechases, or Hurdle Races, and any such party riding contrary to this condition, shall, if he come in first, not receive the stakes, but be at once disqualified, though any such party is allowed to enter and start any number of horses. If any dispute arises on this point, the Stewards to have the sole power of deciding. Mile and a quarter.

Trainers may not restrict themselves to those rules by which they manage their horses; and men will grow fat and purse. The result of this race must greatly depend on the riding. I am inclined to select Mr. Wilkins' Columbine, or Mr. E. Elliott's Donkey; and may the worthy trainers enjoy their champagne afterwards!

For the SEPTON STAKES I can see nothing better than Stratawn.

THE POAL STAKES should go to the credit of Ortolano. LIVERPOOL CUP.—This, the great event of the meeting, engrosses all the betting. Heapy a few days back was at 4 to 1; and at the moment I write almost any price is obtainable. He is said to be reserved for Goodwood—but "waro hawks!" Both he and Dr. O'Toole are now betted against, as though they were, in the phraseology of the ring, "dead 'uns." The Early Bird is on the rise; but if his Newcastle running was true, his chance of a successful fight must be but small. The field, I expect, will hardly reach a dozen, and may be selected from Hungerford, Typer, Indian Warrior, Umbriel, Crusader, Talford, Annie Sutherland, St. Faith, Ulster, Heapy, Early Bird, Dr. O'Toole, Marc Anthony, Lady Bird, Jubbe, and Nightshade. If well and at the post, any unconditional choice would be HEAPY. In his absence, HUNGERFORD, with the Little MARC ANTHONY for a cockboat.

THE ROLINTON BIENNIAL STAKES may prove the rubber match between Lord Alfred and Sicily, and the result in favour of the filly; but should the colt by Van Tromp out of Moonbeam show, he might materially damage my calculation.

THE DERNY HANDICAP may go to Pelion or Peggy. THE INSKRIPPERS' PLATE, Ethelwold, Stiletto, or Black Bess may be good enough to carry away.

THE KNOWLEY DINNEN STAKES probably a walk-over for Aerobol.

THE LICENSED VICTUALLERS' PLATE has an entry of no less than 41 horses. The task of picking out the winner is all but hopeless. Should he pay as a visit across Channel, my choice would be Roscommon; in his default, the Early Bird.

THE LIVERPOOL ST. LEGER.—This race, I fancy, will finish this; Aerobol 1, Scythian 2, Arthur Wellesley 3.

THE PRODUCE SWYESTAKES ought to become the property of Dirk Hatterack.

THE LANCAHIRE PRODUCE an acquisition possibly to Noddy,—whose name, I trust, I may not deserve for my pains.

Yours, TONY PEEPS.

July 7, 1854.

P.S.—All doubt respecting the shuttlecock Heapy is now at an end—he was struck out of the Liverpool Cup yesterday at 3.40 p.m.

Saturday morning.

BETTING AT MANCHESTER.—TUESDAY.

Either betting is on the decline in Manchester or it is enjoying one of those temporary lulls which, like trade, it is subject to, for it is admitted on all hands that, considering we are now in the very height of the season, speculation has not been so confined for a long time. Except amongst a few the game books are really trilling, and we often feel a reluctance in taking them as a basis for our quotations. The following makes up our "lot of prices" on forthcoming events for to-day:—

METHOD OF PRESERVING FOXES IN CORNWALL.

SPORTING MISCELLANEOUS.

THE MOORS.—In answer to numerous inquiries, we are glad to be able to state that, from all parts of Inverness-shire and northwards, we hear that the young grouse have not for many years been stronger or more numerous. An unusually large stock of old birds survived last season, and these, favoured by excellent weather at the breeding time, have brought out broods of from seven to ten from almost every nest. A gamekeeper, who has often noted the first appearance of the young birds, informs us that he saw them this year on the 13th May—eight days earlier than he ever noticed them before. A gentleman who has extensive shootings in Ross-shire writes as follows:—"I expect this will turn out a very good season for grouse in this part of the country; all the eggs are now hatched, and many of the coveys can already fly a hundred or hundred and fifty yards. Yesterday I sprang a covey of no less than eleven young birds, which took wing and went off in good style. It is very rare to see so many birds in a covey of grouse. The deer are in a forward condition in my forest. The stags' heads are as well grown now as in July last year." The demand for moors is equal to that of former years, and to those who long for the 12th of August, we can say with confidence that their guns will seldom have to be turned away to spare "cheepers."—Inverness Courier.

SPORTING PROSPECTS.—We hear from reliable authority that the "hatch" of the pheasant has been extremely good, and that unusually large broods of this description of game now grace the preserves. Partridges are partially hatching, for which the season is also favourable. As regards hares and rabbits, let them be exterminated, or at least kept to the woods, so as not to interfere with the tenants' produce.—Lincolnshire Chronicle.

ACCORDING to letters from Broussa, of the 10th ult., Hadj-Abd-el-Kader-Ben-Kelikka, sent by Abdel-Kader to present, in his name, to the Emperor the three horses which his Majesty has been pleased to accept, left Broussa on the 5th, and embarked in one of the military steamers for France. Each of those horses bears a saddlecloth in accordance with the colour of his coat, and manufactured at Broussa under the personal direction of the Emir. Abdel-Kader has caused to be embroidered on the headstalls an Arabic inscription, describing the qualities of each animal, and his delegate is a bearer of certificates, to which are appended seven signatures, showing the origin of each horse.

DEATH OF MR. SAMUEL BEETON.—We regret to announce that this event took place somewhat suddenly last Sunday morning. By a very extensive circle of friends and acquaintances Mr. Beeton was held in the warmest regard for his practical benevolence, cordial sentiments, and strict sincerity. In the sporting world he occupied a very prominent position—the strongest testimony of the zeal with which he espoused the interests of the turf being in the establishment of the Great Metropolitan Stakes, and in the general success of the Epsom Spring Meeting.

SALE OF POINTERS.—Mr. R. Brearey sold Mr. Taylor's kennel of pointers, at Watford, on Saturday week. The highest price obtained was 44 guineas a brace; the average 20 guineas. The principal buyers were Lords Normanton, Spencer, Lonsdale, Huntingfield, and Messrs. Wilmot, Hurst, Majoribanks, Phelps, Abraham Wheatcroft, &c. &c. All the dogs were sold.

TURFIANA.

EAST RIDING, YORKSHIRE, & BEVERLEY.—The regular annual races closed on the 29th June. The meeting was a most excellent one; and next year the stakes will, no doubt, be considerably increased. Lord Lonsdale and Robert Harrison, Esq., were present as stewards, and expressed their approbation of the management of the judge and committee. His Lordship offered and sent his yacht band, under the leadership of Mr. Kælor, which romanced the two days, and admirably played several of the recent fashionable airs. The other steward, the Hon. R. N. Lawley, could not attend.

SALE OF RACING STOCK.—At Newmarket, on Wednesday, Minceat, the winner of the Oaks, was sold by auction for 850 Guineas; Muscovado, 3-yr.-old, for 25 guineas, without his engagements; and Lady of Lyons, 2-yr.-old, for 210 guineas, with her engagements, which are very heavy. Several other lots were put up by Messrs. Tattersall, but very few found purchasers.

IRISH TURFIANA.

CORRAGH MEMS.—At the Curragh June Meeting, last week, twenty-one events were decided, the gross amount of which, after all deductions, was £2,291. Lord Waterford was again out of luck, having only won £50, being half-forfeit in a match with Lord Howth; and Mr. Watts, the father of the Irish turf, who generally falls in for the "lion's share," won nothing! Mr. O'Reilly's Master Tom carried off all her Majesty's Plates, having Denny Wynne up three times, and Magee once. E. Keegan rode four winners; George Harrison, Steggles, and Larry Mahon (who has just recovered from a severe illness) two each; and Jas. Doyle, Maton, P. Connolly, Lynch, D. Doyle, and M. Lynch, one. There was but one Corinthian race during the week, the winner of which was ridden by a son of Mr. Quin, of Loughloher Castle, Cahir, being his maiden mount in public.

The Marquis of Waterford purchased last week, Mr. L. Keegan's b c Old Malt, by Burgundy, for 900 guineas and half his present engagements. Old Malt is the winner of the Two-year-old Stakes, on Wednesday week, at the Curragh, beating Mother Carey's Chicka, the favourite, and 4 others.

Many improvements are to be effected on the Curragh by the Great Southern and Western Railway Company before the next September meeting. The principal one will be the formation of a tram-road from the stand-house to the railway, which will be a great comfort to pedestrians in bad weather.

CARLOW RACES, 1854.—Entries and weights for the Carlow Stakes of 8 sovs. each, 5 ft, 60 sovs. added, to come off over the Ballybar course, on Friday next:—Isabella, 8st 9lb; Fuze, 8st 9lb; Alexin, 7st 10lb; Sanita, 7st 9lb; Burgandy, colt, 7st 2lb; Geraldus, 7st; Bannathlath, 6st; Ariel, 5st 7lb. The following are the weights for the Handicap Sweepstakes of 10 sovs. each, h. ft., 100 sovs. added, at the Heath Races, on the 1st of August:—Gay-lad, 8st 7lb; Eglington, 8st 2lb; Fuze, 8st 2lb; Sphinx, 8st 2lb; Master Johnny, 7st 11lb; Alexin, 7st 11lb; Bellows-town Lass, 7st 10lb; Twig, 7st 9lb; Hunting-horn, 7st 9lb; Baskery, 7st 7lb; Lambay, 7st 5lb; Simpleton, 6st 9lb; Cochin-China, 6st 4lb; Mag-on-the-wing, 6st 2lb; Idle Girl, 5st 10lb.

SALMON FISHING.—The fishings in the Dee and Don, and along the sea-coast in this neighbourhood, have of late been scarcely equal to average, though the "takes" upon the whole season, up to this date, are greater than at the corresponding period of last year. The improvement has taken place chiefly in the sea-fishings. The quality is good and the price very reasonable—viz., 1s. per lb. for salmon, and 9d. for grise.—Aberdeen Journal.

ROYAL THAMES YACHT CLUB.

The monthly meeting took place on Wednesday evening, when, on the motion of R. S. Wilkinson, Esq., seconded by C. R. Tatham, Esq., Captain Wheeler was voted into the chair. The Commodore, Lord A. Paget, M.P., subsequently arrived, when Captain Wheeler vacated his seat. The minutes of the last meeting having been read and confirmed, the Treasurer read his Financial Statement, by which it appeared that there remained in his hands, after paying all expenses, to 30th June, 1854, about £570, in addition to £1000 in the Funds. A ballot took place when eight candidates were declared duly elected. As the schooner-match was "off" for want of entries, the members present, about sixty, were of opinion that there should be no more matches this season, and that it would be politic in the club to husband their resources for a brighter year.

The following motion, proposed by R. S. Wilkinson, Esq., and seconded by James Hutchins, Esq., was unanimously carried, previous to the adjournment, viz:—"That the names of all members who shall be in arrears, for subscription or other sums due to the club, be posted in the club-room immediately after the November meeting, and that the secretary do in the meantime communicate with such members."

RANELAGH YACHT CLUB.

The romolezons of this new yacht club is the Swan Tavern, Battersea, where the next meeting will be held on Wednesday, the 12th July, at eight o'clock p.m. Among the business of the evening members will be called upon "to pay up their subscriptions;" "to fix a day for the match;" and "to make entries of yachts." The entries will close at 10 p.m. Mr. P. Dunbar is now daily engaged in the onerous duties of honorary secretary, and we have no doubt he will rapidly bring matters into ship-shape.

LONDON MODEL YACHT CLUB.

The 92nd monthly meeting of this club was held at Anderson's Hotel, Fleet-street, Vice-Commodore Williams in the chair, and Rear-Commodore Gordon in the vice-chair, on Wednesday last, the anniversary of American independence. The secretary, Mr. Crubb, read the minutes of two previous meetings, which were confirmed, and then a ballot was taken, when Messrs. Wm. Skiller, Francis Maybery, and James Jackson (omitted name on such a date), were duly elected into the club. The 13th rule was read as to arrears of subscriptions, when many members present paid up, an example which it will be well for the few defaulters in this club to follow, ere it be too late. The annual report of the Royal Humane Society was presented to the club-library, and on perusing the subscription list, we were astonished to find that the London Model Yacht Club is the only yacht club subscribing to this admirable society. July 10th (Wednesday) was next fixed for the meeting of auditors at Anderson's Hotel, at 7 p.m.; a meeting which any of the club members may attend. A conversation ensued as to the measurement of yachts under rule 18, a rule which henceforth will be most strictly adhered to. And on this head, with regard to the 3rd class, or Serpentine Models, Mr. Bertram mentioned instances where boats measured previous to a race canoe within the 1,000 inches (the measurement allowed), but after the race were found above it; in one or two cases a difference of 20 inches taking place. The names of candidates were now proposed, and some letters read from the Commodore, explaining his unavoidable absence, and from the Thames National Regatta Committee, a regatta at which we may mention there will be a yacht sailing match as well as the rowing contests already announced. The London Model Yacht Club will soon have a match between their 12 foot vessels, all now; and we bear the Wasp, Mr. G. Bertram, the British Fair, Mary Anne, and others will contend.

THE NEW CLUN, "The Ranelagh," meeting at the Swan, as announced in our last, will also all in reviving above bridge sailing. In the L. M. Y. Club, entries for the 12 foot match will be made at the next monthly meeting, the first Tuesday in August, when the prizes then about to be contended for will be "laid upon the table." The first will be in silver, and worth five guineas. In the unavoidable absence of Mr. Hewitt, the owner of the Gnat, the cup was presented to the Rear-Commodore for conveyance to that gentleman. A vote of thanks to Mr. Bartlett for the loan of the Little Mosquito, during the recent match, was passed by acclamation. It will be remembered that the Umpire's flag was carried in her. Some notices of motion were also given by the Secretary and other gentlemen.

BIRKENHEAD MODEL YACHT CLUB.

The second match of the season, for a prize offered by this club, took place on Saturday last. The competition was between vessels of the second class, manned and sailed by amateur members, each boat being limited to two hands. The prize was an elegant timepiece of the value of £10. A great concourse of spectators assembled to view the contest, for which the following yachts were entered:—

1. Wee Janie, sloop, 2 tons, Hamilton Laird,
2. Champion, do, 4 do, J. E. Bishop.
3. Nana, yawl, 2 do, W. J. Conlan.
4. Squib, sloop, 2 do, J. A. Clarke.

The Nana, though entered, did not start. The tiny Champion, just big enough to contain Mr. Bishop, her builder and owner, who is also the builder of the Spirit and the Electric, was earnest and bold in the sport, and afforded much interest throughout the day. The Squib is a new model, constructed by Mr. Morrison, jun. is 19 feet 7 inches by 5 feet 7½ inches on the beam. Her lines are graceful, and her appearance on the water is light and elegant. The Wee Janie is 19 feet 2 inches in length, by 5 feet 7½ inches on the beam, and was built by Mr. Hicks, of Birkenhead. She of a model suggesting power combined with beauty, the former being apparently her more prominent quality. The course selected for the match was one which, starting from the east end of the great float, rounded a flag-boat at its western point, returning to round a flag-boat off the Emigration-wharf, repeating the course as far as Mr. Laird's yard, off which was the winning flag-boat. The wind at starting (3.23 p.m.) was a steady breeze from W.N.W., which gradually fell lighter. The Squib and the Wee one got first off, the Champion being slightly delayed. The Squib took the lead and kept it to near Poulton, when Janie cleverly passed her, rounding the west flag well ahead. In the meantime, Champion, going on like a good one, and cutting off a shallow corner, they rounded in the following order:—

Wee Janie	4.25.30
Squib	4.26.0
Champion	4.43.45

On rounding, the two leading boats became gradually more separated, and finally reached the winning flag.

Wee Janie	5.20.15
Squib	5.22.20

The Champion having given up, but receiving at the conclusion almost as much applause as the winner. Wee Janie was worked by Mr. Laird, and steered by Mr. Nevias; the Squib by the builder and a friend of the owner.

The prize was presented in a complimentary address from the Vice-Commodore to Mr. Hamilton Laird, who, in acknowledging the compliments paid to him, stated his belief that ere long these matches in the great float will rival those of the large class on the Mersey.

THE ROYAL MERSEY YACHT CLUB.

The members of this club held their usual meeting and partook of the House dinner at the Marine Station, on Tuesday evening last. The river was very gay—the sailing match on Saturday for the Challenge Cup, and Prize of £125 value, appears to have made a stir amongst the yacht owners. The Cynthia had arrived from Dublin—her owner at present holding the Cup—and was at anchor off the Marine Station. We also perceived the Coralie, 33 tons, and the Stanley, of 17 tons, cruising about in front of the Club-house. There were four new members admitted by ballot; and after business matters were over, Mr. Saxby attended to explain and exhibit to the members some very simple, but very useful inventions of his, which were, by all present, highly appreciated. One contrivance is very simple and efficient. A metal clock with one oblique centre, proves a complete stop to a chain or rope, which requires only a child's strength to pull out, but holds at the same time with a giant's grip. Every yachtsman will at once see the great use of this invention, which is either applicable to a chain cable, or the main and jib sheets.

The following are the yachts at present entered for the Challenge Cup:—

Cynthia, 51 tons	Stanley, 17 tons
Coralie, 33 tons	Victoria, 13 tons
Blue Belle, 31 tons	Challenge, 8 tons
Mirage, 18 tons	Electric, 8 tons

Several others are expected to enter at the last moment.

ADELPHI THEATRE.—It will be seen in our advertisements that Mr. Benjamin Webster has fixed his benefit for Wednesday week, when, as he is a member of the Royal London Yacht Club, we have no doubt he will have a bumper, since it is the known intention of yachtsmen to have a grand muster on the occasion, and moreover, in club uniform.

NAPOLEON'S YACHT.—The small yacht which, in 1810, was used by the Emperor Napoleon I., and the Empress Marie Louisa, at Havre, has been ordered to be brought up to Paris to be preserved as a relic.

WOLWITZ, July 3.—The King of Portugal, the Duke of Oporto, and suite, embarked this afternoon in the Portuguese steam-yacht Mindelo, for Ostend, under the royal salute.

BUNHAM REGATTA will take place on the 12th of July inst. The stewards are T. W. Bramston, Esq., M.P., and Sir William B. Smith, Bart., M.P. The first prize is a subscription purse, open to all boats cutter-rigged (not yachts), not in excess of 20 tons, O.M. Committee dinner at 6 p.m.; fireworks at 9 p.m.; ball at 10 p.m.—N. Brookings, Secretary.

THE APPROACHING REGATTAS.—We have pleasure in calling attention to several advertisements which will be found in "THE FIELD" of to-day.

SOUTHAMPTON, July 4.—The steamship Mulrid, of the Peninsula and Oriental Steam Navigation Company, Captain Bradshaw, with the usual Peninsular mail, in charge of Lieut. Bridcock, R.N., Admiralty agent, arrived this day at one o'clock. At Gibraltar were her Majesty's steamer Prometheus, and schooner yacht Laina. During the voyage the Mulrid, June 26, exchanged colours with cutter-yacht, second distinguishing pendant No. 9830.

THE ZARA.—The Earl of Wilton has arrived in Grosvenor-square, from the Yacht Squadron House, Cowes. The Noble Earl will leave town at the close of the month for the Isle of Wight, when his lordship, as Commodore, will hoist his flag on board his new yacht, the Zara.

PARIS.—The preparations for the departure of the Empress for the balls of Biarritz are going on with activity. The Imperial yacht the Rolin Horienne is already at Cherbourg, where the Empress will embark for Bayonne. The yacht will remain at Bayonne during the stay of the Empress at the sea-side.

TORQUAY REGATTA.—The committee have issued a tempting list of prizes for the regatta, which takes place on the 4th of August. A purse of thirty sovereigns will be given for yachts from 25 to 35 tons; a purse of twenty sovereigns for yachts from 15 to 25 tons; and ten sovereigns for yachts not exceeding 15 tons. The first two prizes to be sailed for by yachts the property of gentlemen, and kept for pleasure only. There will also be handsome prizes for building; and there can be but little doubt that this annual gala day will be kept up in a manner quite equal to any former occasion.

BOSTON.—UNITED STATES.—Yachting is growing in favour with the Bostonians, although it has always been popular. The first thing that a Bostonian does is to fall overboard; the second, to learn to swim; and the third, to learn to sail a boat. There are a number of new yachts this year, and some talk about a Club, which ought to assume a more definite form. A number of the pilots entertained several gentlemen of the New York Light Guard to a sail among the Islands in the yacht Surprise. A great many good people were along, and the New Yorkers acknowledge that this sort of thing could not be beaten. The Bostonians were delighted with those pleasant fellows, "June" S—g, Harry M—n, "Mac," and E—e.—New York Spirit of the Times.

WESTERVELT'S MODEL.—A young American artist was engaged, the other day, in copying, at the Louvre, Murillo's Virgin and Child—they were bought by the State, at Marshal Soult's Gallery. The Emperor happened to visit the Museum that day, and stopped opposite the Murillo. "Your Majesty desires to see the original?" said the American, preparing to withdraw his cash. "No, sir," said the Emperor, "I want to see the copy; I have been told it is a very successful one." And the Emperor had made a friend for life. In personal intercourse, His Majesty is affable to a rare degree, and is singularly happy in obtaining people's good opinion, in a social point of view. The agent of Sharp's rifle, of whom I spoke in a postscript last week, was deeply impressed with the Emperor's agreeable manners and address. His Majesty was delighted with the weapon, expressing himself in unmeasured terms. He took the agent into his private cabinet, showed him his curiosities, and among them the model of a yacht, sent to him by Mr. Westcott, of New York. Louis Napoleon is certainly an adept at winning men's favourable appreciations. I also notice that Americans to whom he has spoken kindly, and, as it were, on terms of equality, pronounce him at once "the Greatest Man in Europe."—New York Spirit of the Times.

IRELAND—THE ROYAL IRISH YACHT CLUB.

The regatta of the Royal Irish Yacht Club will take place in Kingsdown Harbour, on the 18th and 19th of this present month of July, under distinguished patronage. The programme announces that prizes to the value of upwards of £250 will be competed for by yachts and boats, the committee giving £20 each day for four-oared, and £10 for two-oared boats. The Royal St. George's Club have presented a beautiful cup to their brother yachtsmen, to be sailed for on the first day, and are in every possible manner lending their aid to render the coming fête most attractive. The Daily Express, in reference to this event, says:—

"We hope many of our yachting friends on the other side of the Channel will send themselves among the list of competitors; if the recollections of former Irish regattas be not entirely faded from their memory, we are sure they will. To give additional zest to the proceeding, the members of the club will entertain a large number of their friends at a déjeuner, which, we need scarcely remark, will be given in a style that cannot be exceeded for splendour and costliness. The regatta of the Royal Western Yacht Club will take place at Kingsdown on the 20th and 21st; so that four successive days of aquatic sports are to come off this month. The Royal Irish Club have, in the handsomest manner, given the use of their marinas to their Western friends, who will celebrate the event by a ball on a grand scale at the Club-rooms, Grafton-street. The matches announced by the Royal Western possess a novelty not hitherto witnessed by our fellow-citizens, as the competing yachts are to be manned and steered by gentlemen who must be members of the Royal Yacht Clubs."

Thereal for the Emerald Isle! Afloat or ashore there isn't a faint-hearted yachtsman in Dublin Bay. "Charlie," indeed, has "listened away from Irish waters many a crack fellow under the promise of a bull at Conestock, that bids fair to be more killing than the approaching regatta bull at Kingsdown, but though the pendant has thus tempted many of the sons of the barge to desert their early colours for those of their Queen and country, their desertion cannot but be admired; and after having polished off the Antioch, no doubt they will return, "with all the honours," to the yachts "they left behind them." Meanwhile, the employed bring away, the employers intend, in college phrase, to have "a little go" among themselves. And small blame to them. Look to the advertisement in THE FIELD of to-day of the Royal Western Yacht Club Regatta (page 637), where the Corinthian Cup looms among coming events as one of the most novel and attractive, and indeed prize-worthy means of proving the utility of yachting. In rowing, gentlemen at the Universities in either kingdom stand pre-eminent; and in sailing the R. I. Y. Club regatta will prove most indisputably that a proper knowledge of tacks, sheets, huddles, and hitches, is not confined to those whose destiny has born them before the mast. The Corinthian Cup has already induced some thirty entries, and Ireland "expects that every man will do his duty." Great Britain will furnish her quota of crack craft, and the Corinthian Cup of 1854 will verily, in value and in honour, be a prize worth contending for. We wish the Club every success, and we are sure they will attain it.

UNITED AQUATIC CLUBS MATCH.—The United Clubs match was rowed on Monday evening from Putney to Hammersmith, but, owing to the tide, the time occupied in the draw, choice of boats, and other circumstances, was deferred until a late hour in the evening. Two days had been previously named, but as there were not enough present on the first, and as the second was too close upon the Henley Regatta, it was found necessary to adjourn it to a more fitting time. The victors were rewarded by the presentation of five very handsome electro-plated tankards—certainly the best we have seen for a length of time for similar compact; and the distance rowed was from Putney to Hammersmith Bridge, the men getting into the boats to go to their stations at a little after eight o'clock.

A fourth boat started, but was soon left astern. Mr. Taylor's crew looked extremely well for victory at the start, and held a lead up to Craven Cottages, where they were obliged to give way to the superior power of the crew steered by Mr. Edie, who, directly they got warm, manifested their prowess with great effect, and won by three or four lengths.

BIRMINGHAM VICTORIA v. FOREST OF ARDEN.

A pleasant match we had, Mr. Editor, with fine weather. Mr. Power's failure to rival Wisden was the signal for voting round bowling a nuisance, and for returning to the "high, home, and easy" of our forefathers (any ball not pitched halfway to be considered shabby, and cut accordingly). Never was Falford more enticingly deceptive. Mr. Joseph Smith (not the commander of the Faithful at Nauvoo) made some staggering hits; one, to such a towering height, that, as the little Pallander said, "Sure it was a safe sixer, if the turf hadn't been so dead!" Mr. Nickling, with a courtesy and absence of mind that did him credit, presented the ball to the wicket keeper, who, fearing a dodge, "Timco Danaos et dona ferentes," appealed to the umpire, a sad vulgar dog, not able to appreciate such an excess of politeness, who ordered him from the wicket; we all thought it a burning shame, and the derisive laughter that greeted the umpire must have been balm to Mr. Nickling's shocked notions of propriety. Mr. Crossland's exertions had been so great, that when trying to run a man out he had only strength left to grasp the ball and sink exhausted on the wicket, "that felt minimal weight," and left him "extended many a rool." Query—was the man out? I put this to your cricket readers.

WESTBOURNE v. WAYWODE.

The above match was played at Kennington Oval on Saturday last, when, notwithstanding the unpropitious state of the weather in the early part of the morning, an uncommonly good game ensued, which, not being played out, was decided by the first innings in favour of the Westbourne by 39 runs. Some excellent play was exhibited on both sides. The scientific batting of Messrs. J. Allen and J. Daly, of the Westbourne, deserves especial notice; as also the bowling of Mr. A. Plevs for the Waywode, which was steady and effective throughout. A heavy mist and rain, which came on during the second innings of the Waywode, told considerably against the bowling and fielding of the Westbourne men.

WATERHEAD v. ELY.

On Friday, the 30th ult., a very interesting and well contested game was played between the above clubs on the Ely ground, which terminated by being decided by the first innings, the former winning by seven runs. The batting of Messrs. French and Youngman, on the part of the Waterhead, was worthy of admiration, and the bowling of the former gentleman and Mr. Silk, on the same side, was equally good, and did great havoc with the citizens' lane-wood. Odds being in favour of the Ely gentlemen the disappointment may be imagined at the close of the day's play. The next match will be played on an excellent piece of ground at Winfold, near Waterhead, when both clubs will "try their strength" for the conquering match of the season.

Our Opera-Glass.

ADOLPH.—Another version of Madame de Girardin's beautiful little drama, La Joie fait peur, under the title of Hopes and Fears was produced at this theatre on Wednesday evening. It was announced in the bills that this adaptation to the English stage (which we understand is from the pen of Mr. Mark Lemon) has been made with the express permission of the authoress. It is extremely well executed, and adheres more closely to the original than the Lyceum version, there being no transference of the scene and characters from France to England. One addition has been made with very happy effect; a scene in which Noel, the old domestic, uncovering and gazing at the portrait of the lost youth, and giving way to a flood of fond reminiscences, becomes sanguine and hopeful, and tries to argue himself into a momentary conviction that his boy cannot have perished and will still return. The writing of this little soliloquy is worthy of the rest of the piece, and Mr. Webster made it extremely touching. Mr. Webster's whole performance of this character was exquisite—not at all an imitation of Regnier's, but equal to it in every respect; equally true to nature, equally pathetic, and equally amusing from its quiet touches of humour. We never saw Madame Celeste to greater advantage than in the character of the mother. In her pictures of the calm composure of overwhelming grief—of the agitation of awakened hope—of the agony of suspense, and the delirium of joy, she showed herself an artist of the highest order. It was a happy idea to give the part of the youthful sailor, to Miss Woulger; no male performer could have made the character so pleasant and interesting. Miss Mary Kobay (who is making great progress) played the part of the young sister with charming simplicity and feeling; and Miss R. Maskell did justice to the latter part of the fiancée—a part which the dramatist has scarcely turned to sufficient account. In short, the piece altogether was admirably acted, and did not at all suffer from a comparison with its recent performance by the excellent French comedians at the St. James's Theatre. It was most cordially received by a crowded audience, and will doubtless have a long run. On Thursday next the Adolph version of the Courier de Lyons, with a powerful cast, will be produced; and rumour already leads us to believe that this second piece will achieve a new triumph for the management.

HAYMARKET.—The last novelty at this theatre, a slight farce called "As Like as two Pins," is another instance of the fertile imagination of the French play-writers, and shows how, like the Israelites of yore, they can make bricks without straw, or to be less metaphorical, how they manage to base half an hour's good fun upon little else than "airy nothing." The strong resemblance which a Mr. Pritchards bears to a Mr. Richards is the sole groundwork of the novelty. Richards is gay, wild, and flighty, though, horrible, ditto he is a married man. For a long time, however, his little indiscretions are thrust upon the shoulders of the merrily Pritchards, until that worthy man is brought into collision with his counterpart through certain misunderstandings with his better half, and an exposé is the result, which, however, Richards manages to brazen out by means of the very coolest impudence. The acting of Buckstone and Compton, who respectively sustain the characters of Richards and Pritchards, gave a zest and flip to the little piece which gained for it a success well merited.

Mr. ALBERT SMITH has had the honour of receiving a magnificent diamond pin from her Majesty, as a mark of the gratification her Majesty derived from her visit to his Mant Blanc entertainment last week. Colonel Phipps, in transmitting this royal gift to Mr. Smith, stated that he had the Queen's commands to assure him, that her Majesty had been seldom more amused and pleased than on the occasion in question.

CREMORNE.—The advent of a few days of sunshine has brought thousands to this popular place of entertainment, and the spirit and liberality of its active proprietor, must reap an appropriate reward. The natural beauties of this charming spot are known to every denizen and frequenter of the metropolis, and now at Cremorne, everything that art and science could add, has been contributed to the stock of attractive features and varied amusements. Amongst them, we must not omit the charming new ballet of the "Bridal Morn." Mmes. Milano is the chief of the corps de ballet. The circus also receives a large amount of public patronage, and from the excellence of its performances, fully deserves the support it receives. We know of no suburban place where an evening can be so agreeably spent as at Cremorne.

THE FRENCH OPERA-HOUSE.—The Constitutionnel of Monday publishes the report of the commission appointed to examine the financial affairs of the French opera, supposed to be the basis of the Imperial decree announced in our Paris correspondence of Sunday. The commission reports that the financial state of the opera demands prompt and efficacious measures to prevent the dissolution of the concern, now reduced to bankruptcy. The commission, however, does not throw the odium of this state of things on any one in particular. The report remarks that the opera is a very expensive institution, as proved by history. Various experiments were tried in the reign of Louis XVI., with regard to the management of the opera, but without success, the elive régime (i.e. the Parisian municipality) being saddled at one time with a debt of 200,000 livres, and 112,000 livres of life pensions. It is estimated that this management lost in the course of 10 years, as much as 3,992,752 fr., or, on the average, 362,977 fr. per annum. Yet, during this period, it was on the stage of the Grand Opera that Gluck and Piccini achieved their grandest triumphs. The great Napoleon clearly saw that the immense expenses of the opera could only be met by a state subvention, which he first fixed at 50,000 fr. per month, and ultimately increased to 720,000 fr. The government of the restoration adopted the basis of this system, as it could not improve upon them. To this excellent arrangement, the lyrical art was indebted for its progress after the times of Gluck and Mozart. The French opera was the means of bringing out the operas of Spontini, of introducing Rossini's Guillaume Tell, and concluding an agreement with M. Meyerbeer for his Robert le Diable, &c. The events of July, 1830, were disastrous to the fortunes of the opera. The subvention was reduced by 40,000 fr., and at present it only amounts to 620,000 fr. The opera was deprived of many of its exclusive privileges, and abandoned to private speculators. The success of Robert le Diable retarded the decline of the opera for a few years, but in 1840, a deficit was then declared, and that deficit has increased every year more and more. The commission accordingly recommended that the "opera" be placed under the management of the civil list, and that its debts be paid by the state. They also strongly suggest the propriety of reviving the works of the great masters of the ancient French opera, not only as an interesting subject of comparison, but for the preservation of the eternal rules of good taste.

LEATHER AMPHIBIOUS ROADS.—Monologues, all ologues, and all kinds of "logues" appear to be in the ascendant at the present, if we may judge from the number of professors who, mushroom like, spring up in these species of entertainments, and put forth their claims for public favour. On Monday evening another candidate swelled the list in the person of Mr. Biron, who calls his entertainment "A Battle of Champagne uncorked by Horace Plastic." The matter of the entertainment is similar to many others of the class, in which the entertainer assumes a variety of characters and costumes. Mr. Biron is young, and not without talent, though he has yet something to learn in the way of his art, and particularly in should endeavour to divest himself of a hurried method of delivery, which detracts from the effect of his discourse; but this he will doubtless amend as he gains experience. The imitations he gave of some of our popular actors were decidedly good, and much relished by his auditory. The entertainment is smartly written, and is enlivened by a selection of music on the piano-forte, very skillfully manipulated by the young lady who presides at that instrument. For a first attempt, Mr. Biron's monologue deserves praise, and we freely accord him our congratulations.

MR. LAW'S MENAGERIE, CAMDEN COTTAGES, CAMDEN NEW TOWNS.—Early in the week we availed ourselves of an invitation from Mr. Law to inspect his menagerie, situated as stated above, and the result of our visit was most gratifying. The collection numbers among its members many rare and beautiful foreign birds, and the care and efficiency with which the naturalist tends them, serve to maintain them in full feather and full song. Mr. Law appears fully to understand the nature and habits of his feathered family, most of which are grafted and tame to a degree, permitting the possessor to handle and excess them, without fear or struggle. The fair portion of our readers, who may desire to make a pot of the brilliant plumage blue mountain parrot, or the more soberly clad and more talkative gray poll, will find in Mr. Law's collection ample numbers to choose from. The collection comprises among others things the following:—Large rhesus monkey from India; little marmoset ditto, from South America; five species of foreign squirrels; Curassow eagles, from Brazil; elegant crested night herons; parrots, including the beautiful green bird, from China; the crimson and blue grand lory, from Java; the blue mountain parakeet, from Australia; little handgering, or zebra parakeets, not larger than sparrows; the splendid pinnatula, nonpareil, Bunter's, Barnard's, and other rare Australian parakeets; a great variety of small tropical birds, such as the groundler grosbeaks, or bishops, waxbills, &c. A fine young puma, gentle and docile as a kitten, appears to be an especial favourite with the naturalist, for it plays with and fondles him, notwithstanding its size and power, without inflicting even the slightest scratch; indeed, it seems, in its regard for its master, to forget all its feline propensities. Monkeys, goats, and dogs, fill up the list of Mr. Law's quadrupedal possessions. Among the last is a splendid stock bloodhound, deep-mouthed, lap-eared, large muscled, and yet, withal, so meek in look and manner as somewhat to shake our faith in the dreadful stories we have heard concerning their ferocity and purpose in hunting down our fellow-creatures; but in this, as in many other cases, the worst dogs are the bipedal ones who set them on. In addition to the live stock thus briefly glanced at, Mr. Law has many works of art and curiosities from marquetier cabinets and Miss Linwood's needlework, in topographical letters of Wellington, and remnants of the china service presented by the ladies of England to Nelson—indeed, during our visit, we saw much, both "fish and fowl" to admire, and found in our entertainer a most agreeable companion, who both understood and appreciated the subjects upon which he conversed.

BOSTON, UNITED STATES.—The proprietors of the Boston theatre have invested a heavy fund in their scheme; and possess means abundant in every contingency. They have placed their house, the most splendid in the world, under the direction of Mr. Barry, who is well known to them, and in whom they have placed a confidence that will not be betrayed. He is, of all men, best calculated to discharge the trusts confided to a theatrical manager. An actor of eminence himself, an able dramatic and general scholar, and a profound critic, his judgment can seldom be wrong. Though he quits New York, he must be congratulated that he finds himself, until his increasing years, invested with fresh honours and advancing fortunes. In regard to the high order of the drama, with which he intends to delight the Bostonians, he has engaged Mrs. Barrow (formerly Miss Julia Bennett), who will lead, and be, in all things except opera, the Prima Donna, at Boston.

The Illustrated London Magazine.

The July number before us gives evidence of considerable improvement. A very cursory glance will show that many able pens and pencils are engaged upon this periodical. And the literary notices and theatrical criticisms deserve commendation. We are glad to find that more space will henceforth be allotted to these articles. The contents of the present number are—Medenham Abbey, The Night of Talent, Emily's Blotting Book, Arthur Hargrave, A Basket of Peaches, Leaves from the Book of Life, The Crystal Palace, A Voyage in a Russian Steamer, The Church of St. Cross, &c. Among the artists on the staff of this magazine are Philz, Rolfe, Hulme, Ilme, Gilbert, Weigall, R. Landells, and Sargeant. We had marked a portion of "A Day's Fishing on the Thames" to place before our readers, but this, as well as several extracts from other works, must be deferred, owing to the pressure on our space. "The London Illustrated Magazine" cannot but command further notice at our hands, since among its contributors we recognize the practiced pens of the Hon. Mrs. Norton, Lady Worsley, Fanny Fern, Thomas Miller, Strling Coyne, Horace Mayhew, and other celebrities.

THE GYPSY DONKEY MERCHANTS AT THE FAIR OF BEAUCAIRE.

THE GYPSY DONKEY MERCHANTS AT THE FAIR OF BEAUCAIRE.

BEAUCAIRE is in the department of Gard, and of cities is the phenomenon, which knows life but for four weeks of the year; a city with 10,000 inhabitants, but which averages more than 100,000 for one month, from the 1st to the 28th of July, during the fair. People come from all parts on these occasions, as gypsies assemble in great numbers, who traffic largely in asses, and exhibit there the finest specimens of this much abused animal.

SATURDAY, JULY 8, 1854.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

The tidings that Sir Charles Napier had taken the combined fleets up to Cronstadt, and was preparing—so went the message—for a general attack, have once more thrown the country into excitement, which has been increased by a succeeding announcement that the "first shot" had been fired. A very short time will render speculation unnecessary; and, perhaps, before these lines go to press, more complete intelligence will have arrived. But, in the absence of indisputable information that the Admiral has attacked Cronstadt, we must adhere to the opinion we have already expressed, namely, that Sir Charles considers a strict blockade the most important part of his present duty. There is no reason to believe that Cronstadt can be taken without the assistance of land forces, and although it is by no means improbable that both the strength and the resources of the place have been exaggerated, and that the fortune which favours the bold may take an opportunity of signally favouring "old Charley," we do not imagine that the veteran admiral will think he has a right to run the formidable risks which an attack under existing circumstances would involve. We are inclined to think that any operations Sir Charles may have resolved on, up to the last advice, will be confined to throwing shells and otherwise insulting the skulking fleet of Russia, in the hopes of inducing it to come out from the protection of its stone walls, and that an attack which implies an endeavour to take Cronstadt will not be made until the French soldiery comes up to the assistance of the marine force. General Baraguay d'Hilliers has left France with an army designed to co-operate with the allied fleet, and we must beg to retain our belief, that, until the arrival of that aid, Cronstadt may be shelled, but will not be stormed.
From the seat of war we hear little this week, except that the allied armies, whose numbers, assembled at Varna, were about 50,000, are on the advance. Silistria, lately deemed so weak, has now been fortified so admirably, that it has been described as the Ehrenbreitstein of the Danube. In the Black Sea, some eight Russian vessels have had the courage to rush out of Sebastopol, and to fire upon three of the cruisers of the allies. Accounts of the result vary, but it seems probable that the Russians have received some damage; and there seems no doubt at all that the gallant Russians made all haste to get back again to Sebastopol. The Journal of St. Petersburg will no doubt apprise us, in due course, of all the marvels performed—and a few more.

No one talks or thinks of anything but the war, and very likely the fact has escaped notice that the Government have withdrawn another really important bill—the Testamentary Jurisdiction Bill—which was intended to reform the Ecclesiastical Courts, by throwing their business into Chancery. And Lord Palmerston, having withdrawn his Police Bill, in deference to the views of those who opposed it, on the ground that it tended to that awful thing "centralization" (which usually means, the confiding what is everybody's business, and is done in the way the proverb mentions, to some few bodies who are responsible for its being done properly), endeavoured, a few nights ago, to bring in a second bill on the same subject, but, being assured by Sir John Pakington and others that he would be unable to carry it this session, the Home Secretary said that he had done his duty, and postponed the measure. The Oxford University Bill has not been much delayed in the House of Lords, the second reading having taken place without opposition, except a long and able speech by the Chancellor of Oxford, the Earl of Derby. Some people have hinted that the business was got over thus rapidly, in order to enable certain distinguished individuals to get away to the Liverpool Races; but this must surely be scandalum magnatum. The Government adhered to its habitual practice, and received another defeat in the very last discussion of the measure in the Commons, and the bill is, in fact, Mr. Walpole's rather than Lord John Russell's. A whole Parliamentary morning has been wasted on a squabble about the Irish Church, the thesis being a bill of Serjeant Shee's, which was to settle the whole question amicably, and which not an Irish member on any side, except the mover, approves. The usual charges of perjury were pleasingly flung about during the edifying debate.

The death of the widow of Marshal Ney, and a letter of sympathy addressed to a member of his family by the Emperor of France, have been almost the only domestic incidents which have diversified the letters of our Parisian correspondents, who take at least their share in discussing the general politics of Europe, and do not thereby aid in varying the contents of the journals.

Spain is in a strange state, and it is far from impossible that apartments may speedily be prepared at the Clarendon for the reception of Her Most Catholic Majesty, always supposing that the proprietor sees no objection to receiving ladies whose hearts are expansive. The last news is that the Queen had shown herself to the army, with her infant in her arms, and had made this not altogether novel appeal for protection, but had failed in eliciting any very warm demonstrations of sympathy. The revolting leaders at present confine their demands to a change of ministry, but are supposed to intend something far more important ere long.

The King of Portugal and his brother, after most laudably crowding into their sojourn among us visits to most of the sights which a stranger can see with advantage, have taken leave of Her Majesty, and departed for the completion of their tour upon the Continent.

The financial account for the quarter has been made up, and shows rather a large deficiency upon the preceding quarter; but upon examination it will be found that this is chiefly due to the large remissions of taxation made by recent budgets, and that there is nothing in the state of the revenue to alarm the most inveterate croaker. England is solvent, and, as the Scotch say, "friends (and also enemies) at a distance will please accept this intimation."

THE ALLIED FLEETS IN THE BALTIC.

The following is a list of the British and French ships in the Baltic. In the fleet a glorious spirit of noble emulation is universal. The Hon. Captain Henry Keppel, better known as Harry Keppel, has more than once volunteered to lead through the channel under the guns of Cronstadt, and victoriously force his way among the Russian fleet, or die a sailor's death on board the St. Jean d'Acre. "The sea or a C.B. before Christmas," is the emulous war-cry among the captains. The temper of the men is excellent; the Jack-tar pluck of the sea-horse is breaking out in that victorious love of fun that was the nerve of the old navy.

HOME NEWS.

THE COURT.

On Monday, her Majesty held a Court at Buckingham Palace, at which Sir George Bonham, K.C.B., late her Majesty's Plenipotentiary to China, was presented, on his return from China.

The Right Rev. Robert John, Lord Auckland, also had an audience of the Queen, and did homage, on being appointed Bishop of Bath and Wells.

The illustrious visitors, the King of Portugal and the Duke of Oporto, who have for some weeks past been sojourning at our Court, on Monday morning took their leave of the Queen and her royal Consort. They afterwards proceeded to bid farewell to various members of the aristocracy, and then set out for Woolwich, where they embarked on board the Mindeho, for Ostend, in order to pay a visit to their relative King Leopold, in Belgium. The moment the King of Portugal stepped on board the Mindeho, a royal salute was fired by the Royal Horse Artillery, by the guns on board the Mindeho, and by a fine Brazilian ship which had come up the river during the day, and was moored opposite the west end of the dock-yard, at which his Majesty seemed much pleased. The crews of the Mindeho, flag-ship, and the Brazilian ship, manned yards and cheered heartily, which was responded to by the crew of the Mindeho.

His Royal Highness Prince Albert, attended by Colonel Seymour, honoured the officers of the Grenadier Guards, of which regiment his Royal Highness is colonel, with his company at dinner on Monday evening, at Grillion's Hotel, Albemarle-street.

Her Majesty, attended by a brilliant suite, has, during the week, honoured the performances at the Olympic Theatre and the Opera Comique with her presence.

The Countess of Gainsborough has succeeded the Duchess of Atholl as the Lady in Waiting to the Queen, and Earl Somers and Mr. R. Ormesby Gore have relieved Lord Waterpark and Sir Edward Bowater in the duties of Lord and Groom in Waiting.

THE CRYSTAL PALACE.

On Thursday, the Queen and his Royal Highness Prince Albert, accompanied by two of the Royal children, paid an early and unexpected visit to the Palace. They arrived about half-past nine o'clock, and were attended round the building and park by Sir Joseph Paxton, Mr. Digby Wyatt, and Mr. J. C. Deane, the head of the exhibitors' department.

FASHIONABLE WORLD.

Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Cambridge had a dinner party on Monday evening, at her apartments at St. James's Palace. The guests included her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent, his Excellency Count Colloredo, his Excellency the Belgian Minister and Madame Van de Weyer, the Duke of Buccleuch, the Marquis and Marchioness of Westminster, the Earl and Countess of Jersey, and Lady Clementina Villiers, the Earl of Eglington, the Earl of Dalkeith, the Earl of Mansfield, Lord Otho Fitzgerald, Colonel and Lady Katherine Harcourt.

Viscountess Combermere was honoured with the company of their Royal Highnesses the Duchess of Cambridge and the Princess Mary, and a distinguished circle of the aristocracy, at her mansion in Belgrave-square, on Monday afternoon, for the mutual exhibition and inspection of a beautiful collection of amateur drawings and works of art.

The Earl and Countess of Wilton gave a magnificent entertainment early in the week, at their mansion, in Grosvenor-square, to her Imperial Highness the Princess de Salerno, their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess d'Aumale, and a distinguished circle of the nobility.

The Marchioness of Breadalbane gave a second grand ball, on Monday evening, at the family mansion in Park-lane.

The nuptials of the Hon. Captain St. Clair, youngest son of Lord Selkirk, of Nisbet and Hermiston, N.B., and Miss Anne Crawford Fringle, fourth daughter of Sir John Fringle, Bart., of Newhall, N.B., were celebrated last Saturday, at St. James's Church, Paddington.

Mr. and Lady Isabella Stewart have left Belgrave-square for a tour on the Continent.

Colonel and Mrs. Aspinwall arrived at the London Hotel, Albemarle-street, from the Continent, on Monday evening.

Mr. Arthur Maenamann has left London on a lengthened tour upon the Continent.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has been suffering from an attack of chicken-pox, but we are happy to learn he is now going on very favourably.

The Countess (Frances) Waldegrave gave a grand concert on Wednesday night, at the family mansion in Carlton-gardens. A brilliant circle of the aristocracy responded to her ladyship's invitation. The programme of the music embraced compositions from some of the most eminent composers, which were rendered by Madlle. Angelina Bosio, Madame Viardot, Sig. Lablache, Sig. Gardoni, and other favourite artists.

The Countess of Listowel gave a magnificent ball, on Wednesday evening, at Kingston House.

Her Royal Highness the Princess Alice, attended by Lady Caroline Barington, visited the German fair at the Portland Bazaar in the course of the week. Her royal highness remained fully an hour in the exhibition, and made several purchases.

Mrs. HENRY C. ROBERTS'S SOIRÉE MUSICALE.—This lady gave a grand entertainment last Tuesday to a very distinguished circle, at her residence in Lowndes-square.

WOODIN'S CARPET BAG.—This entertainment will close in a month. During the past week the attendance has been very large, and Mr. Woodin, ever an excellent mimic, seems even now to improve nightly. His changes of costume are effected with marvellous rapidity, and the tone and manner of the numerous characters he assumes maintained with admirable individuality. He is worthy of his success.

ROYAL GALLERY OF ILLUSTRATION.—The Countess de Neuilly, accompanied by the Duc d'Annamo, and attended by a numerous suite, visited the Diorama of the Danube and Black Sea on Wednesday.

Parliamentary.

MONDAY.—Lords.—The royal assent was given by commission to three public and sixty-six private bills.

The Customs Duties (Sugar and Spirits) and the Excise Duties (Sugar) Bills were severally read a second time.

The Earl of Malmesbury asked the noble earl at the head of the Government, whether it was true that the officers of the new department of Secretary of State for War were to be removed to the house occupied by the Inclosure Commissioners in Whitehall gardens, and that the Inclosure Commissioners in their turn were to be removed to St. James's square? Having complained of this arrangement as inconvenient, expensive, and unnecessary, the noble Earl further called attention to the state of the Foreign-office, in Downing-street, which he compared to that of old barracks from the want of repair. The Foreign Secretary had in residence within the building, while the room in which he sat was so small that, if he received company, it had to be projected up, and he could not give a dinner, because there was no kitchen.

The Earl of Aberdeen said the house occupied by the Inclosure Commissioners was the only one in the neighbourhood of Downing-street and the Horse Guards which could be found for the new War department; whilst the house to which the Inclosure Commissioners were to be removed was one which they had themselves approved before being removed from Somerset-house. Inquiry, however, should be made as to the amount of inconvenience which the change would produce; but he apprehended that two months would be sufficient to rearrange the archives of the commission. As to the state of the Foreign-office, he well knew from personal experience that it was disgraceful and dangerous. The rents in the walls were quite alarming to look at. Plans for a new building were in preparation, and would be completed by the end of the summer, but her Majesty's Government had no present intention of applying to Parliament for a grant of public money for a new erection.

The Earl of Kilmoragh approved of the resolution of the Government not to spend £80,000 on a new building under existing circumstances.

Lord Redesdale called attention to the dispersion of the public offices, and said that, considering the amounts paid for rents and outgoings, it would be real economy to erect a building adequate to accommodate all the most important departments.

Lord Campbell put in a word as to the state of the courts of law at Westminster, especially of the Ball Court, which he characterised as pestiferous.

Lord St. Leonards suggested that, as the courts of equity now sat in Lincoln's Inn, the courts lately occupied by them at Westminster might be adapted for the use of the common law judges at a very small expense.

The Lord Chancellor mentioned that he had given directions that the Courts of Chancery at Westminster should be held at the service of the common law judges.

After a few words from the Marquis of Lansdowne and Lord Brougham, the subject dropped.

Lord St. Leonards gave notice that on Monday week he should move a series of resolutions on the important subject of national education.

Lord St. Leonards called attention to the present state of business in the Court of Chancery in the Masters' offices; and after having offered several suggestions, with the view of expediting and facilitating business in those departments, he moved for returns on the subject.

After a conversation, the returns were ordered.

The Gaming Houses Bill was read a third time and passed.

The Vice-Admiralty Courts (Mauritius) Bill was read the second time.

Adjourned.

COMMISSIONS.—On the order of the day for the third reading of the Public Revenue and Consolidated Charges Bill.

Mr. W. Williams appealed to Mr. Spooner not to endanger a valuable bill by bringing on his motion for exempting from it the grant of Maynooth.

Lord John Russell also remarked upon the inconveniences of the proposed course. The proper mode in proceeding in reference to the question was, that which Sir Robert Peel adopted when he placed the Maynooth grant upon the Consolidated Fund, namely, by a bill. His own opinion had been that the subject should not be one of annual discussion, and therefore he had supported Sir Robert Peel on his bringing in that bill. Retaining the same opinion, he announced that he should oppose the motion, and that his being carried would prove fatal to the bill.

Mr. Spooner said that he should assuredly persevere with his motion, and charged those who desired to obstruct it with wishing to stifle the Protestant voice of the nation.

An amendment of Mr. V. Selby, for exempting the officials of the Court of Chancery in Ireland from the operation of the bill, was negatived by 138 to 111.

A similar amendment, by the same member, in regard to the officials of the Queen's Bench, was negatived by 121 to 100.

Other amendments having been disposed of.

Mr. Spooner, in fulfilment of his threat, moved his amendment in regard to Maynooth, supporting it in a speech of great solemnity.

The question was put, and no one on the Government side rising to reply.

Mr. Newdegate rose, and at very considerable length supported the amendment.

After a few words from Mr. Heyworth and Mr. Garhier,

The question was again put, and a scene of some confusion arose in consequence of Mr. Isaac Butt endeavouring to speak after the two-minute glass had been turned, a proceeding contrary to an understanding to which the House had come. The Speaker, in enforcing the rule was warmly supported by the House.

On a division, the numbers were—

For Mr. Spooner's amendment	90
Against it	116
Majority for Government	—16

The bill was then read a third time and passed.

The House went into committee of supply upon the civil service estimates. The discussion of these occupied the greater part of the night. Progress was reported at half-past twelve.

The Poor-law Board Continuance Bill was read a third time, and passed; as were the Union Charges Continuance Bill, the Indemnity Bill, and the Insurance on Lives (Income Tax) Continuance Bill.

The Merchant Shipping Bill was read a third time, and passed. Lord Palmerston withdrew his motion for leave to introduce the Police (No. 2) Bill.

The House then adjourned.

WEDNESDAY.—Lords.—The Prevention of Cruelty to Animals Bill, which proposed to extend the prohibition of driving dogs in carts to all parts of the country, was read a second time, after considerable discussion, in which several noble lords appeared as the friends of dogs, while others were decidedly hostile to the canine interest.

The Ecclesiastical Courts Bill, by which power is given to examine witnesses ex vivo in ecclesiastical suits, was read a second time, on the motion of Lord Brougham.

Some other business was also despatched, and their Lordships adjourned.

COMMONS.—At the morning sitting, in committee the Valuation of Lands (Scotland) Bill, and the Parochial Schoolmasters (Scotland) Bill, both passed through.

The report of the Committee of Supply was brought up and agreed to.

In the evening, in reply to Mr. Walpole, who suggested the expediency of partial legislation affecting the jurisdiction of the Ecclesiastical Courts.

Lord J. Russell stated that the Government had come to the determination not to proceed with the Testamentary Jurisdiction Bill this session.

Mr. Phillimore moved a resolution that, however, from the peculiar circumstances of this war, a relaxation of the principle that the goods of an enemy in the ship of a friend are lawful prize may be justified, to the effect that the right would be consistent with the security of commerce and the honour of the country. He cited various authorities, ancient and modern, from the consulatus del Mare to Chancellor Kent, in order to establish two great principles of International maritime law—namely, that the goods of an enemy in the ship of a friend may be confiscated, and that the goods of a friend in the ship of an enemy are free and ought to be restored; and he proceeded to show the reasons upon which, irrespective of authority, those principles were founded, and to which, he contended, the doctrine that free ships make free goods was repugnant.

Mr. T. Mitchell seconded the motion.

Sir W. Molesworth said, the resolution raised two distinct questions—one a practical question of political expediency; the other, a theoretical question of international law, as to the rights of the subjects of neutral States, with reference to belligerents. The expediency of relaxing the principle that the goods of an enemy in the ship of a friend might be confiscated had been admitted by Mr. Phillimore from the peculiar circumstances of this war; but for (Sir William) denied that the position of that hon. member, that the right to confiscate an enemy's goods on board a friend's ship was eternally invariable, was indubitably true; and disputed the validity of the authorities he had cited, contending that almost all the best modern publicists dissented from the old authorities, and supported the rule, "free ships, free goods." Sir William discussed at considerable length the arguments urged by the friends of the extension of neutral rights, who maintained that a belligerent had no more right to enter a neutral ship to search for enemy's goods than to enter a neutral port for that purpose, and that, so long as an independent sovereign was at peace with a belligerent Power, the latter had no right to ask any questions as to the ships of subjects of the neutral Power. Sir William then discussed the practical question, arguing that it was wise and expedient to waive, in conjunction with France, our belligerent rights, and a rule of maritime warfare had been adopted by a mutual convention between the two countries. Assuming that the goods of Mr. Phillimore were true, the House he contended, ought not to agree to this abstract resolution, unless some practical benefit would result from its adoption. None had been shown, and the waiving a right, if it existed, was no reclamation or surrender of it. He moved the previous question.

Mr. J. Phillimore did not think it would be wise to press the resolution to a division.

Mr. Bowyer moved, as an amendment to Mr. Phillimore's motion, "that the course adopted by her Majesty's Government, in concert with that of the Emperor of the French, is in accordance with sound principles of policy and public law." He considered that the principles of maritime law adopted by the Government, by extending the rights of neutrals, had created a new law in the law of nations.

Wednesday, July 3.—The House was called on at 10 o'clock. The House was called on at 10 o'clock. The House was called on at 10 o'clock.

Mr. J. Russell, who expressed his regret that Mr. Shaw should have received a dissent which had in past years provoked so much bitterness, and that he should have cited opinions uttered at various dates, under circumstances widely different from the present, and not applicable to the existing condition of the Irish church. In discussing the plan proposed by Mr. Shaw, Sir John showed, by detailed statements, that he had enormously exaggerated the amount of the Irish church property; that his calculations were erroneous (gross income being taken for net), and that the plan, among other injurious effects, would involve breaches of compact. In conclusion, he said, considering that this measure would not settle the question, that it would satisfy nobody, being based upon a wrong principle, and would not ensure peace for an hour, he should vote against the motion for leave to bring in the bill.

Mr. J. Russell opposed the motion, not wishing to have anything to do with the regulation or management of the Protestant church or its income, and doubting whether the motion did not interfere with the Roman Catholic endowment.

Mr. Russell resisted the motion, on the ground that this was not a question of numbers or figures, but that its real object was the subversion of the church of Ireland. The motion, he insisted, was repugnant to the Roman Catholic faith, the terms of which were not to be explained away; that such a pledge to the Irish not to disturb the settlement of property, and the property of the established church of Ireland, which belonged to it before and after the Reformation, was settled in every sense by the common law, and imperial law.

Mr. Russell signified his intention not to vote for the motion.

After a few remarks by Mr. G. Hamilton and Sir J. Fitzgibbon, Mr. Lucas said he did not approve of Mr. Shaw's plan or principle, nor did he think that, if the measure passed, it would settle the church question; nothing would do so, in his opinion, but the entire destruction by law of the church establishment in Ireland, the abolition of the voluntary principle, and perfect religious equality, which would remove an oppressive monopoly and an obstacle to justice to Roman Catholics.

Mr. Stafford, in opposing the motion, remarked that it had not yet met with a single supporter, while the assertions of the mover had been controverted, his statistics disproved, and the principle of his measure rejected.

Mr. Kennedy moved that the debate be adjourned, which motion was agreed to.

On other orders of the day having been disposed of, the House adjourned at ten minutes to six o'clock.

THE METROPOLIS.

DRAMATIC OCCURRENCE.—Tuesday morning, about 11 o'clock, as some workmen were employed pulling down some houses for the formation of the new street leading from Farringdon-street to Clerkenwell-green, and situated at Great Saffron-hill, two of the houses suddenly gave way with a loud report, and hurled no less than six men beneath the ruins. As soon as was practicable, a number of men were set to work to extricate the unfortunate fellows, and in a very short time three of them were discovered, and removed to St. Bartholomew's Hospital, where they were at once attended to by Mr. Stretton, the house surgeon, and assistants; but, although upwards of 30 men were employed, all of whom exerted themselves to the utmost, three quarters of an hour elapsed before they succeeded in extricating the fourth. Very shortly after the removal of this poor fellow, another was found, and conveyed to the hospital in a cab in an exhausted state. During the time the men were engaged removing the ruins, the sympathies of the spectators were engaged with a boy about 12 or 13 years old, who, crying most bitterly, held in his hands the jacket of his father, who lay buried beneath the ruins. This poor man has not yet been found, and, inasmuch as he was working at the bottom of the house, and the whole of the top portion fell upon him, there is not the least hope of his being extricated alive, although every exertion is being made to discover him. It appears that two men had a most miraculous escape, being at work on the top of the wall, but on perceiving it giving way they jumped from it, and although much shaken were not otherwise injured. A strong body of the city and metropolitan police were on the spot, and afforded great assistance to the workmen engaged in searching the ruins, by keeping back the crowd. The names of the unfortunate sufferers are—Cornelius Hards, with fracture of left thigh, fractured ribs, and cut and bruised about the head and trunk; Thomas Conway, fractured ribs and head severely injured; James Long, fracture of forearm, severely cut and bruised about the head and trunk; George Barney and Alfred Ewing, both bruised and very much frightened, but removed home after having been attended to at the hospital.

HEALTH OF LONDON DURING THE WEEK.—In the week that ended last Saturday the total number of deaths registered in the metropolitan districts was 1,290—an excess of 201 above the estimated amount. Scarletina appears to be gaining ground, the deaths referred to it last week numbering 72. Last week the birth of 920 boys and 844 girls, in all 1,764 children were registered in London. In nine corresponding weeks of the years 1845-63 the average number was 1,453.

GEOGRAPHICAL CLUB.—The members of this club held their last meeting for the session on Monday at the Trafalgar, Greenwich, Sir Roderick Murchison in the chair, supported by Lords Sheffield and Overstone. The grant of £500 to the Royal Geographical Society was also voted by the House of Commons on the same evening.

THE MUSEUM OF ORNAMENTAL ART AT MANCHESTER.—The numbers attending, &c., during the month of June were as follows:—11,920 persons on the public days, and admitted free; 1,413 persons on the students' days, and admitted as students on the payment of 6d. each, besides the registered students of the classes and schools, being an increase of 7,956 over the corresponding month of 1853.

THE SATURDAY HALF-HOLIDAY.—The merchants and brokers engaged in the tobacco trade have agreed that business shall cease in future at 2 o'clock on Saturdays.

THE OFFICE OF BRIDGEMASTER.

On Tuesday the Livery assembled in very small numbers in the Guildhall, for the purpose of receiving the return of the sheriff, upon the conclusion of the poll, for the office of bridgmaster. At 1 o'clock the sheriff stated that the numbers upon the poll were as follows:—Ledger, 1,098; James, 682; Jardine, 446; Booth, 50. They then announced that Mr. Ledger and Mr. James, the successful candidates, were bridgmasters for the ensuing year. It was expected that some observations would be made upon the extraordinary proceeding of demanding a poll for an office which, according to a late resolution in the Court of Common Council, had been reduced to one of merely nominal advantage, the salary of the second bridgmaster having been settled at £20 a year; but nobody stood forward to utter a word upon the subject, and we understand that the candidates who demanded the poll took care, in the first instance, to give notice to the sheriff that they would not pay a farthing of the expense necessarily attached to the contest, which lasted from Saturday week to Saturday last. The sheriff has therefore the melancholy satisfaction to know that they have not only performed their duty without being thanked, but that they will be obliged to pay all the usual retainers in elections of the kind.

RACKETS.

Belvidere Tavern, Pentonville.—On Monday last two admirable matches were played in this court before some hundreds of the admirers of the game, who by their frequent and enthusiastic plaudits manifested their great delight at the day's amusement. The first match was between the venerable Matthew Pitman and The London Amateur, against George Erwood and a player of great talent. Although Mr. Pitman has now entered his sixth decade, his play of this season has been pronounced by some judges to be equal to that of his younger days, when such was his prowess that few local champions would venture to throw down a gauntlet to the giant of the Belvidere. Mr. Pitman had for a colleague a gentleman whose eminence as a racket-player has caused him to be distinguished from the multitude of amateurs by the substitution of the definite for the indefinite article, "The London Amateur"—par excellence—a gentleman whose combined science and activity justify the universal assignment to him of the distinction of the greatest of English amateur racket-players. On the other side, the excellence of George Erwood's play has gained for him a world-wide reputation; and the gentleman who was selected as his partner has also attained great celebrity for the possession of three of the greatest essentials of a racket player, viz.—keenness of eye, certainty of stroke, and swiftness of foot. In such a match odds in betting were out of the question. The spectators had a right to anticipate—that which they realised—the pleasures of witnessing some remarkably fine play. Chance-balls, or what is commonly called "luck," had little to do with the determination of the games; almost every point gained was merit to be gained. The balance of success was, however, in favour of George Erwood and his talented partner, who won three out of the four games played; no mean laurels to win from such opponents. In the second match the parties were the same, with the substitution of a talented amateur for George Erwood; but the balance of success was still against Pitman and The London Amateur, their opponents winning four games out of six. Excellent as the matches at this court have been in the early part of the season, they appear to increase in interest and merit as it progresses. On Monday next a match will be played for two silver snuff-boxes, between George Erwood and a celebrated amateur, against Bull and one of the most skilful amateurs in England. On the following Monday another grand match will be played for two silver tankards, between The London Amateur and George Erwood's partner of Monday last, against the two celebrated veterans, Mr. Morris and Mr. Matthew Pitman. On the 21th, the greatest display of the season will be made, for the benefit of George Erwood, when he will be supported by Messrs. Morris, Pitman, Frank Erwood, The London Amateur, Bull, Sowden, John Caplin, the veteran Samuel Young, who won the North British Stakes against Patrick Divert, Lord Eglinton's marker, and others.

BOULEAU AIMS COURT, BARNES, SURREY.—On Tuesday last, a large number of the admirers of this game assembled at the Bouleau Arms, situated a short distance from the Hammersmith Bridge, on the Surrey side of the river. This court is under the management of Mr. John Sowden, one of the oldest racket-players in the kingdom, who long ago acquired, and to a considerable extent sustains now, a first-rate reputation for racket-playing. As a mark of respect to this gentleman, the Belvidere professionals and amateurs, and a large number of habitués of that great Metropolitan Court, visited the prettily-situated establishment of Mr. Packwood, where an exceedingly agreeable day was spent both by players and spectators. The great match of the day was between Bull and The London Amateur, against George Erwood and Sowden. The first game was won by the latter players, by 11 to their opponents 8; the second and third by the first-named gentlemen, their opponents scoring but three aces each game. The fourth game brought the players again upon an equality, Erwood and Sowden winning it when their opponents had scored but 5 aces. The fifth game was most keenly contested, the players being but 10 each; after a spirited contest, the odd ace was gained by The London Amateur and Bull. The sixth game was again 10 and 10, and was ultimately won by Erwood and Sowden, thus bringing them level again with their competitors. The seventh and conquering game of the rubber was won by The London Amateur and Bull, their opponents scoring 6. In the second rubber, a short one, the first game was won by The London Amateur and Bull, their opponents scoring 7. The two following games, completing the rubber, were gained by Erwood and Sowden, their opponents scoring respectively 3 and 7. This left the competitors the winners of one rubber each, and a gross total of five games each. The day's amusements were closed by a match between four of the best of the Belvidere Amateurs; the play being characterised by great talent.

RACKETS—WHITE BEAR, KENNINGTON ROAD.—The members of the Union Racket Club propose to give a prize of four pounds, open to all the world, to be played for in double sets, and rubbers of five games. All professional or amateur players wishing to join in the contest, must send in their names accompanied by an entrance fee of 2s. 6d., which entrance fee will be forfeited in case of non-appearance at the appointed time, but to all who play, will be returned with a bonus from the funds of the club. The play to take place on Tuesday, the 18th inst. Entries must be made at The White Bear, on or before Saturday the 15th. The committee reserve to themselves the right of rejecting any name entered, in which case of course the entrance fee will be returned.

THE CRYSTAL PALACE.

SATURDAY, JULY 1.—FIVE SHILLING DAY.—Number of season tickets sold to this date, 29,352. Admission at the doors, 1,390. Admission by season tickets, 2,661. Total number, 4,051.

MONDAY, JULY 3.—SHILLING DAY.—Number of season tickets sold to this date, 29,370; admission at the doors, 12,888; admission by season tickets, 1,589. Total 14,477. This day a number of coal-porters in the employ of various firms in Upper Ground-street, Blackfriars, and Bankside, with their wives and families, visited the building, their employers liberally defraying the expenses thereof. One firm provided a portion of their men with a new cloak for smocks, fustian waistcoats, and trousers; in addition to which each man was presented with 6d. for himself, 6d. for his wife, and the same for each of his children. The neat and clean appearance, and orderly behaviour of the men, attracted general attention.

TUESDAY, JULY 4.—SHILLING DAY.—Number of season tickets sold to this date, 29,370. Admission at the doors, 13,182; admission by season tickets, 1,634—14,816.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 5.—A SHILLING DAY.—The following is the official return. Number of season tickets sold to this date, 29,370. Admission at the doors, 13,006; admission by season tickets, 1,177—14,183.

WEST-END OF LONDON AND CRYSTAL PALACE RAILWAY.—On Wednesday the extraordinary general meeting of proprietors, required by the Wharfedale order, for the approval of the Company's bills now before Parliament, was held at the offices, 3, Adelaide-place, London-bridge. Resolutions approving the bills, and authorising the directors to proceed with them in Parliament, were passed, and the proceedings terminated with a vote of thanks to the chairman. The following are the titles of the bills:—1. A Bill to enable the West-end of London and Crystal Palace Railway to extend their line from Norwood station to Bromley and Farnborough. 2. A Bill to authorise the West-end of London and Crystal Palace Railway to enter into working arrangements with the London, Brighton, and South-coast Railway.

EMPLOYERS AND EMPLOYED.—It is ever a pleasing duty to record acts of considerate kindness on the part of employers towards the employed. On "magazine day" the benevolent head of the old and respected firm of Messrs. Hamilton, Adams, and Co., the eminent Paternoster-row publishers, presented each of the young men engaged in that establishment with a sum of money to enable them to see the winners of the Sydneyham Palace, intimating, at the same time, that a day in addition to the usual holidays, would be set aside for the purpose. It is to be hoped that this excellent example will be followed by others, and those who accustom themselves to such little acts of generosity may rest assured that they will not be losers in the end. This firm is, we believe, most favourable to the at present very generally agitated subject of closing wholesale houses at an early hour on Saturdays.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS, GUILDHALL, JULY 4. (Sittings at Nisi Prius, before Lord Chief Justice and Common Juries.)

WETHERELL V. CORNISH.—Mr. Edward James, Q.C., and Mr. Petersall were counsel for the plaintiff; Mr. Serjeant Thomas and Mr. Thompson Chitty for the defendant. This was an action to recover compensation for injury suffered by the plaintiff from the bite of a ferocious dog kept by the defendant, and allowed by him to go at large, he knowing the dog's propensities. The defendant had paid £20 into court, and the only question was whether the plaintiff was entitled to a larger sum. It appeared that the plaintiff is a shoemaker in the Oldenian-road; the defendant is a butcher. The plaintiff in 1851, before the accident, kept pigs and used to go round to butchers collecting their offal to feed his pigs. The defendant's dog bit the plaintiff in the hand in the plaintiff's shop. The wound was not bad at first, but the next day the pain was very great, and by the advice of a doctor who was called in the plaintiff was sent to the hospital. He had suffered some very painful operations in the hand and wrist, and in consequence of the tendons, having become rigid, could never again grasp the thread, so as to work at his trade as a shoemaker. Verdict for plaintiff—Damages £10 beyond the sum paid into court.

CENTRAL CRIMINAL COURT.

John Roberts, 49, was indicted for conspiring with other persons to defraud Hamer Morice of fifteen sovereigns and a half. It appeared that the prosecutor, who is a simple seafaring man, was walking in Ratcliff-highway, accompanied by a shipmate, on the 19th of December, when they met the defendant, who represented himself as the owner of a ship, and at his request they accompanied him to a public-house, where they had some liquor. A person, apparently a stranger, then joined them, and he told a tale of his having come up to London to receive some money that had been left him; and, after some conversation, he produced a lock, and offered to bet any one in the room that no one present could open it. The defendant took the lock, and showed the prosecutor that it could be opened, and advised him to bet, and he himself pretended to lay a sovereign, and the prosecutor consented to bet half a one, which was all the money he had about him, that he would open the lock. Upon his trying to do so, however, he found he could not, and the money was handed over to the third man. The prosecutor was silly enough, after this, to go home and get a twenty pound note, all the money he had in the world, which he changed, and he afterwards joined the prisoner and the man with the lock at another public-house, where he betted fifteen sovereigns upon the opening of the lock, and was of course robbed of his money. The prisoner and his confederates then made some excuse to leave the house, and the prosecutor saw nothing more of the prisoner until about a month ago, when he met him in Wapping and gave him into custody. Upon his being taken to the station-house and searched, several flash notes, as they are termed, for £50 and £20 each, and some medals resembling sovereigns, were found in his possession. The jury found the prisoner guilty. The Recorder, in passing sentence, said there was no doubt that the prisoner was one of the gang of persons who were constantly prowling about with the object of plundering unsuspecting persons like the prosecutor of their hard earnings, and if there had been any previous charge against him he should instantly have ordered him to be transported. He then sentenced him to be imprisoned and kept to hard labour for twelve months.

MARYLEBONE.

THE SISTER OF FEARGUS O'CONNOR.—After the disposal of the night charges, which were very numerous, a gentleman, whose name did not transpire, introduced to the notice of the sitting magistrate, Mr. Broughton, a middle-aged respectably attired woman, of forlorn appearance, whom he stated to be the sister of Mr. Fergus O'Connor. The lady under feelings of much emotion said, that she was now residing at Bayswater, and was at the present period in extreme distress; her name was Harriett Bernard Brown O'Connor. Her brother, upon whom a commission de lunatico inquiring had been held, was confined at a house in Chiswick, and in consequence of his being improperly detained there, as he was in his proper senses and as "quiet as a lamb," she was reduced to the lowest state of poverty, inasmuch as she was thereby kept out of property to which she was entitled. She was willing to release her brother, and have him under her care, and, but for the trickery and chicanery of certain lawyers in the matter, her object would, no doubt, ere this have been attained, and she would have been in such a position as to have rendered it unnecessary to come forward, as she had unfortunately been compelled to do, with a tale of distress. Mr. Broughton, in whom numerous letters—one of them from Mr. Baptist Noel—were handed by Miss O'Connor, had some conversation with her in the clerk's office, and our reporter understood that the worthy magistrate offered to the lady some pecuniary aid, which he felt satisfied she much needed. She then quitted the court, thanking the magistrate for the kindness which he had extended towards her.

LAMBETH.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—George Nichol and Walter Nichol, his brother, were charged with entering the private grounds belonging to the Crystal Palace, without paying the shilling. The prisoners were waiters out of employ, and yesterday morning, desirous of an interview with the gentleman who engages waiters for the Crystal Palace, climbed over the spiked fence, seven feet high, in Penge-road, and so gained entrance to the grounds. Their object in taking this course was to save a shilling, apparently not knowing that they could have seen the gentleman in question without payment, upon making known their business. They were remanded.

GREENWICH.

Mr. Nathaniel Pegg, of Plumix Wharf, Bankside, Southwark, and Forest-hill, Sydenham, coal merchant, John Dawkins, of 12, Koppel-street, Southwark-bridge-road, lighterman, and George Wood, of Perry-rise, Sydenham, appeared on remand, charged with having, on the 10th of June, been concerned in firing off cannon on the wharf adjacent to the Forest-hill Station. [See "THE FIELD," p. 611.] Mr. Pegg said, Mr. Pegg most sincerely regretted what had taken place, and was ready to make any atonement in his power. The magistrate, he was convinced, would see that the act committed by his order was not a wilful one. He had used what he supposed was necessary caution. Mr. Secker said, he entirely absolved the defendant, Pegg, of a wilful act, and it would most likely be seen in that light in another court. He, however, felt himself compelled to send the case before a jury, when the charge of "wilful," as described in the indictment, would receive ample interpretation by the highest legal authority. As regarded the other defendants, he saw nothing in the evidence to detain the defendant, Wood, and he must therefore discharge him. Mr. Faithful said, it was on behalf of the public that the railway company had taken the matter up. They knew that the defendant was a respectable and responsible man of high character. The parties then withdrew.

PROVINCIAL.

CRUELTY TO DOGS.—GOSPORT, July 3.—At the petty sessions held here this day before Mr. G. Blair Hall and Dr. Burney, a charge of wanton cruelty to two dogs was preferred against John White, rag and bone collector, of Portsmouth. From the evidence of Richard Sinclair, an officer of the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, it appeared that on the 20th inst., while riding on the Fareham and Cosham road, he saw defendant driving two dogs in a dog-cart. The dogs were going at their topmost speed, notwithstanding which defendant continued to beat them most unmercifully, at the same time jumping up and down in the cart, and swaying the whole weight of his body to and fro, so that the dog attached to the shaft, every time he did so, was "nearly crushed to the ground." This brutality continued for two miles, and, owing to the rate at which the dogs were travelling, the defendant would have escaped had he not been stopped by the gates of a railway crossing being closed. Mr. Forster, who appeared for the society, urged that an example might be made of the defendant, whose cruel conduct no amount of pecuniary penalty could sufficiently punish. The bench considered a case of flagrant brutality had been satisfactorily made out. The inhabitants of the district were greatly indebted to the society for having interfered, with a view to prevent the disgusting scenes of brutality to poor dogs constantly occurring on this coast. A bill for the total abolition of dogcarts stood for its second reading in the House of Lords to-morrow night, and the bench felt perfectly sure that, could those noblemen who had hitherto opposed the suppression of these nuisances, be made aware of what constantly took place in that neighbourhood, especially in dogcarts used for the conveyance of fish along the coast, the law permitting the employment of dogs as beasts of burden without a district of 15 miles round the metropolis would no longer disgrace the statute-book. The danger occasioned by half-rabid dogs, driven by reckless men at a speed exceeding that of the fleetest horse, could only be estimated by those who had suffered inconvenience from it. The fact, however, was well known in that neighbourhood, and the bench, considering the present a very bad case, had determined on committing the defendant for one month to the House of Correction, with hard labour. The prisoner was immediately conveyed to Winchester gaol.

BOY SHOT.—On the forenoon of Friday a very distressing circumstance occurred at the farm of Kirkland, in the parish of Forgue, occupied by Mr. Redford. A servant at the farm, of the name of Russell, had loaded a gun, for the purpose of firing at some crows in the fields. He had gone into the thrashing-mill with the gun, which was then on "half-cock," and in putting it below his arm before leaving the mill, it accidentally fired and the contents of the barrel went right through a partition of about half-an-inch in thickness which formed a division between the mill and a sort of shed. In this shed were a man and two boys engaged in breaking guano. The shot after breaking through the partition struck one of the boys, and, passing right through the heart, the unfortunate lad only lived a very few minutes. Dr. Cruickshank was in the quarter, and was almost immediately on the spot, but his services were unavailing, life having fled. The other boy was also struck by some of the loads. The deceased was a very promising lad of about thirteen years of age. His name is Dey. He belonged to Rothiemay, where his father resides. The lad who was using the gun is in a most deplorable state, but no blame can be attached to him. The occurrence has cast a gloom over the district, and forms another lesson that guns should be used cautiously, and only by those well acquainted with their nature. We understand that Mr. Redford has generously offered to defray all expenses incurred about the funeral and otherwise.—Aberdeen Herald.

REPRESENTATION OF CAMBRIDGE.—Lord Maitland has issued an address to the electors of Cambridge, offering himself as a candidate for the representation of their borough as soon as the writs are issued.

COMMITTAL OF THE GOVERNOR OF MONMOUTH GAOL FOR FORGERY.—On Monday, Mr. Samuel Bennett, the Governor of Monmouth Gaol, was examined before the magistrates at Usk, charged with forging receipts for various sums of money received by him for the county for tradesmen, but not duly accounted for. The signatures to the receipts were denied by the persons by whom they purported to be signed. More than £1,000 had been given to the prisoner to pay county accounts, which had not been done, and the prisoner had handed over many receipts, purporting to be signed by different tradesmen, all of whom denied the genuineness of the signatures to those receipts. Evidence was given in regard to four charges of forgery against the prisoner on Monday, and he was committed for trial at the next Monmouth Assizes, which commence on the 20th inst. The prisoner had a salary of £180, and his wife, as matron, received £30 a year.

ETON COLLEGE, WEDNESDAY.—Yesterday evening an express arrived at the provost's lodge from King's College, Cambridge, bearing a scholarship for Mr. A. H. A. Morton, captain of the school. The vacancy at King's was caused by the resignation of the Rev. M. G. D. Kirwan, M.A., fellow of the college. Mr. Morton is son of Edward Morton, Esq., 4, Kensington Gate, Hyde Park. He entered as an oppidan in February, 1851; became a King's scholar in the Easter following; came out captain of his year in the election trials, 1852, and succeeded Mr. Burnaby as captain of the school on the 23rd of last month. His progress through the school has thus been extremely rapid; indeed the most rapid on record. It is worthy of remark, also, that Mr. Morton goes to King's a year before the usual time—namely, in his 17th year. Mr. Yorke, who is an oppidan, is now the captain of the school. The circumstance of an oppidan being captain has not occurred for many years. Mr. Evans, son of Chancellor Kraus, of Norwich, is captain of the collegers.

MEETINGS OF LODGES, &c.

MONDAY, 10th July.—No. 205, Falcon Tavern, Fetter Lane—No. 223, Anderson's Hotel, Fleet-street—No. 803, Railway Tavern, Lewisham.

ARCHAEOLOGICAL INSTITUTE.—CAMBRIDGE, Wednesday. —This will be a day ever memorable in the annals of the Archaeological Institute, from the interest which the presence of the personage nearest the Throne has conferred upon their proceedings. His Royal Highness the Prince Chancellor arrived from town this morning by train at eleven o'clock, and after having been received by the Vice-Chancellor, the Master of Trinity College, and other high academic dignitaries at King's College, attended a meeting of the Institute held in the Senate-house at twelve o'clock, and heard Dr. Guest's paper on the Ancient Dykes of Cambridge-shire read. It would be to little purpose to attempt to give a definite outline of the topographical conclusions at which Dr. Guest arrived, without the aid of the very elaborate plan which accompanied them.

THE WHITE SEA SQUADRON.

[By the International Telegraph Company's Line, via the Hague.]

BERGEN, JUNE 30.

The combined squadron for the White Sea consisting of one English steam frigate and nine steam corvettes, and nine French steam corvettes, have arrived at rendezvous at Hammerfest.

LOOK OUT!—[From The Times.]—"Sir, The officers of the United States frigate Constitution, recently arrived here from Porto Praya, St. Jago, report that a Russian frigate called there about a month since; she sent boats on shore, and kept under sail in the offing for a couple of days, but did not anchor. At first she showed English colours. The American consul, Mr. Morse, at the invitation of some of the officers, went on board; he describes her as being in excellent order, and as carrying guns of large calibre. The captain and officers refused to say where they had come from or where bound to, or to give the name of the ship. It is really high time that some English or French frigate seeks an interview with this inimical stranger in these waters, or he will be relieving our Brazilian mail steamers of their diamonds, the Australians of their gold, and, what is worse, English passengers of their liberty.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant, G. M. St. Vincent, Cape Verde, June 19."

CAPTURE OF A BRITISH BRIG BY PIRATES.

News has reached us of the capture of the British brig Colthbert Young, by Ruffin pirates. The Gibraltar Chronicle of June 24 thus explains the affair:—

"The British brig Colthbert Young, of Newcastle, Capt. John G. Marshall, of 334 tons register, coppered and copper-fastened, out 25 days from Malta, in ballast, and bound to Palmout for orders, was unfortunately becalmed and driven by the force of current to within 10 miles off Cape Tres Forcas, on the coast of Ruff, on the night of Wednesday last, the 21st instant, when to the astonishment of the master and crew, they were suddenly alarmed by the fire of musketry, and immediately afterwards observed a number of boats approaching, which proved to be full of pirates. By ten o'clock, finding little chance of escape, the night being rather dark, and the pirates increasing their fire and closing upon the brig, the stern boat was lowered, six of the crew got in, and pushed off in the greatest confusion; twenty minutes elapsed ere the remaining portion of the crew could launch the ship, when they jumped into it and made away as fast as they could, hotly pursued for three hours by two piratical boats, who kept up a constant fire on them until they were out of reach. It was not until five p.m. on the following day (seventeen hours after leaving the brig) that the ship was fallen in with by the Austrian brigantine Vincenzo, Captain P. Fachinetti, who took them on board and treated them with every kindness, they being in a state of great exhaustion, not having tasted food during that time. Captain Fachinetti was on his way to Swansea to take in a cargo of coals, and put in here yesterday, merely to land Captain Marshall, James Lang (first mate), William George Hardy (second mate), W. Took (cook), and W. Wanless (apprentice). The stern boat, with the other six (including two boys, the safety of whom was Captain Marshall's first thought), has not, we are sorry to report, been heard of. Her Majesty's steam-sloop Prometheus, which arrived on the evening of the 23th, received instructions to take on board the master of the Colthbert Young, and proceed to the Hill coast in search of that vessel. The steamer left shortly after.

GREEK PIRATES.

"The master of the British brig Odessa, of London, which arrived at Gibraltar from Constantinople on the 24th, reports that on the 20th ult., at 10.30 p.m., while on his way through the Archipelago, lying to under Cape Angolo with close-reefed topsails, waiting an opportunity to proceed through Corfu Passage, he was surprised by observing a Greek schooner, of about 120 tons, with a large number of men on board, bearing down on him, and attempting to board the brig; but fortunately Captain Warren entertaining strong suspicions of the schooner before it became dark, ordered all hands up, and made every possible sail, steering north-east. The pirate gave chase for four hours, but the brig gained considerably on her and escaped. Captain Warren further states that he saw the same vessel for three successive days after, lying under the land."

RECORD OF WRECKS.—We publish to-day our usual monthly summary of wrecks, which have been reported in our own columns from the 1st to the 30th of June inclusive. They will be found to amount to 90 ships. The records for April and May contained a list of 200 ships, making a total of 296 losses in the three months.—Shipping Gazette.

CAPTURES FROM THE RUSSIANS.

Admiral have been received under date Hamburg, July 3, announcing that a part of the allied fleets, under the command of Sir C. Napier, had advanced to the Isle of Siskaer, near Cronstadt, without meeting any resistance. [For the names of the ships, &c., see first page of supplement.—Ed.]

Advised under date Christiana, June the 24th, announce that the Bonus Finis, Hull master, had been captured by Her Majesty's cruisers, attempting to break the blockade, and sent home a prize to England.

On Monday another Russian prize, called the Franciska, Michelson master, arrived at Sheerness in charge of a prize crew.

Another Russian ship, called the Ernest Mark, has been seized by the Customs authorities at the port of Hull, with simulated papers; the necessary proceedings have been taken in the Court of Admiralty to insure her condemnation.

STOCKHOLM, June 27.—The following Russian merchant ships have been captured at Windau, Riga, and at sea, and been brought in:—Steen-Bjell, Jungs Albert, Union, Norma, Jungs Maria, Fortuna, Annichorin, Anna, and Mangle. They are to be sent to England for condemnation. [The Franciska, which formed one of the above captures, arrived at the Nore, on Monday.—Ed.]

GRAVESEND, July 1.—The Polina (prize) has arrived here to-day from Gotthard, in charge of Mr. Hume.

SHEPHERNESS, July 2.—The Johnna Maria (Norwegian schooner), from Riga to Norway, laden with rye and hemp, detained May 25 off Lysevoert Light-house, for breaking the blockade, has arrived here in charge of Mr. Thompson, of Her Majesty's steamer Danmless.

ALANDSUND, July 1.—The Norren, of Bergen, Dahl, detained by Her Majesty's ship Archer, has arrived off this place.

JULY 1.—The Norren, of Bergen, brought home by Mr. Charles Smith, midshipman of the Danmless, left Sheerness under law of a steam-tug for London. This vessel was taken off Riga, with a full cargo of hemp and rye. She is a Norwegian ship, and taken prisoner for breaking the blockade; her captain and two men are put on board the Waterloo, guard-ship here. They report passing the French fleet, consisting of three liners and eleven frigates and corvettes, off the Gulf of Finland on the 8th of June, bound to join Sir Charles Napier. The Norren is a fine new schooner of 95 tons register, and partly owned by the captain.

SMITHNESS, Thursday.—The Danish schooner Steen Bille, of Elsinore, P. O. Beck master, of 107 tons English measurement, from Kirkkily, laden with coals and coal tar for Stockholm, was taken on the 25th of May last by the Archer, about 10 miles English from Memel and Libau. She arrived at the Nore on the evening of the 4th inst. The master, P. O. Beck, his wife, and daughter, have been sent on board the Waterloo, by order of the Flag-Captain, Lord Frederick Kerr; a separate cabin in the fore cockpit is appropriated for them. There are also two of the crew prisoners at large on board. The remainder were sent on shore at Copenhagen by the captain of the Danmless. The Franciska, of Copenhagen, Mr. Michelson master, 125 tons register, English measurement, from Tarragona for Memel, with a cargo of wine and salt, was taken by the Archer, on the 24th of May last, off Leith Roads, and arrived at the Nore on the evening of the 4th inst. The master, carpenter, and one sailor have been put on board the Waterloo flag-ship. The rest were left on board the Archer. The Danish schooner Union, of Elsinore, Jacob Frederik van Barn master, prize to the Archer, left the Nore for the West India docks on the 4th inst. She was taken by the Archer on the 21st of May, 12 miles English from Windau, partly laden with bricks for ballast, the private property of the master, as reported by him. The schooner Norren, of Bergen, Jans Dahl master, arrived at the Nore on the 4th, and afterwards proceeded for London. The Norren was prize to the Archer, and was taken on the 1st of June last, off Leith Roads, distant 4 English miles. The Johnna Maria, 81 tons, of Stavanger, R. F. Lindner master, prize to the Archer, from Riga for Norway, with rye and hemp, was taken on the 25th of May, off Leith Roads, distance about 8 miles English. The masters, officers, and men, now on board the Waterloo flag-ship at the Nore, wish to state that officers and men have treated them with all the kindness possible, for which they desire to express their warmest thanks. Captain Lord Frederick Kerr has given permission, immediately on an application being made, for the master of the Steen Bille's wife and child to go on shore, and return at their own pleasure; and the whole of the officers and crew are prisoners at large, and are taken to give them every indulgence their position will admit of.

THE RUSSIAN FRIGATE IN THE PACIFIC.—We are informed by the advices from San Francisco, per Pacific, that the Russian 64 gun frigate Diana had left Valparaiso, and was spoken in lat. 16 S., long 93 W., by the Isabella, from Glasgow, arrived at San Francisco, which had been seventeen days in company with her. Her destination was not known, nor had the declaration of war against Russia arrived at Valparaiso before she sailed.

OPERATIONS IN THE WHITE SEA.—Intelligence was on Monday received that on the 11th of June the Eurydice, Captain Ommanney; the Miranda, Captain Lyons; and the Briek, Captain Seymour, forming the British portion of the White Sea squadron, sailed from Hammerfest, for Vardo, to operate against the Russians.

SCOTLAND.

THE BULWER LYTTON UNIVERSITY GOLD MEDAL.—Sir Edward Bulwer Lytton has followed up his brilliant address of last winter to the Edinburgh students by the intimation of an university prize. The Senatus Academicus of the university have just offered, in Sir Edward's name, a gold medal for the best essay "on the influence exerted by the mind over the body in production and removal of morbid and anomalous conditions of the animal economy." The competition is open to all students matriculated at the University of Edinburgh during session 1853-54. —Edinburgh Courant.

MYSTERIOUS OCCURRENCE.—Between eleven and twelve o'clock on Thursday week a very painful discovery was made in an apartment on Castle-hill, occupied by two females, mother and daughter, named Campbell. Some of the neighbours, who understood, having observed that the occupants had not been visible during the whole of Thursday, examined the apartment, the door of which was unlocked, and found that both women were corpses. One of them, the elder, was seated on a chair, as if she had quietly fallen asleep, and her daughter lay half across the bed, with her feet resting on the floor. The police were immediately apprised of the circumstance, and a medical gentleman along with a criminal officer were sent to examine the place. The women, as was reported, were both quite dead, and had apparently been so for hours. Not the least trace of violence was visible on the bodies, and the idea of suffocation is out of the question, as the apartment which the unfortunate females occupied was well ventilated. Indications of poison were also wanting, and nothing in the house gave colour to the supposition that they had committed suicide. That they had not died from want is also satisfactorily proved, from the remains of bread, porter, &c., found on searching the apartment. A post mortem examination of the bodies took place yesterday, but it resulted in nothing which could lead to any conjecture as to the cause of death. —Scotsman.

THE CHOLERA IN SCOTLAND.—In addition to the fatal cases at Perth, four fatal cases have occurred at Barrhead. At Dalry four cases occurred last week, of which three proved fatal. Some days since a smack left Glasgow for Oban, with a sick passenger, who ultimately died of cholera. On the vessel reaching Ardrishail, the two men belonging to her, father and son, were both ill of the disease. —Scotsman.

THE MOORS.—The Greenock Advertiser says:—The grouse are suffering much from a disease which has attacked them. It consists of swelling in the throat, which increases until suffocation ensues. The continuation of wet weather has been very prejudicial to other varieties of feathered game.

SCOTCH MILITIA.—It is stated that the Scotch militia are to be called out in the autumn. The officers have received circulars from the adjutants of the different regiments, requiring them to be prepared to join or do duty at that period. —Courant.

MELANCHOLY ACCIDENT.—A very melancholy accident from sea bathing occurred at Kilmarnock, near Elie, on Tuesday last. Misses Isabel and Mary Russell had gone down together to the beach—the latter with the intention of bathing, her sister accompanying her. The place they had selected being between two ridges of rock, and the time being high water, with a considerable swell, it is supposed Miss Mary had mistaken the ground, which suddenly dips into deep water, or had been drawn out by the current, and her sister, seeing her danger, had gone into her rescue, when both being beyond their depth, and unable to reach the shallow water, they perished together. Their bodies were found close together within an hour afterwards, and although medical assistance was promptly procured, and every effort used to restore animation, all was ineffectual. —Fife Herald.

IRELAND.

FIRE AT ST. VINCENT'S HOSPITAL.—Early on Sunday morning a fire broke out in St. Vincent's Hospital, Stephen's-green, which at first appeared likely to destroy the whole building. Fortunately assistance was speedily procured, and the fire was confined to the first floor. The Chief Baron and other respectable inhabitants of the locality threw open their houses to the use of the "Sisters of Mercy," the matrons of the hospital, and such of the patients as could not be safely removed to the other hospitals. The patients were brought back immediately after the fire was extinguished.

EXPORTATION OF POTATOES FROM IRELAND.—It is stated that a large trade continues to be done in the exportation of potatoes from Belfast to England—a branch of commerce which last year was regarded with any feeling but that of favour by the labouring classes in Ireland. The Belfast Mercury says:—"It would be within the figure when we state that since November last not less than 1,000 tons of potatoes each week, on an average, have been shipped from this port to various parts in England. Every one of the 16 or 17 steamboats which run between Belfast and Liverpool, Fleetwood, Murecumbe, London, and Bristol in the course of the week, has more or less of her cargo consisting of potatoes, and there is besides a number of schooners regularly engaged in the trade."

EXTRAORDINARY ATTEMPTED ABDUCTION.—The following singular statement appears in the Evening Mail:

"Clonmel, Sunday evening.—An attempt at abduction was made at half-past 2 o'clock this afternoon by Mr. John Carden, of Barnane, Tipperary, who is a large landed proprietor, assisted by six or seven ruffians, supposed to be some of his tenantry. The Hon. Mrs. Googh, accompanied by her sister, Miss Arbuthnot, Miss E. Arbuthnot, and another lady, proceeded to attend Divine Service at Rath-suan church, a short distance from their residence, and, at half-past 2 o'clock, they were met by Mr. Carden and his associates, armed with knives, bludgeons, &c., who stopped the car, cut the reins and traces, and desired the driver not to stir, or they would kill him. He, however, not observing their intention, was set upon and beaten. Two more of Mr. Googh's men, who came to the rescue, were also severely wounded. In the meantime, Mr. Carden succeeded in dragging Miss E. Arbuthnot out of the car, but was prevented by her sister and another lady from doing her any injury. The alarm having reached the house, and the servants, &c., being seen approaching, Mr. Carden and his suite fled, as one of his men had a carriage and pair, and four or five saddle horses close by, leaving his hat, cane, and a portion of his coat, in the hands of the victors.

"Another account says that Mr. Carden and his accomplices have been arrested, and are now lodged in Castle Bridge-well, waiting the magisterial investigation. One of the horses of Mr. Carden's carriage dropped dead in the flight."

THE HEIGHT OF TOTAL ABSTINENCE.—The Teetotallers want to exclude the bottle from the Crystal Palace. We wonder they don't carry their fanaticism so far as to endeavour to deprive it of the glass. —Punch.

NEW DESIGNS.

NEW SAFETY LAMPS FOR MINES.

Every attempt to alleviate the severity of labour, or to diminish the dangers to which it is frequently exposed, seldom fails to be justly and duly appreciated by the thinking portion of the public. If it succeed, as is occasionally the case, then is the common lot of humanity, especially those who "live by the sweat of their brow," materially improved, and affords another proof that mind, properly directed, can neutralise the dangerous properties of matter and make them completely subservient to its will. An instance in point is presented by the New Safety Lamp, of which we give an engraving; it has been used to great advantage in the Wicklow Mines, in Ireland; and, we believe, in one or two of those of the North of England.

The construction of the lamp is somewhat peculiar, though simple, and is evidently an improvement upon that of Sir Humphry Davy. The bell-glass, for instance, is an additional and important feature in the new lamp. The glass inside the wire is made to fit close, which prevents the flame from coming in contact with the gauze, and effectually causes the lamp to consume its own smoke. It is similar to the chimney in the naphtha lamp. There are two cylinders of wire; the outer one comes down to the inner one to the level of the glass chimney inside, and leaves an inch or two of open space at the top, which causes the heat to radiate.

The novelty of the New Mining Lamp, it will be perceived, is principally confined to the glass chimney inside, and the using of polished or white wire in place of common black wire, of which Davy's lamps are always constructed. Two objects are attained by the plated wire; it affords a greater light than the black wire can possibly do, and it diminishes the danger by being, we believe, less attractive and not so liable to become heated. For a few shillings, then, each miner may almost ensure his life, and render himself a more efficient labourer, besides removing from the mind of those belonging to him the continued apprehension of the dangers to which he is necessarily exposed. The inventor of the New Mining Lamp is Mr. Reuben Plant, himself a miner, or rather mine owner, of no inconsiderable extent.

Hits and Spurs.

Amongst the passengers who escaped from the wreck of the Ereclon was a Mr. Knight. As he was sinking, his wife caught at him, and in her convulsive agony she bit him on the shoulder. She sank to rise no more; he was saved, but has just died from the effects of the wound on the shoulder.

AN IRISH EMIGRANT'S OUTLET.—An Irishman going to America by one of the emigrant ships at the Waterloo Dock, was accosted by a German who sold boxes, with, "Buy a box, sir." "What for?" said Paddy. "To put your clothes in," replied the German. "Behold, if I do then, I'll have to go naked on deck," was the reply.

THE CLERK'S LAW.—In an action for £9 odd, originally brought in the Glasgow Sheriff's Court, the united costs have been £226. —Glasgow Mail.

A USEFUL REMEDY.—An eminent painter was once asked what he mixed his colours with, in order to produce such wonderful effect. His reply was, "I mix them with brains, sir."

A "FAN" EXCHANGE.—On Sunday night a young man, who had come from a distance to enjoy Halifax fair, had the change taken out of him in an unexpected manner. He met in Hatter's-ford with a woman who pressed him to give her 3d. He told her he had not that amount, and she offered to give him change for 6d. Suspecting nothing, he gave her a sixpence and received 3d. back; but soon after discovered that the "fair" one had abstracted £3 15s from his pocket. —Halifax Guardian.

A SCENE IN SUSTELA, May 29th.—Went down to the Stamboul-gate, where we saw the arms, accoutrements, &c. of the enemy's slain being received and registered. While there a ruffian threw down before Mussa Pasha a pair of ears, which he said he had cut from the head of a Russian officer. He was quite surprised at the Pasha, instead of rewarding him as he had expected, ordering the ears to be buried, and turning from him with disgust. Several heads were also brought down, but were not allowed inside the walls. It is to be hoped that this disgraceful mutilation of the dead will be abandoned by the Turks when they come to act in concert with the Allies, it being, moreover, in direct violation of a special firman from the Sultan. In justice to the Turkish soldiers, I must state this brutality was confined chiefly to the irregulars and townspeople, who seemed to take a savage delight in disfiguring the bodies of those with whom the latter had not even been engaged. —Correspondent of the Times.

THE WAR.—The sign of the "Omar Pasha," has been adopted for a large beer-shop about to be opened near the Infantry Barracks, Windsor.

THE ZOUAVES AT VANKA.—Every six men have a small tent, of which each carries a small portion, and all button and tie together in a few minutes, and form a wonderfully secure weather protection for so very light a weight. I have been working at times hard at Turkish, and begin to find the advantage, but though they all understand me and my signs, I can hardly make out their meaning; either my ear is not good or their pronunciation infamous—probably Wallachian. —Correspondent of Morning Paper.

WATER POISONED

LEADEN PIPES.

"The above engraving represents accurately a section of a leaden pipe, which was employed for a short time in conveying water from a well on the grounds of Mr. Dick, of Bournemouth, Isle of Wight. The original section of pipe is 8 1/2 in. long, 2 1/2 in. diameter, and 1/4 in. thick. A great part of the internal surface is corroded by the action of the water; but, as shown in the drawing, four deep excavations have been made, and another is shaded out of view by the manner in which the section of the pipe has been cut. The water has cut these deep pits almost through the pipe, and not only upon the portion which we have illustrated, but has formed similar channels throughout the entire length."—Expositor.

N.B.—The corrosive water of the Isle of Wight has no effect on Gutta Percha Tubing. See Testimonial below:—

Many builders and other persons have lately examined it, and there is not the least apparent difference since the first laying down, now several years; and I am informed that it is to be adopted generally in the houses that are being erected here."

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.

AN EXTRAORDINARY AND RAPID CURE OF ERYSIPELAS IN THE LEG, AFTER SUPPURATION AND HAD PAIRED. Copy of a Letter from Mrs. Elizabeth Yates, of the Post-office, Aldwick-road, near Bognor, Sussex dated January 12th, 1853.

TO PROFESSOR HOLLOWAY.

Sir,—I suffered for a considerable period from a severe attack of Erysipelas, which at length settled in my leg, and resisted all medical treatment. My sufferings were very great, and I quite despair of any permanent amendment, when I was advised to have recourse to your Ointment and Pills. I did so without delay, and am happy to say the result was eminently successful, for they effected a radical cure of my leg, and restored me to the enjoyment of health. I shall ever speak with the utmost confidence of your medicines, and have recommended them to others in this neighbourhood similarly afflicted, who derived equal benefit.

I am, Sir, your obliged and faithful Servant,

A NEW DISCOVERY IN TEETH.

MR. HOWARD, SURGEON-DENTIST, 52, Fleet-street, has introduced an entirely New Description of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, fixed without springs, wires, or ligatures. They so perfectly resemble the natural teeth, as not to be distinguished from the originals by the closest observer; they will never change colour or decay, and will be found superior to any teeth ever before used. This method does not require the extraction of roots, or any painful operation, and will support and preserve teeth that are loose, and is guaranteed to restore articulation and mastication. Decayed teeth rendered sound and useful in mastication. 52, FLEET-STREET.—At home from 11 till 5.

THE FIELD OF WAR.

OUR WOODEN WALLS.

THE BALTIC FLEET AT THREE HOURS' DISTANCE FROM CRONSTADT.

GULF OF FINLAND, June 25.—The main portion of the Anglo-French fleet has advanced up the Gulf of Finland to within thirty miles of Cronstadt. On the morning of the 22nd inst., the rear squadron of the English division, under the orders of Rear-Admiral Chads—comprising the Edinburgh, 58, Captain Hewlett; Cressy, 80, Captain R. L. Warren; Caesar, 91, Captain J. Robb; Royal George, 120, Captain Codrington; Nile, 91, Commodore Martin, C.B.; and Majestic, 80, Captain James Hope, C.B.—steamed out of Baro Sound, followed by the centre squadron, consisting of the Duke of Wellington, 131, flag-ship of the Commander-in-Chief; Hogue, 60, Capt. W. Ramsay; St. Jean d'Acre, 101, Captain the Hon. H. Keppel; Blenheim, 60, Captain Pelham; Princess Royal, 91, Captain Lord C. Paget; and James Watt, 91, Captain G. Elliott; accompanied by the Indefatigable, 92, flag-ship of Vice-Admiral Parseval Deschênes, and five French sailing line-of-battle ships, together with the English steam-ships Penelope, Magicienne, Desperate, Gorgon, Lightning, and Porcupine; the four French steamers, Lucifer, Darien, Phlegethon, and Souffleur. The van squadron of six English line-of-battle ships—the Neptune, 120; St. George, 120; Prince Regent, 90; Monarch, 84; Boscawen, 70; Cumberland, 70; the screw steam-ship Ajax, 58; and a few small steamers, under the orders of Rear-Admiral Corry; the Duguesclin, 92, flag-ship of Rear-Admiral Tenant, and the Austerlitz, 100—remained at the anchorage in Baro Sound.

When abreast of the fortress of Sweaborg, the allied squadron were joined by the Imperieuse, 50, Captain Watson, and Arrogant, 46, Captain Yelverton; leaving the Euryalus, 50, Captain George Ramsay, cruising between Helsingfors and Revel.

On nearing the Island of Hogland, 80 miles to the eastward of Baro Sound, the Arrogant was sent to examine the anchorage, which, not being deemed suitable, the fleet proceeded in an easterly direction. The Lightning, Captain Sullivan, with the Porcupine, Lieutenant Commander Jackson, were sent in advance to indicate a safe course for the larger ships. The fleet anchored for a short time during the night, weighing early in the morning, and arriving about noon of the 24th at Seskaer, a low woody island, situate in lat. 60 deg. 3 min. N., and long. 28 deg. E., and within 30 miles' distance of Cronstadt. Off this island the fleet is at present at anchor, but for what period it will remain, or whether it will approach still nearer to Cronstadt, has not transpired.

The French division of the fleet is in a most efficient condition, especially the Duguesclin, 92, Rear-Admiral Tenant. The crew of this ship have been together for upwards of a year, and are in an excellent state of discipline. The men belonging to some of the other ships are young, but by constant drilling at the great guns, both in harbour and at sea, they are becoming very perfect in their evolutions. Between the English and French the utmost cordiality prevails. On the day prior to the departure of the fleet from Baro Sound the French officers were entertained at dinner by the officers of the Duke of Wellington.

The Bulldog steam frigate, Captain W. H. Hall, joined company with the fleet shortly after their arrival off Seskaer. The Gorgon, Commander Crauch, was despatched to Dantsic with despatches from the Commander-in-Chief and officers' letters.

The warm weather has set in, and will continue until the middle of August.

THE BOMBARDMENT OF BOMARSUND.—On the 21st of June the Hecla, Captain Hall, the Valorous, Capt. Buckle, and the Odin, Captain Scott, paddle-steamers, undertook the difficult southerly passage between the Aland isles towards Bomarsund. About 5 o'clock a large round tower appeared in sight, situated upon an elevated position, with two-thirds of its guns in the casemates; and in a short time another of a similar description, upon a still higher point of elevated ground; a little lower down, on the same shore, a semi-circular fort with 80 guns mounted thereon, of which two-thirds were also casemated. Side-wards lay a third tower, on the extreme high point of the Island of Pesto. The Hecla opened the cannonade against the fort, which returned it after a quarter of an hour's delay, when the conflict became general. The English ships moved in a circle at their approach, directing their shot and shells with great precision. About 6 o'clock a small battery, placed on the border of a wood to the left of the fort, and mounting six guns of the horse artillery, supported by sharpshooters, opened a hot fire upon the steamers, which was answered with immediate effect. Several bombs fell close in front of this battery, which upon two occasions was deserted by the artillerymen in consequence; but fresh troops continually rushed to the guns with great courage and determination, while the riflemen maintained a constant fire. A bomb with burning fuse lit upon the deck of the Hecla; a young midshipman, named Lucas, with great coolness, caught it up, and threw it in the water before it exploded. At 7 o'clock this battery was silenced, and deserted by the men. The English vessels then cast anchor in the roads in front of the fortress, and continued their bombardment of it and the tower on the opposite side. The fire was replied to at short intervals from the forts; but almost all the Russian balls fell short of the vessels. About 10 o'clock p.m. fire in the magazine, in the further part of the fortress, and within the fortress itself, appeared to have broken out, and was hailed by three loud cheers from the ships' crews. After the lapse of half an hour, fire was seen to the right of the first-named place, which appeared to extend itself quickly; at the same moment a shell from the Valorous passed through the roof of the fortress, where it exploded, upon which Captain Hall threw out the signal "Bravely done, Valorous," which was answered with a hurrah.

At 1 o'clock a.m. on the 22nd the British ceased firing, weighed anchor, and passed through the southern Rinnø on their return. One man on board the Hecla and two on board the Odin were slightly wounded, but none killed. Each of the vessels was hit several times by the shots of the enemy, one of which went through the paddle-box of the Hecla. Another report mentions four wounded, and that seven shots had hit the Hecla; and that all the magazines in Bomarsund had been burnt down. Captain Hall received on the 22nd an order to join Admiral Napier, from which circumstance some decisive operations is supposed to be contemplated.

EXPECTED ATTACK ON CRONSTADT.

A telegraphic despatch, dated "Hamburg, July 4," and received by way of Paris, states that on the 29th ult. the Anglo-French fleet was lying before Cronstadt, and that they expected a general attack on the following day.

THE ALLEGED SUICIDE OF LIEUT. GRESHAM.—In a letter from an officer in one of her Majesty's ships in the Baltic, published in the Standard, it was mentioned that Lieutenant Gresham, of the St. George, had committed suicide by shooting himself in the breast, in his cabin. We are assured by some of the gallant officer's friends, that the announcement has given great pain, that there is every reason to believe Lieut. G.'s premature death was caused not by design, but was the result entirely of accident, arising from the barrel of a revolver discharging its contents in his abdomen while he was examining it.—Standard.

COPENHAGEN, June 30.—The new English steam gunboat Locust, of 3 guns, Lieutenant Day, that arrived from England and took in coals in the Bay of Kjøge, started yesterday again for the fleet.

LIVONIA.—Letters from Riga states that sixteen gunboats have been built in the vicinity of that place, which are intended to protect the coast of Livonia. They are to be manned by the officers and crews of the condemned Navarin, and 600 militia, collected from the neighbouring coast towns and villages. These vessels after being duly blessed and christened, were launched on the 13th. ult.

SHEERNESS, Wednesday.—The Dauntless, 33 guns, Captain Alfred P. Ryder, slipped from her moorings in Sheerness harbour yesterday at 8.30 a.m., and proceeded for the Baltic. The following officers left the Waterloo by the Dauntless yesterday:—Lieutenant the Hon. F. Fitzmaurice, for the Bulldog; Lieutenant J. L. Perry, for the Duke of Wellington; the Rev. J. J. Ballions, chaplain to the Leopard; Captain of Marines, Robert Harrison, to the Imperieuse, vice Stranahan, promoted.

Letters from the Vulture, Captain Glasco, state that she was to leave the Baltic on Sunday for England, to be refitted.

Letters from the Cumberland, dated Baro Sound, 26th of June, state that she had lost five hands from smallpox. 61 men of war were then lying in Baro Sound.

Mr. Charles D. Lucas, midshipman of the Hecla paddle-wheel sloop, commanded by Captain William H. Hall, has been promoted to the rank of Lieutenant, with seniority from June 21 last, for his gallant conduct in lifting a live shell which had fallen on the deck of the Hecla, and throwing it overboard, during an engagement with the Russians in the Baltic.

There have been four cases of cholera in the Duke of Wellington. Two died in the hospital-ship, one recovered on board the Duke, and one is recovering in the hospital-ship.

HAMBURG, July 3.—Four English vessels were in pursuit of Russian merchantmen. The Césarowitz, having a cargo of Indian goods worth a million, has managed to escape them, and entered Cuxhaven.

The following appears in the East Sea Journal, under date of Memel, 26th ult.—"The day before yesterday, to the great astonishment of many persons here, a ship under Russian colours reached this port. The master, regardless of the enemy's fleet, had brought the ship safely home from England." If this be true, the skipper deserves great credit; but this example will no doubt cause our cruisers to exercise double vigilance in overhauling all vessels, no matter under what flag.

THE FRENCH TROOPS FOR THE BALTIC.

The line-of-battle ships that are to take the French army to the Baltic are the following:—

Hannibal, screw	91	Commodore Hon. F. W. Orey.
Algiers, screw	91	Captain Talbot.
Royal William	120	Captain Klugeau.
St. Vincent	101	Captain Maxwell.

With these the following steamers will also be despatched:—

Terminus, screw	24	Captain Hon. Keith Stewart.
Gindlator, paddle	6	Captain Broke.
Sphinx, paddle	6	Captain Clifford.

The squadron will be under the orders of Commodore Grey, with his broad pendant in the Hannibal.

OUR FRENCH ALLIES.

PARIS.—French troops are ordered for embarkation; and it is again said that their destination is Riga, in the Baltic.

According to present arrangements the following English ships of war proceed to Cherbourg to convey the French troops to the Baltic—viz., the Royal William, 120, Waterloo, 120, St. Vincent, 102, Hannibal, 91, Algiers, 91, Powerful, 84, Calcutta, 84, and Formidable, 84.

The French transport ship Indefatigable sailed from Deal on Monday, to join the allied fleet in the Baltic.

The Madrid arrived at Southampton brings Lisbon letters of the 29th ult., on which day the Brazilian steam corvette Magé was about to start for the Brazil, leaving the French sloop Newton as the only foreign vessel of war in the Tagus.

According to a telegraphic despatch from Marseilles, the corvette Eunoe had just sailed for Gallipoli, with a detachment of the 46th Regiment of the line.

A soldier, named Mason, sentenced to death for having killed his corpernal, has been shot, at Vincennes, in presence of detachments of all the corps of the garrison.

The Minister of the Marine and Colonies has received a report from the commander of the Breslaw, dated the 27th of June, announcing that that ship, which left Kiel on the 19th of June, had arrived, notwithstanding the fogs, in only five days at Baro Sund.

The Breslaw had joined the Anglo-French division, commanded by Admiral Courty, until the arrival of the main body of the naval army, which, since the 22nd of June, had been making its way to the further end of the Gulf of Finland, under the orders of Admirals Napier and Parveval. The report of Captain Bosse, in concluding, says:—"Our sanitary state is perfect; the epidemic of the small-pox, which had broken out on board the Breslaw, has entirely disappeared; the crew is very well disposed, and I have ninety good cannon for which I answer."

The Algerie, Licorne, Braudon, and Aigle, French ships, have arrived at Kiel, and will proceed to join the fleet after watering and taking in provisions.

The Janus, 4 guns, paddlewheel steam-vessel, Lieutenant-Commander Collin C. A. Kane, is ordered to join the fleet to proceed to the Baltic, in company with the squadron of line-of-battle ships now preparing to take French troops on board at Cherbourg.

The Termagant, 24, screw-frigate, Captain the Hon Keith Stewart, has had her captain's fore cabin partitioned off to accommodate 12 officers of the French contingent who is to aid in taking from Cherbourg to the Baltic.

SAILING OF TROOPS.

A Malta correspondent in his letter, dated June 26, says,—
"The arrival of a French mail boat from Alexandria enables me to continue the list of arrivals of troops since my last, beyond which there is nothing of the slightest interest to communicate."

June 22.—Hij Van Winkle, No. 82, from Liverpool, 32 days.—Captain Campbell, Cornet Harpott, Veterinary Surgeon Poett, 67 troopers and 65 horses, 1st Royal Dragoon, Assistant-Surgeon Casueh, 47th Regiment.

The Taurus steamer, from Woolwich, 10 days.—Lieutenants Owen and Stealing, Assistant-Surgeon Longman, commissariat officers (D. A. C. G.) Gerraud and Hadley, 95 rank and file, Royal Artillery.

June 24.—William Jackson, No. 93, from Kingstown.—Major Forrest, Captain Robertson, Cornet Wilkinson, 53 troopers, and 56 horses, 4th Dragoon Guards; Assistant-Surgeon Pollard, 93d Regiment; Veterinary Surgeon Delany (Staff).

Yulavara, No. 98, from Plymouth, 19 days.—Captain Tower, Lieutenant Hunt, Cornet Rawlinson, Quartermaster J. Marshall, Assistant-Surgeon Boute, 55 men, and 56 horses, 6th Dragoon.

Cormorant, No. 103, screw steamer, Woolwich 11th.—Captains Brambling and Sparway, Lieutenant Tildard, Assistant-Surgeon Fussen, 35 horses, and 42 troopers, Royal Horse Artillery.

Besides the English troops, the passage of the French has been active since the 22nd of June.

The Jean Bart, with 17 officers, and 1,100 troops, has reached and proceeded to her destination, and a number of transports carrying their living burdens of men and horses, in number—men 450, horses 474; and the Thubor, with 14 officers and 518 men."

On Tuesday morning draughts from the 33rd, 41st, and 47th, in all about 300 men, were conveyed on board the Prince Arthur and Royal Alice steamers to Queenstown, where a transport awaits to convey them to Varna.

TROOPS ON THE MARCH, OR UNDER ORDERS FOR FOREIGN SERVICE.

DEPARTURE OF THE SCOTS GREYS FOR THE EAST.—On Sunday the final order for the departure of this fine regiment to the seat of war arrived at the head quarters at Nottingham, and that portion of the troop stationed here marched out of the town next day. The corporation, as soon as they were aware of the circumstance, determined to bid the troop a public farewell, and the news having spread rapidly over the town and neighbourhood, a crowd assembled in the market-place to witness the ceremony. The market-place, which is an area of between five or six acres in extent, was, with the exception of the small space enclosed by the troop, crammed; and the windows and roofs of the Exchange and every house near were filled with well-dressed men and women. The sight was one of the most magnificent that could be conceived.

The Mayor (J. Reckless, Esq.), who, with the officers of the corporation, were dressed in their municipal robes, advanced to the centre of the square formed by the troops and said:—"Colonel Griffiths: It is always a pleasure as well as a duty to drink the Queen's health, and in so doing to-day I may express a hope that her Majesty's ministers will be firm in their decision, and that the war may soon come to a happy and honourable conclusion."

The toast was drunk with three times three, the band striking up "God save the Queen;" while the cups were going round the band played "The girl I left behind me," "Scots wha hae," &c.

The Mayor then spoke to the following effect:—"Colonel Griffiths, officers, non-commissioned officers, and men of the Royal Scots Greys. As the municipal body of Nottingham, and I may say as the whole town, we have met with mingled feelings of regret and pleasure—regret, that we are about to lose so fine, so well conducted, and so exemplary a regiment; but we feel pleasure that so fine a specimen of our cavalry and our troops is going to the East. (Hear, hear.) Allow me to say that when I was a little boy, thirteen or fourteen years of age, I saw this same regiment march out of Nottingham to go to Waterloo. It was to me the grandest sight I ever saw. I have witnessed many exciting spectacles in my time, but never one which made so deep an impression on my mind as that. (Hear.) You marched to Waterloo and you obtained glory; I trust like glory awaits you in the East. (Applause.) May you in your voyage across the ocean meet with good luck, and I trust when you reach your destination you will be blessed with the protection of the Almighty—(hear, hear)—and that though you will be placed in the midst of dangers and difficulties, you will be preserved, and that very few of your men will be lost. (Cheers.) You have with you the good wishes of the town of Nottingham, and every one will watch your proceedings with the greatest interest. I cannot say more. Good luck to you, and God bless you, and all your exertions in the cause of your country. I wish you good health, Colonel, and God bless you. (Tremendous cheering.)

The toast was drunk in the same manner as the preceding. Colonel Griffiths, after the usual command for attention, spoke as follows:—"Soldiers, you have all had your beer, and I am now going to drink to the mayor's health and that of the corporation, and the gentlemen who have done us all honour. I am sure I am speaking but the feeling of every officer, non-commissioned officer, and soldier of the Greys, when I say that our sojourn in Nottingham has been one of happiness, hospitality, and attention from every one. (Cheers.) We have all met with our various friends, and many of us have to regret the parting with our friends; but though we have to regret these partings, our duty has called us, and that duty, according to our standard there, is 'instantly.'—(Great cheering.) There is the eagle which the world said we could not take abroad. We take our eagle abroad though, with our allies, and I hope we may bring many Russian eagles back. (cries of "Bravo.") There is no doubt of this, that if there is pluck in the world in a man, it is in a Grey. (Applause.) Directly we received the order yesterday, did not we all delight in it? (Hear.) Now, gentlemen, as time is precious I will only take the loving cup and drink to your good health. Long may you live, and may we all return to be quartered in Nottingham. (Great cheering.) And if there should, unfortunately, be any of our women left behind in distress, I leave them to your generous protection. (Cheers.) And I have no doubt from the kind way in which you have met us, and the compliment you have paid us all to-day you will look after them in our absence. God bless you all, and here's your good health, with three times three. (Applause.)

The regiment then bared their heads in obedience to their colonel's example, and gave three hearty cheers for the mayor, three for the corporation, and three for the town of Nottingham. Three cheers were then given for the "loves left behind," and the standard bearer waved the standard before the multitude amidst the most deafening cheers, the band immediately striking up "God save the Queen."

A regular crush here ensued in the endeavour to shake hands with the colonel, in the midst of which three cheers were given for the Scots Greys. Three cheers were then given for the colonel's lady, and three more for the commerce of Nottingham. The regiment then formed in line and marched out of the town, followed to a great distance by a large crowd.

The following regiments have been ordered to hold themselves in readiness to embark immediately, to reinforce the British army in Turkey:—The 2nd Dragoons (Scots Greys), 4th Light Dragoons, the 20th, 21st, 34th, 46th, and 63rd Regiments of Foot; and the first battalion of the Rifle Brigade. Each regiment of infantry will embark 1,000 rank and file, besides officers, non-commissioned officers, drummers, band, &c. The Rifle Battalion will be 1,200 rank and file. The infantry will form a fourth division, with a general and two brigadiers, the latter to be selected from the senior colonels of the regiments. No general of division is yet appointed. The whole of these troops will go out in steamers, and will proceed direct to the Black Sea, without making any stoppage by the way. The 2nd and 4th Dragoons will not be formed into a separate cavalry brigade, but will be added one to each of the cavalry brigades already with the army, which will then consist of five regiments, instead of four regiments each.

The Himalaya, Simla, and Orinoco steamers, now in Southampton Docks, have been chartered to convey troops. It is believed that the Himalaya will take out the Scots Greys.

It was announced on Tuesday afternoon that the Government have chartered the General Screw Company's new steamship Prince, of 2,700 tons, and 350-horse power, for three months. This vessel is the largest of the company's fleet, having been constructed by Messrs. Harland and Wolff, and the engines by Maudslays, Sons, and Field. She is now being fitted out with the utmost despatch, and will be ready for service in about 10 days.

TERMAGANT, 24, screw, Portsmouth, Captain the Hon. Keith Stewart, has as many hands as can possibly work together to complete her for troop service by Saturday next. She will have accommodation for 500 French soldiers, who will have the whole of the main deck to themselves. Upwards of twenty new ventilators have been put in the ship's side, and their comforts well studied. The Termagant will only carry four 32-pounders and one 68 pivot-gun on the upper deck, which is flush. The raking-way of half her original machinery has made her a comfortable ship, and it is expected she will go equally fast, although reduced from 620 to 400 horse-power. The engine weight before was more than the ship was calculated to bear. She is taking in provisions from the factory wharf, which is being shipped by the convicts from the Royal Clarence Yard.

DUNELM, July 4.—The Evening Post says—"On Sunday the 21st Regiment, stationed in Richmond barracks, and the 63rd at present occupying Lion Hall barracks, received orders to hold themselves in readiness to proceed at a moment's notice to Turkey. Those regiments are expected to embark at Queenstown, where the Kangaroo, Barham, and Southampton transports arrived yesterday to take troops on board for the East."

CORK, July 3.—A company of the 72nd are expected to arrive in a few days from Galway. Drafts of the 41st, 47th, and 33rd Regiments, at present lying here, will depart in the Kangaroo transport, to join their service companies in the East.—Cork Examiner.

The 46th Regiment of Foot, under orders for the East, according to present arrangements, leave Windsor to embark at Southampton on the 14th instant.

SOLDIERS' WIVES AND FAMILIES.

On Tuesday his Royal Highness Prince Albert rode on horseback, attended by Colonel Seymour, and inspected the Victoria Lodging-houses of the married soldiers of the Guards.

THE TURKS AND RUSSIANS.

NICHOLAS has not been long at a loss with which to cover his retreat from Wallachia. His army is flying from the plague! The excuse is good, inasmuch as it affords valuable information to his foes as well as followers, for it implies an absolute renunciation of intention to return. If the Czar meant to re-enter Wallachia, he would not strike panic into the hearts of his soldiers by such an announcement. The evacuation may then be regarded as complete. Whether the Austrians will be frightened is another question; and indeed no harm would be done by their being deterred from an occupation, which is only a lesser evil than that from which the unhappy Wallachians are now relieved, although the real plague is the sword of Omar Pasha.

We have received intelligence from Constantinople to the 26th ult. It appears that Prince Napoleon and Marshal St. Arnaud had gone to Varna; that a division of the Russian squadron had sailed from Sebastopol, and, after having fired upon the cruisers of the allied fleets, retired to the harbour. The Furious, it was said, had incurred some damage. General Bosquet had left Adrianople for Shumla, where a violent cannonade was heard on the 22nd. The fleets were going to attack Anapa. The English have taken soundings at the mouth of the Danube, not far from Odessa, and have had some trifling skirmishes with the Cossacks.

BUCHAREST, July 1.—Three Russian transports, laden with ammunition, were lost while going down the river towards Galatz. The crews were saved.

THE WAR IN EUROPE.

IMPORTANT DESPATCHES.

Advices from Varna, of the 23rd June, state that on the 21st and 22nd a cannonade was heard in the direction of Shumla.

General Canrobert sent a squadron of Dragoons to reconnoitre.

The allied troops were preparing to advance.

The allied forces at Varna are 50,000 strong.

BELGRADE, June 29.—"The movement in retreat of the Russian army continues in Wallachia, and the right bank of the Danube must be now entirely evacuated, excepting the fortified positions of Matsin, Isaktscha, and Tulchia. The concentration is being effected in Moldavia and Northern Wallachia upon the Transylvanian frontier. It is a complete change of front, with 80 leagues of ground lost, 50,000 men hors de combat left on the field of battle or destroyed by disease, and a deep stain upon the honour of the Russian flag."

SILISTRIA, June 2.—At 1 o'clock this day Mussa Pasha, the commander of the fortress, was mortally wounded in the left side by a piece of a shell, which burst near him while sitting outside his quarters at the Stamboul-gate. He lived about 12 minutes after receiving the wound. He had just received intelligence that a messenger was at hand, bearing the Sultan's order of Medjidieh of the second class, which had been sent to him, and was waiting for instructions as to whether it was his Excellency's wish to receive the decoration publicly, and with the usual ceremony or otherwise. Mussa Pasha replied that it would be better to bring it in quietly, remarking at the same time that this was no season for pomp and display. A couple of hours after this his remains were interred. He had considerable natural quickness of apprehension, intelligence, and activity, and was zealous, and anxious to discharge his duties faithfully, added to which he was a kind, good-hearted man, beloved by his dependents. His death is a great loss. Hussein Pasha who had been in charge of the force at Arab Tabia, now assumed the command of the fortress, and was succeeded by Colonel Latif Bey. —Correspondent of the Times.

DEFEAT OF THE RUSSIANS—2,500 SLAIN.

SILISTRIA.—Sami Pasha, the governor of Lesser Wallachia, has stated officially that, according to a despatch from Omar Pasha, dated June the 24th, the Russian rear-guard of 25,000 men and 24 pieces of cannon was attacked on the 22nd, near Silistria, by Girdi Mehemet Pasha, the new governor of that fortress. The battle, which lasted two days, ended in the defeat of the Russians, who are said to have had 2,500 killed. All the Russian troops are stated, on hearing that the army of Schumla was about to march to attack them, to have abandoned not only the environs of Silistria, but also the Dobrukscha.

ORSOVA, June 29.—An artillery officer, arrived on the 28th, has brought news from Schumla of the 24th, and from Silistria of the 23rd. The Russian rear-guard and the Turkish corps d'armée, of 25,000 men and 24 cannon, which guarded the first heights of the Balkan, under the orders of Mehemet-Pasha, have joined battle. The Russians were attacked on the 22nd and 23rd, and driven back behind Trajan's Wall. Another division of 12,000 men was marched for Schumla towards Bazardschik. The Turks are going to occupy the Dobrukscha.

THE WAR IN ASIA.

TREBIZONDE, June 12.—The Turkish steamer Theiki Chaidi, entered our roads this morning. To-morrow she will leave for Soumach Kuleh, where she is to land a great quantity of munitions of war. A letter, addressed to the English Vice-Consul by the Commander of the Sampson, announces that the place is abundantly supplied with provisions, and defended by 31 guns. The Russians who showed themselves in the neighbourhood of Redout Kaleh on the 2nd, disappeared on the arrival of a British ship of war, and marched towards Koutals.

Another letter from Trebizonde, of the 13th of June, gives the details of a severe action fought between the Turks and Russians, near Usurguet, in Asia. It appears that on the 9th of June a Turkish division, composed of 3,000 Bashli-Bazouks and half a battalion of regular troops, received orders from Ramis Pasha to attack two redoubts raised by the Russians six leagues from Usurguet. The force was formed in three columns, and the first redoubt was attacked and carried by Hassan Bey of Chourouk-su, the same who captured the Russian fort of St. Nicholas on the 28th of October last. The three columns then advanced against the second redoubt. The attack was led by Hassan Bey, his brother Ali Bey, and Hamid Bey, of Batoun. The Turks had reached the walls when the Russians received a reinforcement of several battalions. The Turks were attacked on the flanks, and a desperate combat, hand to hand, ensued. The Bashli-Bazouks were compelled to fall back on the first redoubt, which they endeavoured to defend. They were, however, outnumbered by the Russians, and forced to abandon the redoubt with the loss of their gallant chief Hassan Bey, whose body they carried off. The loss of the Turks in this sanguinary affair amounts to 800 Bashli-Bazouks killed and 600 wounded; 40 regulars killed and 60 wounded. The Russians lost 900 killed and 700 wounded.

SIGNAL DEFEAT OF THE RUSSIAN ARMY IN ASIA.

[BY SUBMARINE AND EUROPEAN TELEGRAPH.]

VIENNA, WEDNESDAY.

The Russian Commander in Asia, Prince Andronikoff, has been decisively defeated in a field action by the Turkish army under Selim Pasha. The Turks numbered 34,000 men; the strength of the Russian army is not stated. Thirteen pieces of cannon, thirty-five standards, and three complete camp equipages remained in the hands of the victors. The rout was complete.

NAVAL OPERATIONS IN THE BLACK SEA.

THE ENGLISH AND FRENCH BLACK SEA FLEETS.—Since the return of Sir Edmund Lyons's steam squadron from the Circassian coast, the whole of the fleet remains at Baltschik. Various interchanges of civility have passed among the ships, a favorite recreation being little pic-nic entertainments ashore. At these cricket and quoits have been the favourite games of the English, to the great astonishment of the Turks, who muster in considerable numbers to witness the amusements which the English delight in. One of these parties has been recently given in a large summerhouse attached to a deserted Turkish villa. Near the summerhouse runs a streamlet, over which extends festoons of vines, and the garden is a forest of cherry-trees, fig-trees, and plums. A whimsical incident occurred when the party returned to the shore. Among the Turks assembled there, one staid and important looking person directed his attention to the provision basket, and, seeing among its contents a powder pot with a glass bottom, took it out, and, under the impression that it was a new kind of telescope, put the glass bottom to his eye, and viewed the ships through it so long and so intently that the ebouhoue resting on his knee went out; and finally, with a puzzled air, he returned it into the basket, saying, "Mashallah!" "Mashallah!" ("God be praised.")

The prizes taken by the steam squadron in the Black Sea had arrived at Malta, and Admiral Dundas had ordered the quinlo found on board the Highflyer's prize to be purchased for the Government. The Highflyer and two Turkish ships were about to depart for a cruise along the eastern coast of the Black Sea, in order to protect the Circassians. The greatest unanimity prevailed between the French and English officers; the former are particularly enthusiastic in good fellowship, and proclaim themselves not Frenchmen, but Anglo-Frenchmen. With regard to any attack on Sebastopol an intelligent correspondent writes thus:—"Sebastopol must wait, and wait for some time too. In the end it should be taken, but we must have an army to attack it in the rear, while the ships are occupied against it in front. At present, and without such an adjunct, it would be most imprudent and blameable to attack such a place with our ships alone. Now, we have command of the Black Sea, but if we purposely run our ships against strong batteries, behind which is a strong fleet, we may only weaken the position we now have. We must have plenty of soldiers, too, and then Sebastopol may fall."

Lord Raglan left for Varna on Tuesday night. Marshal St. Arnaud will take his departure on Saturday. Col. Scarlett, with a portion of the cavalry, is still at Kouleli.

PRINCE OF WALES YACHT CLUB.

The monthly meeting of this club was held at the Freemasons' Tavern on Friday, the 7th inst. The nine gentlemen proposed at the previous meeting were balloted for and elected, and several others were added to the list for the next ballot—amongst them, Rovenhill Pearce, Esq., of Royston Hall, owner of the Flying Dutchman, 4 tons; and J. D. Blanning, Esq., of West Hartlepool, owner of the Marmoset, just launched, 8 tons. The 18th of August was appointed for the next match, the last day of entry being the 4th of August, of the club house. The auditors submitted to the club the half-yearly report, by which it appeared that there was a good balance in the treasurer's hands. The secretary read several letters from the yacht clubs, enclosing programmes of the coming regattas. On the letter from the secretary of the Thames National Regatta being read, the club contributed six sovereigns to the funds. A yacht review—in which Ackers' signals will be used—was appointed to come off between Erith and Purfleet on the 28th of July inst.—names of yachts to be given in on or before the 21st. The Albatross and Idas are already on the list. On the 4th of August the entry for the match of the 18th of August will be made. Attention was called to the new book of rules, and, inter alia, notice of motion given that rule 10 and the new rule as to honorary members be expunged and the old rule be restored. In addition to the review on the 28th of July instant, there will be a fête ashore in Erith Gardens, and a dinner and ball à la fresco; and arrangements will at once be made to secure a special train for reaching the rendezvous comfortably. These festivities will be a novelty as well as a treat to the ladies. In the match on the 18th of August, Dr. Hutchon's prize will be contended for on certain conditions, which we shall report next week.

ROYAL WELSH YACHT CLUB, CARMARVON.

The monthly meeting of this club was held on Wednesday last, the Rear-Commodore presiding. It was announced that an alteration in a portion of the plan of the south east elevation of the new club-house would be necessary, owing to some buildings in contemplation in the yard adjoining. The Hon. Secretary was requested to procure an altered plan with full estimates, to be laid before a meeting to be called as soon as these requisites are obtained.

The following gentlemen (for the election of whom, notice was given at the last meeting) were balloted for, and unanimously elected, viz.:—Mr. John Adams, jun., Holyland, Pembrokeshire, proposed by Mr. Sampson, and seconded by the Rear-Commodore. Mr. Matthews, sen., of Wern, proposed by the Rear-Commodore, and seconded by Mr. Sampson. Mr. John Richards, of Carmarvon, proposed by the Rear-Commodore, and seconded by the Hon. Secretary. The prizes to be offered at the next Regatta (on the usual liberal scale) were decided upon. The Royal Welsh Yacht Club Regatta will, we expect, this year maintain its usual high character.

The sports will commence on the night of Monday the 14th of August, with a grand display of fireworks in the Castle, attended as usual by Rogers's excellent band.

On Tuesday the 15th, the various prizes, consisting of four elegant pieces of plate, of the respective value of 45 guineas, 25 guineas, 20 guineas, and 18 guineas, together with a host of money prizes, for rowing and sailing matches, will be contended for; and on the same night the annual Yacht Club Ball, under the usual distinguished patronage, will take place in the new ball-room attached to the Sportsman Hotel, erected by the liberality of Mr. Assheton Smith, the Commodore, the surplus funds to be appropriated towards the erection of the new Yacht Club House. A proposal of this subject, we would remind those gentlemen who have not yet announced the intended amount of their subscriptions, that the proper completion of this building must be dependent on the amount subscribed.

HOWING AT ETON.

The first heat of the annual "Pulling Sweepstakes" came off on Wednesday night, and as usual there was a large assembly on the bank. Only six boats came to the post, and it was thought that only five would appear, owing to an accident, which happened to Browning, whilst playing cricket only the day of the race. But Lloyd (the winner of last year) made his appearance with Erwin.

Just before the start, all rowed up a few hundred yards, and at the time appointed were drawn up in their respective places, beginning from the Eton shore.

FIRST ROW.
Pemberton and Lubbock, ma.	Clive and Mr. Trefusis.	Mills and Chapman, ma.
Brodrick, cox.	Lubbock, ml cox.	Gosling, cox.
SECOND ROW.
Hall, ma, and Warre.	Collins, ma, and Collins, ml.	Erwin and Lloyd.
Malcolm, cox.	Lane Fox, cox.	Thesiger, cox.

Soon after seven o'clock the gun was fired. All dashed off well together, Clive and Mr. Trefusis taking the lead, closely followed by Mills and Chapman ma, Collins ma and Collins ml bringing up the rear. In this order they continued to Bargeman's Bush, when Mills and Chapman ma failed with Hall ma and Warre, who had gained ground considerably. Now Erwin and Lloyd came up, but were slightly delayed. Here Collins ma and Collins ml took the second place, but after a hard race were repassed by Hall ma and Warre, before they had reached Lower Hope. A good race between the Hopes now ensued, between Hall ma and Warre, and Clive and Mr. Trefusis, which soon terminated in favour of the former. Collins ma and Collins ml, now coming up to Clive and Mr. Trefusis, went out in the middle of the stream, and a splendid race ensued, both boats keeping together for full 300 yards—till at last the former pair succeeded in shaking off their opponents, and obtaining 2nd place. In this order they turned the Rushes. Hall and Warre; Collins ma and Collins ml, Clive and Mr. Trefusis; Mills and Chapman; Erwin and Lloyd;—Pemberton and Lubbock ml being beaten off, owing to want of strength. In this order they continued to the finish, Hall ma and Warre winning by about 30 yards; and about the same distance between Collins ma and Collins ml, and Clive and Mr. Trefusis. There was a grand struggle between Mills and Chapman, and Erwin and Lloyd, for the 4th place, which terminated in favour of the former by only a quarter of a boat's length. Pemberton and Lubbock ml were about 30 yards behind the 5th pair. The first four will start for the final heat on Friday night. The first four boats were built by Goodman of Eton.

Time—21 minutes, 45 seconds.

THE ALLIED FORCES IN THE EAST.

(BY SUBMARINE AND EUROPEAN TELEGRAPH)

CONSTANTINOPLE, JUNE 26.

Marshal St. Arnaud, with General Rose and his staff, have left this capital for Varna, in the Berthollet. Prince Napoleon is also at the same place. The commanders and armies are thus now at the seat of war, and are ready to advance.

By another despatch, we learn that 16,000 men of General Bosquet's division had arrived at Adrianople.

The combined fleets were at Baltschik on the 24th June.

SKIRMISH WITH THE RUSSIAN FLEET NEAR SEBASTOPOL.

We learn by telegraph, via Malta, that on the 15th of June a rencontre took place between the Terrible, Furioso, and Descartes, and eight Russian steamers, near Sebastopol. No damage was done. A shell fell on board the Wladimir.

Another telegraphic despatch from Vienna says, some Russian ships left Sebastopol and fired upon the cruisers of the allied fleets. They occasioned some damage to the Furioso, and then returned to Sebastopol.

THE RUSSIAN LOAN—WARNING TO MERCHANTS.

The following appears in the Hamburg Correspondent:—Her Britannic Majesty's Mission, Hamburg, July 3.

The undersigned, her Britannic Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires and Consul-General to the Hanse Towns, having been informed by her Majesty's government that it is the opinion of the law officers of the Crown, that any subject of her Majesty contributing to the foreign loan which the government of Russia proposes to contract, or to a loan raised on behalf of a sovereign at war with Great Britain, will be guilty of high treason as adhering to the Queen's enemies; and the undersigned, having been so instructed, hereby accordingly makes the same known in all of her Majesty's subjects residing in the Hanse Towns, or parts belonging thereto.

G. LLOYD HONGES.

HAMBURG, JULY 4.

The Russian East Indiaman, the Czarowitch, which is expected to arrive in the Channel, and to intercept which three or four English steamers were despatched to cruise in the Channel, arrived yesterday at Cuxhaven (mouth of the Elbe), and is expected up here next tide. The captain heard of the declaration of war at sea, and came north about, thus evading his pursuers. If the Tartarus had been at Heligoland, she would not have failed to pick up the Russian, which must have proved a rich prize, as she has on board a valuable cargo of silk and tea from China, worth a million marks banco, or nearly £80,000. The cargo is to be landed here, and sent to Russia by land. The captain is a German, a native of Blankensee, on the Elbe.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

The following, we understand, are the regulations to be observed to-day, on the occasion of Her Majesty's visit to the Horticultural Exhibition at Chiswick:—

The gate No. 4 in the road to Chiswick House is reserved for the exclusive use of the Royal Party, until Her Majesty's departure.

Previous to the arrival of the Queen the tents will be cleared, and no one except those in attendance on Her Majesty, or on duty, can be permitted to pass the barriers.

The barriers and entrances to the tents will be placed in charge of the police; and the Council trust that gentlemen will cordially support the force in the execution of their duty.

It is most especially requested that every one will use his influence to prevent Her Majesty being inconvenienced in any way by crowding.

ROYAL MARIONETTE THEATRE.—We are glad to find that Mr. Simpson, the spirited Lessee of this beautiful theatre, has made arrangements with Mr. Mitchell, of Bond Street, in consequence of which the Groupa of Zulu Kaffirs, who lately created so great a sensation at the St. George's Gallery, and who have since appeared at all the principal courts and cities of Europe, will display their truly wonderful representation of the manners and customs of Caffreland, for a short time before their return to Africa. The exhibition is illustrated by a beautiful Panorama, painted by Mr. Charles Marshall, the eminent Artist of Her Majesty's Theatre, and is explained by a clever and excellent Lecture by Mr. Caldecott, the gentleman under whose auspices these interesting natives came to England. Altogether, this is the most valuable ethnographical exhibition that has yet appeared in this country, and we have no doubt that many thousands will visit this very interesting group.

LANCASHIRE SQUARE ROOMS.—Mr. W. H. Holmes, the eminent professor of the pianoforte, gave his third and last concert on Wednesday morning, when he was assisted by Mr. Cipriani Potter and Mrs. John Macfarren, pianoforte; Mr. Badsir Chatterton, harp; Mr. Lazarus, clarinet; Mr. C. Harper, horn; and by several of his pupils, who, by their very creditable performances, did alike honour to themselves and their indefatigable instructor. The most striking features of a copious programme were:—Mendelssohn's highly interesting and difficult pianoforte duet in A, executed with extreme brilliancy and finish by Mrs. John Macfarren and Mr. W. H. Holmes; a clarinet solo by Mr. Lazarus; a fantasia, on Tancredi, by Mr. Holmes; and Macfarren's quintet for pianoforte and stringed instruments. The vocalists were Mrs. F. Taylor, Madame Weber, Miss Lascelles, and Mr. T. Williams. The rooms were fully and fashionably attended.

STOPPAGE OF KING-STREET AND LONG-LANE, WEST SMITHFIELD.—The Lord Mayor has issued a notice for the closing of King-street, Snowhill, and Long-lane, West Smithfield, the Commissioners of Sewers being about to construct a new main sewer from the Barbican to Farringdon-street, where it will empty itself into the Fleet ditch. By the stoppage of the traffic by this important thoroughfare, persons connected with Smithfield market will experience considerable inconvenience, as cattle, &c., will have to proceed by a very circuitous and overthrown route, whether going to the east or the west ends of the metropolis. This may be complained of for a time, but the construction of an extensive sewer will most essentially benefit this densely-populated neighbourhood.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE GLOBE.

"THEATRE ROYAL, ADELPHI, July 6th, 1854.

"Sir,—I am very sorry to intrude myself in the columns of a newspaper, but you have prefaced your very flattering notice of our new drama, 'Hopes and Fears,' with some observations indicative of rivalry (to which this theatre has specially been the victim) that, with all due respect, I submit ought not to have been applied to me, after so many years of, at least, a paying management.

"Mr. Mark Leman, the adaptor of 'La Jole fait Peur,' and myself would not produce an adaptation without first obtaining the permission of the authoress, Madame Girardin, and offering her a portion of the proceeds. By adopting this course we thought to conscientiously recognise the International Copyright Act, which is considered doubtful, legally, for dramatic literature. This occasioned delay; and as it has subjected me to something like censure, I will henceforth not attempt to put down private authorship.

"With regard to the manager of the Princess's Theatre, who produced 'The Lancers' after I produced 'The Discarded Son,' I beg to inform you that my version of 'The Courier of Lyons' was licensed in March, 1851; that it was acted in March, 1851; that Lesurque was saved, as in the piece of the Princess's, which is not the case in the original French melodrama.

"As I am not one who appears by his management to possess a monopoly of the French drama, I trust you will allow me to vindicate myself from infringing on any patent rights.

I am, Sir, yours obediently,

"B. WEBSTER."

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

THURSDAY.—LORDS.—In reply to a question from the Earl of Derby, The Duke of Newcastle stated that no official information had been received to the effect that an amendment to the address had been voted by the Legislative Assembly of Canada in favour of an immediate distribution of the clergy reserves and an interference with other Church property in that Colony.

Viscount Canning moved the second reading of the Oxford University Bill, containing that in its present shape it presented an acceptable medium between an enacting and a permissive measure. It asserted the right of parliament to deal with the system of University management, but left all details to be decided by the governing body created within the university itself.

The Earl of Derby still found it difficult to waive the scruples which he entertained against the very principle of the bill. Parliament had never interfered before with the internal constitution of either of the two universities, and not only did he consider the present attempt at interference illegal, but believed that the Commission of Inquiry on whose report it originated was equally unwarranted.

After a brief reply from Viscount Canning, the bill was read a second time.

Some bills were advanced a stage respectively, and their lordships adjourned at 9 o'clock.

COMMONS.—At the midday sitting,

The second reading of the Church Buildings Act Amendment (No. 2) Bill was moved by Sir J. Pakington.

Mr. R. Phillimore moved an amendment that the bill be read a second time that day six months. Under this measure he contended churches were destroyed or removed without the consent of the parishioners, and merely because the incumbents wished to follow the wealthy members of their flocks from the City to the suburbs. It was, besides, arbitrary in its provisions, and would occasion a desecration of churchyards utterly repugnant to public feeling.

The amendment was seconded by Mr. Hatfield.

Mr. T. Drummond inquired what was the use of consecration if consecrated ground could be violated; and what was the use of bishops if consecration was useless?

On a division there appeared for the second reading, 59; for the amendment, 143—84. The bill is consequently lost.

In the evening, in reply to Mr. Hatfield, Mr. Monsell denied the truth of the statement that the engineering and mining tools applied to the British forces in the East were in sufficient quantity or of bad in quality.

Replying to Mr. Hatfield, Sir G. Wood stated that in all probability he should not be prepared to make his statement respecting the financial position of India until the 24th instant.

The House having gone into committee of supply, On the vote of the Regium Donum (£38,745) for nonconforming ministers in Ireland.

Mr. Bright questioned the expediency of continuing the grant to the presbyterian clergy. The sect comprised a number of the wealthiest inhabitants of Ireland, and did not require assistance. Observing that the grant was this year increased by a sum of £346 on account of some new congregations, he moved an amendment retrenching that amount from the vote.

Lord J. Russell defended the vote. It bore the character of a contract and the just expectations or even the subsistence of the presbyterian clergy would be sacrificed if it were withheld.

Upon a division the vote was carried in its original amount, by 142 votes to 62—57.

Several subsequent votes having been agreed to,

A discussion arose on the vote of £14,855 for the General Board of Health. The necessity of remodeling the board, and the failures which had constantly attended all its proceedings under the present management, were urgently insisted on by Sir G. Peckell and other hon. members.

Lord Seymour recommended the postponement of the vote until the provisions of the new bill had been explained to the House.

The debate was finally closed by the adoption of this course, and the vote was postponed.

The House resumed shortly after midnight.

The Youthful Offenders Bill went through committee. The Town Improvement (Ireland) Bill was read a third time and passed.

The Savings Banks Bill and the Registration of Bills of Sale (Ireland) Bill were read a second time, and the House adjourned.

FRIDAY.—LORDS.—The House then resolved itself into Committee on the Oxford University Bill, when, the clauses from 1 to 5 having been agreed to,

Lord Ward moved the following clause in lieu of clause 6:—"The Hebdomadal Council shall consist of the Vice-Chancellor, the Proctors, six Heads of Colleges or Halls, six Professors of the University, together with six Members of Convocation of not less than five years' standing, to be elected by the Convocation hereinafter mentioned of the said University, and the Vice-Chancellor or his deputy shall be President of such Hebdomadal Council."

This clause was carried on a division.

For the amendment 107

Against it 83

Majority —24

Lord Derby moved the insertion of the word "Convocation" instead of "Congregation" in the clause; which was lost on a division.

For the amendment 72

Against it 59

Majority —27

Clauses 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, and 14 passed without opposition, and the succeeding clauses up to clause 23 were agreed to with some verbal amendments.

Lord Derby objected to clause 23, but it was ultimately agreed to.

Clauses 24, 25, and 26 having been agreed to with amendments, Lord Derby moved the entire rejection of Clause 27, which provided for the establishment of private halls, and which he regarded as an innovation on the constitution and discipline of the University.

The Marquis of Lansdowne, and Lords Carlisle, Carnarvon, and Lytton supported the clause. On a division it was carried by 109 to 76.

Lord Cairns proceeded to explain the effect of certain words he proposed to introduce in the 34th clause, which seem practically to have the effect of rescinding the amendment carried by Mr. Roundell Palmer in the Lower House.

The clause, as amended, was agreed to, as well as all clauses up to 45.

To that clause, which regulates the oath to be taken at matriculation, so as to admit Dissenters, Lord Derby raised objections, and opposed its being adopted, but it was carried by a majority of 73 to 47.

The remaining clauses were then agreed to, and their Lordships adjourned.

COMMONS.—At the time of private business, a debate of unusual length, to which the theological element imparted some bitterness, arose upon the consideration of the Lords' amendments of the Middlesex Industrial Schools Bill, which, after two divisions, were agreed to.

In reply to Mr. Hankey, Lord John Russell said, it was very desirable to prevent the erection of buildings on the site of ground now vacant on the south side of St. Paul's, but the only step the Government could take for that object was by offering a large sum of money to the Corporation of the City of London.

After a conversation relating to the Newspaper Stamp Act, and another, upon the subject of morning sittings on Tuesdays, the House went into Committee of Supply upon the remaining Civil Service Estimates, and was engaged until twelve o'clock in discussing the various subjects comprised in the votes, all of which were agreed to, except one of £25,000, to make good defalcations of the Registrar of the Court of Admiralty, which was withdrawn.

The report of the Committee of Supply was brought up and agreed to.

The Commons' Enclosure (No. 2) bill was read a second time.

The Sheriff and Sheriff Clerk of Chancery (Scotland) Bill, the Married Women Bill, and the Valuation of Lands (Scotland) Bill were read a third time and passed.

Other bills were advanced a stage.

The order for the second reading of the Testamentary Jurisdiction Bill was discharged.

Leave was given for the introduction of several bills, and the House adjourned at 10 minutes before 2 o'clock until Monday.

PARISIAN TALK.

Six theatres are at present closed in Paris—the Gdeon, Grand Opera, Italian Theatre, Theatre Lyrique, Vaudeville, and Beaumarchais. In addition, the Theatre Français will be closed for repairs. The company will perform at the Theatre Italien.

A new piece, in three acts, called "Les Noces de Molière," has been produced at the Variétés with great success. Mlle. Luther, who was so popular in London, and at the Theatre Français, is creating quite a furor at Nantes.

Mlle. Sophie Cruvelli is on her way to London.

Mlle. Cerile has gone to Baden for the benefit of the waters.

A new opera, by Halévy and St. Georges has been accepted at the Grand Opera.

During the thunder storm, on Friday, a young actress of one of the small theatres, wishing to enjoy the sight, went on the balcony of her house, when she was enveloped in a sheet of electric fluid and struck down, fortunately without serious harm, thanks to a large robe of silk, which is known to be a non-conductor of electricity.

THE SELLING STAKES of 25 sovs, added to a Sweepstakes making 28 runs, he was bowled by Clarke, who had bothered him from the first. It was unfortunate for Nottingham, that Clarke was so ill that he could not take to the bowling sooner, for as will be seen below, but few runs were obtained from him, and the last five men he removed from the wickets, with the exception of Brockwell, bowled by R. C. Tinley. Surrey out for 121 runs. Nottingham started with S. Parr, and B. Parr, and for the first ball S. Parr made 3, soon after he made another good hit for 3, then 2, and then bowled by Sherman, 12 runs 1 wicket. B. Parr was joined by R. C. Tinley, and quickly removed by Lockyer, who very cleverly stumped him for a leg ball. G. Parr was soon out for 1, when Guy joined B. Parr, and after running up the score from 13 to 36, were then separated by Stephenson bowling B. Parr. The remaining 6 wickets fell for 10 runs, making a total of 40.

Surrey for the second innings sent in Caesar and G. Yates, Esq., but the latter was bowled by Clarke without making a run, and one wicket down for 2 runs. Mortlock came next, who added 12 to the score, and was out before Caesar had time to make a run. Next came Coffyn, who, in brilliant style, but with some luck, made 57. Caesar was bowled by Bickley, and Stephenson again showed some splendid play, but both he and Coffyn fell victims to Clarke. Lockyer played well, and even made 45 runs, and Mr. Miller also quickly gained 12; and when the last wicket fell, Surrey had succeeded in obtaining 103, leaving Nottingham 338 runs to get. At this point of the game there was great excitement, and about 2,000 spectators were all anxiously when Bickley and R. C. Tinley took position at the wickets. They did not, however, remain long, the one scoring only 2, and the other 5. Next came Davis, who, with Guy, made a good stand—32 runs for three wickets, Davis being bowled by Coffyn. S. Parr was out without scoring; and B. Parr, against tremendous bowling, succeeded in gaining 9 runs. Guy played well, giving much satisfaction to his county, and everybody appeared delighted to see an old favourite hit in his usual style. But G. Parr was again the hero of the day, and showed how to get a large score without giving the slightest chance. C. Brown batted steadily and in first-class style, and deserves much praise, and, as will be seen from the score below, gained 21, not out.

THE INSURRECTION IN SPAIN.

"Intelligence from Madrid to the 30th ult. states that the town was much agitated.

"The insurgents, to the number of 4,000, were at the Campo del Moro, at about a gunshot from the Palace.

"General Campanzo, Director of the Artillery, had refused to attack them, although protesting his fidelity to the Queen.

"General Lara had also refused, on the pretext that he could not rely on the garrison.

"General O'Donnell was said to have summoned the Queen to change her Ministry. Unless she did so he threatened to attack the town the same evening.

VIENNA, MONDAY EVENING.

ADVICES FROM VIENNA show that the Archduke Albrecht has joined the army; that General Leiningen, as Adlatus, acts as Governor of Hungary; that General Coronini has entered Little Wallachia, from Orsova, with 24,000 men, and that a bulgardo from Transylvania has passed through the Tomosch Pass into Great Wallachia.

THE TURKS, it appears, do not occupy the positions which the Russians abandon. This, it is understood, is a concession to Austria, which is very jealous of any exercise of the Sultan's authority north of the Danube. People are asking what is to become of the Russian flotilla when its owners shall be driven from the Danube, seeing that the mouths of the river are blockaded by the French and English. This force consists of 10 armed steamers, and 100 gun-boats. The loss of these, whether they fell into the hands of the allies, or were voluntarily destroyed by the Russians, would be severely felt by the enemy.

ADVICES HAVE BEEN RECEIVED FROM SAN FRANCISCO to the 1st of June. The accounts from the mines are more flattering than ever. Some rich deposits have been discovered, and some of the miners had made fortunes in a week. Business in San Francisco was improving. Numerous robberies had been committed in San Francisco, and chloroform had been used in some instances with success. The Chinese were suspected of being the depredators. A statement was current in San Francisco a few days before the departure of the steamer, that a Russian ship of 64 guns had fired into an English bark outside the Heads, and nearly sunk her; and that while two of her armed boats were returning from an ineffectual chase of the bark they were suddenly attacked by the English steam-frigate Virago, and entirely destroyed by a discharge of grape shot. The Russian, seeing the condition of her boats, made all sail to escape, but was fired upon by the steamer, which carried away her mainmast-gallant-mast and rudder, and she soon after struck without firing a shot, when the steamer took her in tow and made for San Francisco. These particulars were published on the 25th ult. in the San Francisco Herald by an "Eye Witness," who manufactured them, it is supposed, in revenge for having, with others, been hoaxed into chartering a fast sailing craft and proceeding out off the Heads to witness the anticipated battle.

FRANCE.

(From our own Correspondent.)

PARIS, THURSDAY, JULY 6.

THERE is some talk here of a flying visit to Windsor on the part of an illustrious personage during the approaching inspection of the army at Boulogne. Of its correctness I can say nothing, but such a visit—though not without a certain awkwardness, considering the vicinity of Claremont and its royal inmates—would do a world of good, as affixing a kind of public seal to the bond which now unites the two nations; a union which the partisans of Russia still maintain to be hollow and insincere on the part of the English Court, and some members of the Cabinet.

We are here, like you, anxiously looking out for something decisive from the seat of war; but people are beginning to be heartily tired of the electric telegraph, which, determined upon work, invents, repeats, or exaggerates its news, ad libitum. Thus the announcement of the Czar's answer to Austria—"That he would sacrifice his last rouble and his last man, rather than retract"—which has this week imposed both on London and Paris, was simply a repetition of a version given of his answer ten days before in a little German paper; but as this was before the demand could possibly have reached St. Petersburg, it was at once detected and laughed at—but not forgotten, as the very words have been made to do effectual duty, both at the Bourse here and on 'Change in London.

A complete revolution has taken place at the Grand Opera, and quite unexpectedly. You were informed some little time since of a company of capitalists having been formed to carry on the Grand Opera, who were to bring into the firm the sum of £80,000, one half destined to pay the debts of the establishment, and the other moiety to carry on the affairs of the theatre. It appears that this arrangement was so far settled, that it was looked upon as all but concluded, particularly as it was understood to have received the assent of individuals supposed to possess a certain influence, but an emphatic "No," in the highest quarter, where not the least opposition was expected, at once annihilated the whole scheme.

This veto was, it seems, accompanied by some remarks on the mode of management, which had led a theatre, so munificently supported, to fall into a state of parsimony and difficulty, and intimating that an entire change in the direction was indispensable, and altogether repudiating the pretensions of the director to turn an important government establishment into a regular trading concern. This significant hint led at once to an entire break up of the late administration, and the theatre is now ordered, as in the time of Louis the Eighteenth and Charles the Tenth, to be placed under the control of the civil list, which, as previous to the revolution of 1830, will regulate its expenditure without the intervention of the Legislature.

This veto pleases everybody, as it seems quite inconceivable that a theatre, with an annual subvention of £25,000 sterling, and average receipts of more than £300 a-night, should become in a state of bankruptcy without some extraordinary amount of mismanagement. That, however, is the extent of the charge against the late administration. M. Roque's plan is still to retain his post of nominal director, at a salary of £1,000 a-year, which, with an elegant residence, and no responsibility, forms a rather desirable otium cum dignitate.

On this subject the following statement of the receipts of the various theatres of Paris during 1853, is opportunely published by the Moniteur. I turn the accounts into English money to save trouble to your readers:—

Grand Opera (open ten months and performing three times a week), £30,360; Opera Comique (performing every night, and open all the year), £40,363; Theatre Français, £23,325; Odéon (nine months), £12,840; Lyrique (nine months), £19,950; Gymnase, £27,850; Vaudeville, £24,580; Variétés, £20,680; Palais Royal, £20,740; Gaité, £21,230; Ambigu, £21,040; Porte St. Martin, £31,710; Cirque, £27,580. All those with the time not specified were open the entire year, including Sundays.

The extraordinary quantity of rain which has fallen during the last three weeks, excites the utmost apprehensions regarding the corn and vine harvests, for no one here is deceived by the silence of the journals on the subject, a warning, and in some cases suspension, being held out as the penalty for any indiscreet disclosure on the subject. The vintage is looked on as entirely lost, and, although the corn has in many of the southern districts reached maturity, the terrific showers of the past few weeks have caused much serious damage.

On Friday last, a terrific rain and thunder storm burst over Paris; the rain was tropical, and continued without intermission for the space of three hours, and the lightning and thunder peals were worthy of an Indian typhoon. Some very extraordinary freaks of the electric fluid are reported. In the Faubourg St. Honoré, according to one of the papers, it turned on the gas and actually lighted one of the street lamps. In another locality it unshattered the leather apron of a cobbler, but Crispin escaped unscathed; and in the Faubourg St. Antoine the incandescence fulminant Jovis drew all the nails from a shutter; and throughout the town destroyed numberless chimney-pots, and miles of bell-wires. Three men were killed by the lightning, and in the garden of the Tuilleries quantities of birds were found next day lying dead on the ground. The storm appears to have expended its fury over Paris, as three miles out of town, a slight shower, with a distant rolling of thunder, was the only intimation the incolæ received of this great atmospheric disturbance.

Despite the inclemency of the weather, every train from the North brings huge cargoes of English visitors, apparently from some very remote part of the country—penitus toto divisos orbis Britannos. They are gregarious in their habits, and perambulate the streets in large flocks, and at a pace which fairly staggers such flâneurs as us Parisians. From time to time they stop to look in at a shop window, and as our travailleurs are none of the wisest, a regular blockade of the footpath takes place until they move on. Their appearance on the whole is voted somewhat grotesque, but "Vive les Anglais" is the cry of the day, and with characteristic politeness any kind of demonstration is studiously avoided which might give offence to "nos bons allies."

An application was made this week to the tribunals to declare in a state of lunacy M. de St. Pierre, son of the author of Paul and Virginia. Originally of brilliant talent, it appears that the unfortunate gentleman had sunk into a state of mental weakness. He was imposed upon by a pretended friend, who, after defrauding him of large sums, induced M. de St. Pierre to bequeath him all his property, which is very considerable. It was shown in court that he believed his father was the father of the late Emperor Alexander of Russia; that the Duke de Bourbon, of France, was his brother; that King Louis Philippe entertained such a hatred for his father that he caused his busts to be broken throughout the kingdom; that the same monarch had hired locksmiths to enter his residence and rob him; and that he had been compelled to use violence to expel them. The court, without an instant's hesitation, made the declaration applied for, and appointed a trustee to take care of himself and his property.

The reign of boobyism is extending. Among the English madmen which have found their way to Paris, the most extraordinary is unquestionably the mania for tax-paying, such as we often see noticed in the Times, in the shape of an acknowledgment of a sum paid to the Chancellor of the Exchequer by some anonymous idiot, by way of a restitution. This week we find the following in the Moniteur:—"The Minister of Finance has just received an anonymous letter, inclosing the sum of 2,000 francs, with the following words: 'Restitution to the State.' The sum was immediately paid into the Treasury." We had rather a better opinion of the good sense of the French.

COLONIAL INTELLIGENCE.

DOWNING-STREET, JULY 1.

(From Tuesday's Gazette.)

The Queen has been pleased to appoint the Honourable John Henry Thomas Manners Sutton to be Lieutenant-Governor of the Province of New Brunswick.

A COMPLAINT FROM MALTA.—A correspondent from Malta states that much inconvenience has been felt there at mistakes that have recently happened in the conveyance of the mails. Bags of letters and despatches intended for Malta have been carried on to England and Gibraltar.

THE POSTMASTER-GENERAL OF CANADA AND R—D H—L, ESQ., OF LONDON.

Malcolm.—"Hold on, Rowley, hold on! My name's M— C— from Cannidy. Tell me how to fix our Postal Arrangements."

R—d H—L.—"Go back, man, go back! THE OLD COUNTRYMAN has given you good advice! Reduce the single rate of Letters throughout British America to one Penny when prepaid. Take off the Copper from your Newspapers. 'Tis paltry impost! Admit old-county Papers free, and by some quick route! Get a lozenge-shaped blue stamp to represent the Sixpenny Postage, via Halifax, and a red one the Tenpenny rate through the States! Take off every cent, which hinders the admission of Books into the Province. I have seen bad spelling and bad grammar where I did not expect it. But you know I am never personal. There, man, let go—if you don't I'll tree you. We have to earn our money here! Let go, old C—n."—Toronto Old Countryman.

CANADA.—According to the New York papers, the Canadian Parliament was prorogued on the 23rd ult., amid much uproar, the members of the House insisting on speaking while the Governor was waiting in the Legislative Council-chamber. His Excellency's arrival being announced, cries of "Let him wait!" were heard. The Speaker could not restore order, and the Governor-General was kept waiting several minutes, during which the House was in the greatest confusion. When order was restored, and the members arrived in the Legislative Council-chamber, the Speaker, on the part of the House, informed his Excellency that he considered no session had been held. The Governor-General delivered the following speech:—

"Hon. Gentlemen of the Legislative Council, and Gentlemen of the Legislature assembled,—

"When I met you at the commencement of the present session, I expressed the hope that you would proceed without delay to pass such a law, in reference to the period appointed for introducing the amended franchise, as would have enabled me to bring at once into operation those important measures affecting the representation of the people in Parliament, which were adopted by you with singular unanimity last session. Having been disappointed in this expectation, I still consider that it is due to the people of the province, and most respectful to the decision of the Legislature, that I should take such steps as are in my power to give effect to the law by which the Parliamentary representatives of the people are augmented, before calling the attention of Parliament to questions on which the public mind has long been agitated, and the settlement of which it is most desirable to effect in such a manner as will be most likely to secure for me the confidence of the people. I have come, therefore, to meet you on the present occasion for the purpose of proroguing this Parliament with a view to its immediate dissolution."

It was understood that a proclamation dissolving the Parliament would be issued on the following day. The elections were to be over and the writs returnable by the 19th of August.

AUSTRALIANA.

LONDON.—The departures from the port of London for the Australian colonies during the past week show a decrease. They have comprised altogether nine vessels—four to Port Phillip, with an aggregate burden of 2,631 tons; three to Adelaide, with an aggregate burden of 1,637 tons; one to Sydney, of 765 tons; and one to New Zealand, of 426 tons. Their total capacity was consequently 5,459 tons. The rates of freight exhibit a further tendency to decline.

LIVERPOOL.—The total number of emigrant ships which have taken their departure from the Mersey, under government inspection, during the past month has been 51, of an aggregate tonnage of 57,540 tons, and having a total number of 21,767 adult passengers on board. Of these 32 ships were bound for the United States, having on board 13,866 passengers, composed of 2,124 English, 319 Scotch, and 9,042 Irish, and the remainder, 2,381, natives of other countries, chiefly Germans; six for Canada, with 3,238 emigrants; one for New Brunswick, with 255 passengers on board; and 12 for the Australian colonies, of an aggregate tonnage of 13,922 tons, and with 4,734 adult passengers on board, of whom 2,007 were English, 1,699 Scotch, 562 Irish, and the remainder, 466, natives of other countries.

The following table shows the names of the vessels which have sailed thence for the Australian ports in the course of the month, with their destination, tonnage, and number of passengers:—

Name of Ship.	Destination.	Tons.	No. of Passengers.
Morning Star	Melbourne	1,333	323
Invincible	—	1,769	264
Arabian (G)	Portland Bay	531	256
John and Lucy (G)	Melbourne	1,235	494
Great Britain (s. s.) ...	—	1,454	297
Queen of the East	—	1,293	432
Fitzjames	—	1,307	474
Queen of the Seas	—	1,337	542
Edward Johnson (G)	Portland Bay	907	356
Oracle	Port Phillip	1,106	311
Black Eagle (G)	Melbourne	1,468	497
Oliver Lang	—	1,236	454

The total emigration from Liverpool for all foreign ports, including the departures by short ships, or those which have not come under Government inspection, during the quarter ended June 30, was 84,230, as compared with 74,641 in the corresponding quarter of last year, showing an increase in the number of emigrants of 9,589. This is the largest number of emigrants who have sailed from this port during any preceding quarter.

EMIGRATION TO AUSTRALIA.—PLYMOUTH, July 6.—The Columbus, of 454 tons register, Captain Smith, belonging to Mr. John Timperley, embarked from the Government depot here—the complement of emigrants, numbering 182 souls, equal to 169 statute adults—on Monday, and sailed for her destination, Hobart Town, on Tuesday morning at six o'clock. Great pains have been taken by her owners to make the ship's appointments complete. The emigrants are under charge of Dr. Ronaldson. The following ships, chartered by Her Majesty's Emigration Commissioners, are appointed to embark emigrants at this port, during the present month:—The Caroline, 732 tons register, for Sydney, on the 4th of July; the Apolline, 452 tons, for Melbourne, on the 7th of July; the Lord Raglan, 923 tons, for Adelaide, on the 11th of July; the Isle of Thanet, 515 tons, for Adelaide, on the 21st of July; the Panama, 679 tons, for Portland Bay, on the 21st of July; the Duchess of Northumberland, 541 tons, for Hobart Town, on the 25th of July; and the Petrician, 1,046 tons, for Sydney, on the 28th of July. Besides these, the following private passenger ships, consigned to Mr. J. B. Wilcocks, emigration agent, are chartered to embark passengers here.—The Australia, 721 tons, and the Orient, 590 tons, for Melbourne; the Vesta, 500 tons, for Adelaide; the Harvest Home, 500 tons, for Sydney; the Vimiera, 1,057 tons, and the Anglesey, 1,018 tons, for Melbourne.

FOREIGN MISCELLANY.

DUELLING IN AMERICA.—A duel was fought on the 3rd of June, in Mississippi, near the Alabama State line, between General J. C. Saunders, of Alabama, and Judge Evans, of Mississippi. Five shots were exchanged, and both parties were wounded, Judge Evans dangerously. The difficulty arose from some harsh language used by Saunders, in reply to an address delivered by Evans before the Literary Society of the Western Military College in Alabama. Mr. Schlessinger, who had been engaged in a mock duel at New Orleans, was shot dead by S. G. Ladd, during a dispute about the affair. The fact of five shots being exchanged between Messrs. Saunders and Evans may be regarded by some as an indication of great courage, but the experience of duellists is to the contrary. The prolongation of the affair betrays nervousness on the part of one of the combatants at least. At best it is but a lamentable instance of Young American savageness, in every way at variance with the true spirit of the code. What can be more shocking than the spectacle of two respectable citizens taking five shots at each other?—New York Herald.

THE RIFF PIRATES, COAST OF MOROCCO.—The following is an extract from a letter, dated Gibraltar, the 24th of June, and has reference to the recent capture of the British brig Cuthbert Young, Marshall master, bound from Malta for England, which, in consequence of a continued calm, was set by the current within ten miles of the Riff coast, where she was fired upon by piratical boats and seized. The crew effected their escape, but the vessel still remains in the hands of the pirates, and it appears that the Governor of Gibraltar, on application being made to him for assistance in order to recover the vessel, has acknowledged that he is unable to give it.—"It is much to be regretted that our Government do not take some effectual steps to make the Emperor of Morocco responsible for the acts of these lawless and incorrigible portion of his subjects, and, until the matter is taken up in that form, it is to be feared that the commercial vessels of all nations trading to the Mediterranean will never be safe from the attacks of these marauders, when it may be their misfortune to be found near to that barbarous coast. It has been found repeatedly that no effectual chastisement can be inflicted on the sea-side, and the general opinion is, that the only effectual way of putting some check upon these depredations would be, by means of a land force, which the Government of Morocco should be called upon to send against them." The naval officer at Gibraltar has suggested that masters of vessels should be warned from approaching the Riff coast, until there is some security against these marauders.

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 22.—Yesterday was the day on which the Sultan makes his annual visit to the mosque of Top-Kheneh, prior to the Feast of Bairam, which concludes the laborious fast of the Ramezan. On this night the Turks illuminate their shops and houses with small lanterns, disposed with an elegance which might put to shame the efforts of London loyalty. The ships in the Bosphorus and the Golden Horn also displayed their outline in the darkness by means of rows of lamps carried along their entire length and up to the summit of their masts. The Sultan, quiet and nerveless as usual, went through the ceremony with becoming resignation, and his people continued their rejoicings until the dawn of day. Their shouts, and the barking of the innumerable dogs, were sufficient to drive sleep from the eyes of all but those who had earned it by a day of toil.

Feasts of all kinds are of continual occurrence. To-day the streets are hung with flags in honour of the processions of the churches of St. Antoine and the Holy Trinity. Last Thursday the Fête-Dieu took place, with a procession of St. Benedict, at Galata. The same day the procession of the Church of St. Mary enlivened the streets; and on Sunday St. Peter at Galata and the St. Esprit at the Grand Champs had their turn. The French mission patrolize these displays with all its accustomed piety.

Medical.

THE MEDITERRANEAN.—At Therapia, on the Bosphorus, one hospital has been established since December in a house belonging to the Sultan, and given by his Majesty for the use of the English fleet, situate near the beach, in the healthiest part of the Bosphorus, and having attached to it gardens and pleasure-grounds after the Oriental fashion. It has already 150 beds, is capable of containing more than 200, and is yet only regarded as an advanced hospital, based on that still larger establishment at Malta. There is also a depot in the flag-ship of extra medicines and instruments, such as quinine (ague is the disease of the Black Sea), chloroform, medicated wine (the vinous solution of quinine), tourniquets, &c. And now with regard to the medical force of the fleet and hospitals. Malta hospital has at present 50 sick, and to attend on them 1 deputy-inspector, 1 surgeon, and 2 assistant-surgeons. Therapia hospital, 36 patients, and 1 surgeon, 1 assistant-surgeon, and another on his way out. The flag-ship, 1 deputy-inspector (acting) and 3 other medical officers. The rest of the line-of-battle ships and large frigates three medical men each. All the other ships two each, down to lieutenants' commands, all of which are provided with one medical officer to each vessel. The fleet is at present remarkably healthy. The sickness in June, including every trifling complaint, amounted to only three men in the hundred.

HEALTH OF THE BRITISH TROOPS IN TURKEY.—By a letter with which we (Medical Times) have been favoured from Constantinople, dated June 15, we find that the whole force of infantry at Varna, Scutari, and Gallipoli is 21,863: of these, 821, or 3½ per cent, are on the sick list. The force of artillery is 2,108, 2½ per cent. only being sick. Of the small force of cavalry arrived up to that date, 8 per cent. were sick, but mostly from slight accidents. The infantry force is distributed as follows: At Gallipoli, 5,187, of whom 175 are sick; at Varna, 6,005, 219 being sick. The remainder of the force is at Scutari. The first division of Guards and Highlanders, on embarking for Varna, left their sick in the General Hospital: these are included in the 821. The porter had arrived, and is said to be very good, and received a great boon. All the medical arrangements are now perfect. Tea and sugar are supplied to the troops much cheaper than they can be bought in the bazaars.

HORTICULTURE.

GRAND EXHIBITION AT KENILWORTH.

On Wednesday last, several thousand persons assembled amidst the ruins of Kenilworth Castle, on the grounds of which a spacious marquee was erected, containing all that was rare and beautiful in the greenhouse, nursery, and garden. The weather was rather changeable; but as the troops became due, the company flocked to the old ruins—associated with deep historical interest. A splendid brass band was engaged, but owing to the train that brought them from Birmingham being two hours behind time, great disappointment and dissatisfaction was expressed by the committee till the cause of their absence was explained. Everybody appeared delighted with the show, and it was admitted by all (as a whole) to have eclipsed anything of the kind ever attempted in the midland counties. The stove and greenhouse plants exhibited by Lord Leigh were particularly worthy of notice. The great variety and beauty of the roses fully maintained the reputation of that flower as a favorite of the midland counties. Amongst the miscellaneous collection of variegated flowers, a bloom of the "Crpton Picton" sent by Lord Leigh shone conspicuous. A "Stanhope wardia" from Mr. Howes was greatly admired.—Fruit. Mr. W. H. Braebridge produced some good pines; Mr. West, of Alscott Park, showed some splendid black grapes; Mr. Oliver, of Comb Abbey, and Mr. J. Dugdale, of Merryvale Hall, also deserve notice. Lord Leigh exhibited some remarkably fine white grapes, as did Mr. Dugdale, Shirley, and Mr. Oliver. Peaches of great size and beauty were sent by Mr. Batley, of Rugby, Mr. Wilcox, and Captain Beech, of Brandon Lodge. Nectarines of a fine growth were shown by Mr. Newdegate and Mr. Beech. Lord Leigh showed "the only melons worth looking at," so said one of the judges. The strawberries were magnificent. Mr. Birbury, Mr. Pickard, Mr. Wheatley, of Kenilworth, Mr. C. Kinkerley, and Mr. Batley exhibited plates of this delicious fruit that astonished and surprised many familiar with such exhibitions. A miscellaneous collection of eight dishes were sent by Lord Leigh and Captain Beech. The vegetables were in great variety and abundance, and remarkably fine. The first prize from twelve sorts was awarded to Mr. Oliver, and Mr. Brickmore's samples were not far behind the leader.

It would be unpardonable to pass over the model flower gardens, which abounded with Swiss cottages, statuary, fountains, and flowers of every hue, very tastefully arranged, and perplexing the judges. There was a model of the principal parterre on the terrace at Stronley Abbey, that proved highly attractive; but to enumerate all that was worthy of praise would be a long and rather tedious task.

The judges were Mr. Poole, of Pockington, Mr. Pond, of Whately Abbey, Mr. Spilke, of Harwiel, and Mr. Dunn, of Ouy's Cliffe, whose decision gave general satisfaction.

The following are the awards—honour being coveted more than the money—which altogether amounted to upwards of £80.

THE BOTANIC SOCIETY.—The third and last fête for the present season, in the gardens of this society in the Regent's Park, was held on Wednesday. The day could not be said to be very favourable for the enjoyment of outdoor amusements, nevertheless the company was numerous and fashionable. Among the visitors were the Duchess of St. Albans, the Duchess of Sutherland, the Marchioness of Ailesbury, Ladies Entick, C. Stirling, De Tabley, Rokely, C. Cavendish, Clark, M. Farlane, Goldsmith, Petters, Buchan, C. Barrington, Marshall, Grafton, Clayton, East, Brook, Campbell, Bayley, and Evans; Lord Rokely, Lord Somers, the Bishop of Durham, Archdeacon Jones, Sir W. Stirling, Sir J. Clark, Sir J. Haze, Sir J. Easton, Sir G. Hodgkinson, Baron Goldsoid; Miss B. Conits, the Spanish, Greek, and Brazilian Ambassadors, and the Indian Princes Gholam Mahomed Aulac Sing, Runjeet Sing, &c. The splendid collection of plants and flowers were, as on the two former occasions this summer, arranged on the improved principle adopted by the society for securing effect, and providing accommodation for the promenaders beneath the continuous gallery of marquees erected by Mr. B. Edgington, of the Borough. The gold medals, which were numerous, were awarded to Mr. May, Mr. Williams, Mr. Spied, Mr. Woolly, Mr. Green, Messrs. Frenzer, Mr. Frost, Messrs. Rollisson, Mr. Hume, Mr. Giham, Mr. Gidney, Mrs. Ellis, Mr. Holder, and Mr. Ewen. The usual military bands were in attendance.

THE VALUE OF A GARDEN.—What a diversity of food comes from the garden! What a large portion of our enjoyments owe their existence to the gardener! It is not only the many varieties of cooked vegetables, in season and out, but our numerous kinds of salad, and the other claims of the dessert, that have to be traced to the gardener; and all these things, for beyond enumerating, are the result of knowledge, skill, industry, and forethought. But the nosegay in the vase, the unseen condiments in hundreds of soups and made dishes, are furnished by the gardener; and a walk into the domain where he is king exhibits his handiwork in every flower, plant, and tree, that helps to fill up the picture. The conservatory is furnished with exotics from every clime, and various horticultural buildings show proof of his skill, and the uprising thousands of young plants show what his forethought has provided, and is always providing for the future. Yet men who can do this are paid worse than ordinary mechanics, and all their labourers receive less than common porters.—Horticultural Journal and Farm and Garden Advertiser.

HOP INTELLIGENCE.—The most unfavourable accounts have reached us, both from East and West Kent, and Sussex, since our last publication. Prices have somewhat increased, and the duty is called £30,000, and in some districts much less. At Rochester it is named as low as £50,000. With favourable weather, an opinion is entertained by some planters, that from the early period of the season £150,000 duty may yet be paid; but this depends on an immediate change to hot sunny days and warm nights, without which the former estimate, £50,000, cannot be realised. In many grounds there appears but little prospect of any hops at all, the plantations have a blackened appearance, the leaves dropping off, and in some parts of one ground, as we are told by a grower, there is nothing left but bino. A correspondent of a contemporary from Lamberhurst, says—"The hops are worse—sir, and worse—sir." Hop-planters are reminded that they are required by law to make entry of their hop-grounds on or before the 1st of August, under a penalty of 40s. per acre. Proper forms for this purpose may be had, gratis, on application to the proper officers.—Kentish Gazette.

COMMERCE.

HOLLIBOCK SHOW.—It is contemplated to hold a show of these flowers in the Surrey Gardens in August. They will then be seen in perfection for the first time; for July was always too early and September too late. All those who are interested in the sale of these noble flowers ought to make a purse towards the prizes.—Horticultural Journal and Farm and Garden Advertiser.

GARDENING FOR LADIES.—One little job in a garden is particularly adapted to the attention of the fair sex. They should go out, scissors in hand, and snip off every decayed flower, especially of roses, which will grow all the better, and look all the smarter, for riddance of the dead blooms, besides lasting the longer in flower. Geraniums want their dead flowers cut off regularly, for it makes them look better, and encourages new growth and bloom. Everything, unless seed is wanted, should be deprived of decaying blooms.—Horticultural Journal and Farm and Garden Advertiser.

WATERING.—Plants in pots in the open garden must be watered regularly; even in rainy weather they must be examined, for the plant often throws all the water over the side. Many a camellia, heath, and hardwooded plant has been destroyed by neglect in wet weather.—Horticultural Journal and Farm and Garden Advertiser.

DECAYED LEAVES are the most natural of all manures in dressing; no soil so rich as that which has been undisturbed for ages, and received the annual decomposition of the trees and vegetables it bore.—Horticultural Journal and Farm and Garden Advertiser.

AGRICULTURE.

HERFORDSHIRE.—Since our last we have had some days of hot summer weather, but on Monday and Tuesday the wind was cold, with frequent showers. Hay-making has commenced in this neighbourhood; but the cut grass, as may be expected, is thin, and the light crop only will be harvested. Clover will also be very short. The fruit, we are sorry to say, is very partial; for although the blossom was most healthy and luxuriant, the succeeding frosts destroyed the hopes formed of an abundant crop of apples and pears. The hops are said to be much blighted in this and the adjoining counties. The wheat, which is now fast coming into ear, looks healthy and vigorous; but it is thin, and there will be a deficiency in straw. Barley is in some localities looking well, but it is very variable. Lent grains, generally, are very light; and the great drought has retarded the growth of swedes and turnips generally. The crops of Herefordshire may certainly be considered, this year, below the average.—Hereford Journal.

NORTHAMPTONSHIRE.—Rain has at length visited this neighbourhood. Frequent and heavy showers of rain have fallen during the week. Hay-making is becoming general, but, we regret to say, the crops fall light.—Northampton Journal.

GATESHEAD.—We have had another week of "fine growing weather"—alternate sun and rain; and never did the grain crops generally present an aspect of more fruitful promise. Grass has almost been "seen to grow," and turnips, as a sober, unimaginative farmer assures us, doubled in bulk in little more than 48 hours!—Gateshead Observer.

WHITNEY.—A great quantity of rain has fallen in the locality of Whitney during the present week, which has greatly impeded both the operations of the scythe and the general progress of the hay harvest. All kinds of crops, however, have been greatly benefited by these copious and refreshing showers, which have generally been succeeded by warm gleams of sunshine.—Carlisle Patriot.

STUDIUM FOR POTATOES.—For the last four years considerable attention has been paid at the Museum of Natural History, in Paris, to the cultivation of a plant coming from China, and known under the name of Dioscorea japonica. This plant, says the writer of a paper sent to the Central Agricultural Society, may, by its size, weight, and hardy character, become exceedingly valuable, in France, as it will serve as a substitute for the potato. Its tubercles, like those of the Jerusalem artichoke, resist in the open air the severest winter without sustaining any injury. Several specimens of these roots of very large size were presented in 1852 to the society, one of which, of a cylindrical form, was three feet in length; another tubercle, presented in 1853, weighed three pounds, the former having been in the earth twenty months and the latter sixteen. The flavour of this vegetable is more delicate than that of the potato.—Gubnyant.

IRELAND.

THE HARVEST.—The Banner of Ulster publishes an elaborate report of the state of the crops in the north, by which it appears that for years past there has not been so hopeful a prospect of an abundant harvest as that which is now fast ripening to maturity.

"High farming," says the Banner, "has been greatly extended in Ulster for the last three years, and its effects are very prominent at this season. It is evident, therefore, that 'the great millennium between poverty and wealth,' as the 'leading journal' designates the farmer, has found the advantages of scientific labour, and that, in proportion as capital and skill are applied to the soil, so will be the returns of such investments."

"Flax is greatly improved, a vast change for the better having taken place within a very brief period; and an equally satisfactory report is given of the state of the potato crop. In relation to the latter the following statistics are not without interest:—

"The value of last year's potato crop far exceeded the highest amount ever before raised off a similar aggregate of soil in Ireland. Taking the average produce of the four principal articles of culture in Ulster, the annexed figures will be found pretty close to the gross amount realized by farmers. We give the acreable quantity of land under each crop, with the marketable value.

	Acre.	Estimated value.
Oats	854,925	£4,729,550
Potatoes	229,195	6,600,000
Wheat	53,353	650,500
Flax	160,163	1,221,556

"In the above we have taken the potato crop at an average, say about £18 10s. per acre. If the prices lately obtained were to be made the ground of calculation, that average would range much beyond the figure set down. In fact, there were many instances where, at the commencement of last season, the intemperate cultivators of early potatoes realised from £10 even to £20 per acre by the sales effected in June and July. During the present week several lots of this season's crop were disposed of at £14 per ton. The description already sent is considered fair for the last week of June, and there has fairly been found any sign of disease."

BOARD OF TRADE, WHITEHALL, July 3.—(From Tuesday's Gazette.)—The Right Honourable the Lords of the Committee of Privy Council for Trade and Plantations have received, through the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, a copy of three French Imperial decrees from Her Majesty's ambassador at Paris, continuing to the 31st December next the facilities afforded by former decrees for the importation and transport of various articles of food, viz.:—The first prolongs the action of the decrees of the 3rd and 18th of August, of the 2nd September, of the 1st and 12th October, and of the 3rd of December, 1853; and those of the 11th and 16th of January of the present year, removing certain duties and restrictions on different articles of subsistence. The second prolongs the action of the decrees of the 5th September and 3rd December, 1853, which exempted cargoes of corn and flour, of rice, potatoes, and of dry vegetables, from the payment of navigation duties. And the third extends the facilities granted by the decree of December 17, 1853, for the transport of corn and flour, rice, potatoes, and dry vegetables between France and Algeria, in foreign bottoms, the same to extend to all such vessels as shall have left the port in which they lay previous to the 31st December, 1854.

TRADE IN RUSSIA.—Some trials on a small scale, made last year in Hungary, in the culture of the tea plant, having perfectly succeeded in point of quality, some more extensive experiments are again being tried this year in the cultivation of the Chinese weed.

THE MAURITIUS.—The sugar crop at the Mauritius was fast drawing to a close. It will reach 100,000 tons, of which 77,000 have been shipped to the United Kingdom, 11,000 to Australia, and 2,100 to the Cape. The last heavy winds were favourable, and the coming crop is estimated at 115,000 tons. Vacuum cleaned, 5 shs. 50 c. to 6 shs. 50 c.; raw, 4 shs. 50 c. to 5 shs. 75 c.; very fine yellow, 5 shs. to 5 shs. 10 c. The demand for freight shippers:—Banglad, 34; Cape, 24; Australia, nominal. Tobacco gum, 42 shs.; Peruvian, 60 shs. Coals are firm; current rates, 9 shs. to 10 shs. Document bills, at par. Treasury bills, 24 per cent. premium.

MARKETS.

MONEY MARKET.

MONDAY.—The English Funds opened at a decline, and were heavy throughout the day. Consols, which left off on Saturday at 93½ to 94, were first quoted at 93½ to 94, whence they receded to 93. A rally then took place to 93½ to 94, but the final price was 93½ to 94. Nothing of a positive nature transpired to account for the prevailing heaviness. Bank Stock closed at 205 to 208; Reduced, 93½ to 94; Three-and-a-Quarter per Cents, 93½ to 94; India Bonds, par to 3s. premium; Exchequer Bills, 1s. discount to 2s. premium; and Exchequer Bonds, ½ to 1½ premium.

TUESDAY.—The English Funds again opened heavily, and remained without activity until the close of business, when some speculative purchases produced an improvement. Consols, which left off on Monday at 93½ to 94, were first quoted 93½ to 94. There were then sellers at 93½ throughout the greater part of the day, but the last official price was 93½ to 94, and at a later hour transactions took place at 93½ to 94. Bank Stock left off at 207 to 209; Reduced, 93½ to 94; Three-and-a-Quarter per Cents, 93½ to 94; India Bonds, par to 3s. premium; Exchequer Bills, 1s. discount to 2s. premium; and Exchequer Bonds, ½ to 1½ premium.

WEDNESDAY.—Consols opened at the price to which they advanced on Tuesday evening after regular hours—namely, 93½ to 94, and returned to it before the official close of business, after having remained for some time at a decline of an eighth. At a later hour a tendency to flatness was again exhibited, and the final operations were at 93½ to 94. Bank Stock left off at 207 to 209; Reduced, 93½ to 94; Three-and-a-Quarter per Cents, 93½ to 94; India Bonds, par to 3s. premium; Exchequer Bills, 1s. discount to 2s. premium; and Exchequer Bonds, ½ to 1½ premium.

THURSDAY.—The English funds opened at a decline of a quarter per cent., and continued to show heaviness throughout the day. Consols, which left off on Wednesday evening at 93½ to 94, were first quoted 93½ to 94, and declined at the breaking up of the Bank Stock to 92½. The last prices, however, were 93 for money, and 93½ to 94 for the 19th inst. The Bank of England to-day made an alteration in their rate of discount (except a slight relaxation at their various branches, where the minimum charge, which has hitherto been a quarter per cent. above that in London, will now be reduced from 5½ to 5½). Bank Stock left off at 207 to 209; Reduced, 93½ to 94; Three-and-a-Quarter per Cents, 93½ to 94; India Bonds, par to 3s. premium; Exchequer Bills, 1s. discount to 2s. premium; and Exchequer Bonds, ½ to 1½ premium.

FRIDAY.—Consols for money have been done at 93 to 92½, and for the account for 93½ to 92½. Consols, at four o'clock closed without animation at 93 exactly, which was the turning point all day. There was business in Bank Stock at 207 to 209; Three per Cent. Reduced Annuitants, 93½ to 94; New Three-and-a-Half per Cent. Annuitants, 93½ to 94; India Bonds, under 1,000l., per 3s. 6d.

SATURDAY.—Consols opened at 92½ to 93, and were the same price at 12 o'clock.

SMITHFIELD.

FRIDAY, July 7.—The number of Beasts was smaller; trade, however, was not brisk, but prices could not be quoted lower. We were but moderately supplied with Sheep, and trade was consequently brisk, but it was very difficult to advance prices. There was rather more demand for Lambs, at fully late rates. There was a large number of Calves, but choicest kinds were rather scarce, consequently they were not lower. MARK LANE.

FRIDAY, July 7.—The weather continues unsettled both here and in the north of France. There was an increased disposition evinced to purchase both Wheat and Flour this morning, and the market wears a firmer appearance than of late. Several small vessels have been chartered in London this week to load Wheat for the northern French ports. Barley was steady at Monday's quotations. There was a fair sale for Oats at former prices. BONOGRA, July 3.—The accounts continue to come more unfavourable, and the few Hops on offer on Saturday this morning withdrawn from sale. Fine Sussex would bring 10l. and upwards per cwt. Porties are offering against 70,000l., but no one seems disposed to back it.

of the sun disposed merrily on the white tents of the victuallers and the gaily coloured of the jacks. How dispiriting the scene on the one hand—how gloriously exhilarating on the other! Liverpool has, fortunately, escaped the disaster of a wet meeting. The rain poured down in torrents in that busy meeting. The rain poured down in torrents in that busy meeting. The rain poured down in torrents in that busy meeting.

The performance of Orates on the mile and quarter for the Craxeth, is by no means the least noticeable of his many successes. Knowing the form of Knight of St. George and Domino at the present time, the chances might reasonably be supposed in favour of the young ones; and to give them 20lbs for his year and a hunting, proves his racing power to be of a high order. As it was, it became the sure prognostic of his conquest of Snowdon Dunhill, to whom he conceded 4lb, for the Derby Handicap, on the best days. Snowdon Dunhill, it may be remembered, beat Typer by a head for the Manchester Union Cup—the filly carrying 7st 6lb against his 7st 8lb. That Orates' opening victory, however the stable might have looked on it, was no forerunner of the success of his friend Hungerford for the cup; such luck was not in store for Rusby Park.

The result of the Mersey Stakes would show that it is but a toss-up for choice between Lady Palmerston and Stelly. Both are smart racing-like fillies, and their names are likely to be often found in the books of the professionals. Crown Pigeon was a very indifferent third. The predicted result is scarcely yet accustomed to the sight of finding Alfred Day on the selected list from the Whitwell stable.

The easy win of Midsommer, in the Lancashire Oaks, afforded sufficient proof that Sortie forgot the successful early start which Andrea last year. She has sadly failed to realise the promise she gave in her two-year-old form. Rosaline made a most gratifying debut for the season, by stalling off the very moderate Strutaway, by an easy six lengths, for the Sutton Stakes.

The cup is popularly the feature at all race meetings, and represents the larger share of the betting. In this instance, it may be said to have almost monopolised it, and yet, but few have entered the winner's name in their books. The excitement attendant on the race is far outdone by the astonishment at its result. Mr. Marland's mare, by the Ugly Duck, out of Retort, is now registered the winner of the Liverpool Cup. In her eight years as a four-year-old, she was successful but once, winning a small sweepstakes at Ripon in 1885; and this season, at 6st 6lb and 6st 7lb, she was beaten off in the Great Northern and Flying Dutchman's Handicaps, her most creditable performance being second to Nelly Hill at a distance of three lengths for the Grand Stand Plate, one mile, at Manchester. John Scott appears determined to support his application of "Wizard of the North," for assuredly no other man could perform such wonders. The intimated, looking back to the Great Northern, may well ask where would Heapy have been? The consequence of the mare's victory, doubtless, will be a vast improvement in Heapy's position for the Goodwood Stakes. But, brutal children are said to dread the fire; and no little brat has it said that the horse was not earlier struck out for the Liverpool Cup. The backers of favourites have not for a long time been compelled to swallow so bitter a dose as Ammonia has presented to them, while to the bookmakers it proves the most soothing of syrups after the hard hits they received at Worcester and Stockbridge.

The issues of Friday are still in the balance of fate when we go to press. Dirk Hatterack and Patelet are expected to contest the 200 Sovereigns Produce Stakes, and from their blood and training, much interest is excited. The result of the Liverpool St. Leger has not of late years excited much interest on the part of its great patrons at Doncaster. It furnished a great favourite two years back in Ishrael, who was prevented by a casualty from taking part in the great Yorkshire fray. Mentur, the winner in 1884, also proved a rallying favourite; but the unplaced Baron, then but recently imported from the Sister Isle, proved the victor of the selling race, adding to his success by securing the Castletwitch in the same year; and has still further perpetuated his renown by becoming the sire of those first-rate horses, Stockwell and Rataplan. Van Trump, two years later, accomplished easily both Liverpool and Doncaster St. Leger. Should Arrol win in a canter, he may do some good, if not for himself, for his stable companion, in respect to the important event of September next. Many are still prone to think that the son of Ishrael is a superior horse to Dervish; but surely the schoolmaster ought to know best.

We present our readers, this week, with a portrait of Rataplan, a chestnut colt, by the Baron out of Pucalontus. His recent numerous and excellent performances must be fresh in the memory of all sporting men. His first essay on the race course was for the Woodroffe, at Epsom, in 1882, where he failed to obtain a place; the winner being Orates, who also made his first appearance in the same race. Rataplan's maiden victory was at Highbury, where he carried off a sweepstakes of £150 for 2-year-olds; his only opponent was the Lucy Bank's colt, whom he defeated by a length. He was ridden by Alfred Day. As a 3-year-old he was out six times, dotting a win for each defeat. And this year, up to the end of June, he has taken part in no less than seventeen races, out of which he has accomplished thirteen victories.

Newton, Stamford, and Nottingham, hold out attractions of no mean order, to the lovers of racing, during the coming week.

TATTERSALL'S.—MONDAY.

Speculation was very busy with Type and Dr. O'Toole for the Liverpool Cup; both were backed for a good deal of money; the former closed at 4 to 1, the latter 5 to 1; as they advanced, Hungerford retreated to 6 to 1—100 to 50 was offered for him in the field against the first two favourites, but 250 to 100 for Dr. O'Toole against Hungerford. In the 100 to 1, the favourite was 250 to 100, he returned with renewed vigour, and at 10 to 1, had been 10 to 1, on Tuesday at 2 to 1, and a second business deal was made at about Kingston at 1 to 1, and Vicer at 1 to 1.

The Goodwood St. Leger was supported with increased strength, and a great deal of money was bet on her 5 to 1 to 2 to 1. The winner of the Liverpool Cup was regarded by many as a favourite, and the Goodwood St. Leger was 6 to 1 was taken at 2 to 1, and all the odds in several points and tens; 1,000 to 70 to 1 for a second business deal was made at about Kingston at 1 to 1, and Vicer at 1 to 1.

ST. LEGER.—5 to 2 offered on the field.
Dray.—11 to 2 taken to upwards of £200 about Graculus Esuriens (to 1) each agst the Platterer and Dirk Hatterack, laid in small sums, and 1,000 to 50 three or four times agst Strood. Closing prices:—

BETTING AT MANCHESTER.—TUESDAY.

Heapy has at length been struck out for the Liverpool Cup (viz., on Friday last, at 3.40 p.m.); that such could be the case was pretty well indicated by the long odds that were offered against him only a few hours previous to his being scratched, every effort being made to get a guinea at any price, and, as is generally the case when a horse has lingered in the market, as he has done, with such an ominous appearance, great disappointment has been incurred and great dissatisfaction given. On Saturday the chief feature was the rapid advance of The Early Bird to 8 to 1, which was taken once in hundreds and other sums as long as it could be obtained. Yesterday it was evident that Hungerford was a little shifty, 5 to 1 being currently offered, with few takers. Just previous to the close of the betting, a strong current set in in favour of Kingston, who soon advanced from 14 to 1 to 7 to 1, taken freely. Dr. O'Toole was steady at 7 to 1, having recovered the temporary shock he received in the betting at Newmarket last week. To-day Type and Dr. O'Toole were in demand at 11 to 2 each, and Kingston at 8 to 1. Hungerford was a little out of favour, 6 to 1 being currently offered. No other future event was touched upon.

THE BETTING-ROOM AT NIGHT.
A comparatively thin attendance and business remarkably dull. In the Cup betting, the prices faltered for the most part with the above quotations.

GOODWOOD STAKES.
13 to 2 agst Diana

ST. LEGER.
8 to 1 agst Dervish (offered)

The weather was fine, the running ground in excellent condition, and the muster of company of an average strength, but the amount of sport, in regard to the number of competitors, fell short of expectation. Although seven races were set down for decision, the first was not run until half-past two. This arrangement might suit the bookkeepers, but it gave great dissatisfaction to the sporting public, it being nearly six o'clock before the race was over.

SPORTING MISCELLANEOUS.

V. W. H.—Lord Gifford has completed his hunting arrangements for succeeding Mr. Villebois in the Vale of White Horse—a country with which his lordship is intimately acquainted, and where he has ever been highly esteemed, having led the same hunt before Mr. Villebois accepted its mastership.—Cheltenham Looker-on.

HEREFORDSHIRE FOX HOUNDS.—Mr. Baker having arranged to change counties with Mr. Hillier for the season, we feel pleasure in saying that he is a sportsman of matured experience, having commenced with a pack of harriers on his estate, some twenty years ago. After that he had the North Warwickshire Hounds, whence he removed into the Southwold country, and during the last two seasons has been hunting the Albrighton. He has an excellent pack of hounds, many of which were bred by himself, and they are descended from the best blood in the kingdom.

A ROVINO IRISH BANONET.—A correspondent of the Ohio State Journal has sent to that paper an account of a tour through Kansas, which is at present in possession of the Indians, but, under the Nebraska Kansas Bill, is to form a new territory of the United States. In his letter he says, "Before we passed the Kansas (river) we came upon an encampment that attracted attention. It turned out to be a grand hunting company for the plains. Sir St. George Gore, an English baronet, has taken it into his head that it will be a fine sport to hunt buffalo, &c., on our great western plains; so he packed up his trunks, and started for a regular summer campaign. He brought the most magnificent pack of dogs that were ever seen in this country. Between 40 and 50 dogs, mostly greyhounds and staghounds, of the most beautiful breeds, compose this part of the expedition. He had a large carriage, and probably a dozen large waggons to transport provisions, &c. These require five yoke of oxen to each wagon. These, with the horses, men, &c., made up quite an imposing company. Sir St. George is a fine built, stout, light-haired, and resolute-looking man. But there are other things besides fun in such a trip, and it will try the manner of stuff of which he is made before he returns."

THE PARTRIDGE'S ATTACHMENT TO ITS YOUNG.—A few days ago, as some men were mowing clover in a field in the occupation of Mr. George Dennis, of Fordham, Cambridgeshire, one of them came to a partridge's nest, but before he caught sight of it, his scythe had taken the head of the old one clean off, when it was ascertained that she was sitting on fourteen eggs just ready to be hatched.

MR. JACQUES' FOALS.—The following names have been given to the foals at Easby Abbey Stud Farm, by Mr. Jacques.—Colts: Saunterer, by Birdcatcher out of Ennui; Parole, by Birdcatcher out of Drill; Fast Day, by Birdcatcher out of Touch me Not; Sky King, by Birdcatcher out of Gipsy Queen; Sichasi, by Birdcatcher out of Queen of Carthage; Cross Boy, by Gameboy out of Hybrid, by Cardinal Puff out of Lucy Neale; Laird of the Dale, by Annaudale out of Bess. Fillies: Sky Cutter, by Birdcatcher out of Chisel; Augury (Sister to Auger), by Birdcatcher out of Nickname; Days of Old, by Birdcatcher out of Days of Yore; Walulla, by The Cure out of Utopia; Fanfaronade, by Gameboy out of Burletta.

A LETTER from Damascus of the 8th of June informs us that Captain Nolan, of Her Majesty's service, who had arrived there to purchase horses for the British cavalry, had succeeded in obtaining 100, at rather a high price. Those horses had been despatched to Beyrout, and Captain Nolan had proceeded into the desert, to continue his purchases among the Arab tribes.

FEMALE PEDESTRIANISM.—On Saturday last a female pedestrian, known as Mrs. Dunn, commenced walking 1,000 miles, in 1,000 successive hours. The place selected for the purpose is a piece of ground enclosed by a wooden paling, at the back of the Star Hotel, Rock Ferry. Mrs. Dunn is attired in the Bloomer costume, having on a short blue jacket, plaid trousers, and straw hat. She is a woman of short stature, being about five feet in height, though somewhat muscular in appearance. At seventeen minutes past five in the afternoon the lady pedestrian entered upon her task. She proceeded at a smart, steady pace, and finished her first mile in a little over thirteen minutes. Mrs. Dunn recently performed the same feat at the Strawberry gardens, Pendleton, near Manchester. She is 31 years of age, and has a family. Her eldest son, a youth about eleven years old, exhibits a talent similar to that possessed by his parent, and has already performed several extraordinary pedestrian feats. The time occupied in the performance of the task to which Mrs. Dunn has applied herself will be 41 days 16 hours, or within eight hours of six weeks.

EVIDENCE OF A HORSE.—An action was tried before the Lord Chief Baron on Thursday, in the Court of Exchequer, in which Mr. Hill, a Norfolk horsedealer, sued Mr. Phillips, a London horsedealer, for loss arising from the resale of a horse, in which the defendant pleaded the ill-tomper and holding propositions of the horse, as his reason for refusing to fulfil the bargain. While the case was proceeding, the counsel for the defence having intimated that the horse was in the immediate neighbourhood, the jury, counsel, and all the idlers about the court, were so seized with a desire to look at the animal that they adjourned en masse to satisfy their curiosity. When the horse was produced for inspection, he was mounted by the led and ridden about the court-yard; he was afterwards mounted by one of the jury, and, lastly, by the defendant himself, who put him through his paces without his manifesting any of the alleged vice. The defendant not perceiving the learned judge in the court-yard, proceeded, American like, to bring the horse into court, and actually rode him through the Guildhall, and up the steep flight of steps leading to the Court of Exchequer, and put the horse's head inside the court. The wigs and gowns mustered strongly to view the horse, and among the crowd we observed the Chief Baron, evidently displaying a considerable knowledge of horsemanship. The jury at length resumed their places, and remarked that the horse seemed quiet enough; one of their number stating that he would willingly give the money for him with all his alleged vices and bad character, and should feel perfectly secure in taking his wife and children for an airing in a carriage drawn by the horse. After an animated conversation between the counsel on either side, the plaintiff's counsel at length consented to a nonsuit.

IMPROVEMENT IN HORSE BREEDING.—Mr. Spooner, of Southampton, recommended the Council of the Royal Agricultural Society to take measures, with the Government, as well as with the local societies of the country, for improving the breed of horses for cavalry and artillery purposes, with the view of obtaining animals possessing a combination of activity and strength in the highest degree. He thought this object would be obtained by encouraging the breeding of good saddle-horses from the best brood mares capable of carrying 16 stones, by the best stallions, well, but not thoroughbred, capable of carrying a similar weight. He thought that such mares abounded throughout the country, although they were at present employed for draught and other laborious purposes. He considered that the class of male horses to be used, was the one now too frequently castrated, namely, a three-part bred bunter, capable of carrying a heavy weight up to the fleetest hounds; such an animal readily commands some £200 or £300, when his excellencies are known, and which may in fact be regarded as the most noble and valuable of the horse tribe. Mr. Spooner had little doubt that the system would, in a few years, result in the regeneration of the English breed of saddle-horses. Sir Matthew Ridley referred to the government establishments in foreign countries of Haras, for the express purpose of effecting improvement in the breed of horses. (Mr. Evelyn Donison, M.P., on the French Haras, Journal, l. 266.) In the north of England good size and absence of white colour were points to which much attention was paid. Reference was made to the extensive agency at work in this country for the purchase of the best English horses for exportation to the Continent, and to the constant advocacy, by that distinguished veteran Sir Harry Smith, of improvements in our breeds of horses for military purposes, by a restoration of the best qualities of the old English hunter.

TURFIANA.

LEICESTER RACES.—The programme for this annual gathering has been published, from which it appears that on the first day, September 20th, there will be six races, viz.:—The County Cup Stakes (Duke of Rutland, Lord Howe, Lord Curzon, and Mr. T. Stevens are the present subscribers); the Two-year-old stakes; the Leicestershire Handicap—present subscribers—Duke of Rutland, Lord Granby, Lord C. Manners, Lord John Scott, Lord Chesterfield, Baron Rothschild, Mr. R. Sutton, Mr. J. B. Story, Captain Scott, Mr. T. Parr, Mr. J. P. Cook, Mr. Herrick, and Mr. B. Land; the Belvoir Stakes, the Ladies' Plate, and a Selling Stakes of 3 sovs each with 25 sovs added from the racing fund. The second day will comprise a Handicap Sweepstakes (gentlemen riders); the Scoury Handicap, Her Majesty's Plate, a Plate of 25 sovs added to a Sweepstakes of 3 sovs each, and the Innkeepers' Plate. Baron Rothschild and R. Sutton, Esq., will act as stewards.

IRISH TURFIANA.

The Down Royal Corporation Summer Meeting commences on the Maze course on Tuesday next, and lasts three days. It is expected to be productive, as it usually is, of first-rate sport; ten events, having large money added to them, forming the bill of fare. The Downshire Stakes, for two-year-olds, is the principal race, and will no doubt bring out a large field, those having the best chance, in our opinion, being Mr. A. McDonough's Charlotte and Mr. Bradshaw's Brother to Humboldt. Master Tom will, doubtless, win both Her Majesty's Plates. An outline of the programme has already appeared in "THE FIELD."

The Ballyleigh (co. Kerry) Races are also in the list for next week. They come off on Wednesday and Thursday, under the stewardship of Alexander Elliott, Charles Blennerhassett, Robert Leslie, George Sandes, James Raymond, and Robert Cashel, Esqrs. The Bonnet Stakes, on the first day, will be the chief feature of attraction, as all the riders (who must be gentlemen) are to wear bonnets instead of caps!

The Marquis Conyngham has purchased Lord Howth's colt by Burgundy out of Remnant, but we did not learn the price given.

Mr. Balfe's Oxonian filly out of Expert has been named Milkmaid; and Mr. W. K. Reynell's Mickey Free filly out of Mosselle's dam, Raven. Both ran at the Curragh June Meeting.

John S. Clarke, Esq., of Portumna (co. Galway), sold a two-year-old colt, by Vulcan, last week, to the Hon. J. F. W. Yelverton, of Ball Isle, for 100 guineas.

In the Rotunda Gardens, Dublin, pony races frequently take place in the evening, amongst other entertainments. Three silver cups have been already won, the last, on Monday, by Mr. Douelly's Queen Mab, in four heats, over hurdles.

The citizens of Dublin are using every endeavour to collect £200 for the purchase of a cup, for presentation to Mr. William Robinson, lessee of the Conny Castle course, to be raced for every year; the cup to be challengeable, and to be won three times in succession before it becomes the property of any one person.

Entries and weights for the Belfast Borough Plate, at the Down Royal Corporation Races on Tuesday next:—The Buck, 5 yrs, 10st; Vindicator, 5 yrs, 9st 5lb; Flight, aged, 9st; Laura, aged, 8st 9lb; The Pony, 4 yrs, 8st 7lb; Lola Montes, aged, 8st; Lizars, aged, 8st, Gamekeeper, 4 yrs, 7st 12lb. For the Hillsborough Plate, same day:—Alexia, 4 yrs, 9st; Bellewstown Lass, 4 yrs, 8st 4lb; Ariel, 3 yrs, 6st 7lb.

Hunter's Irish Racing Calendar, published last week, contains the programme of the Curragh September Meeting, by which we perceive that the Anglesey Stakes, the principal two-year-old race in Ireland, has this year an unusually large entry.

A DARING FOX.—A few days since at Ballyphilip, as John Going, Esq., the able master of the Tipperary fox hounds, was standing near the fine cover on the hill known as Knock Lhawn, accompanied by a large Newfoundland dog, a vixen rushed out and made a most furious attack on the dog; what the result would have been is problematical, as Mr. Going called off the dog lest the fox might be injured, though probably with a sort of mesmeric glimpse into the next season, when, peradventure, she might have her courage cooled below the boiling point she that day exhibited, on hearing the hounds and horn, with a "tallyho!" from the clear throat of "the master," as his voice gaily resounds through the beautiful woods of Ballyphilip, making the welkin ring again.

A few days since, a fine vixen fox, and four young ones, were dug out and inhumanly "murdered," near to the covers of Castlebackett and Castle Ellen.

The contest for this very valuable and massive prize, of 100l. value and purse of 25 sovereigns, came off on Saturday, the 8th instant, on the Mersey. The steamer Iron King was engaged for the occasion, and took on board a large party of ladies and gentlemen from the Prince's pier, at ten o'clock. In addition to the officers of the club, we perceived amongst those present Mr. Hugh Hornby and the Misses Hornby, Mr. and Mrs. B. Heywood Jones, Miss Tobin, Mr. and Mrs. H. Grey, Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Molynoux, Miss Roys and Mr. N. Roys, Mr. G. R. and Miss Woodward, Mr. H. and Mrs. Schwabe, &c. The morning was promising, and continued fine throughout the earlier part of the day; and it was only at the close of the proceedings that the rain set in. The wind was from the N.E., and was a whole-sail breeze. The steamer, with her party on board, enlivened by Mr. Gribbin's excellent band, started for the Birkenhead Ferry, where the rear-commodore, Mr. Jonathan Grindrod, had, with his usual ability and practical knowledge, placed the contending yachts in their respective stations, ready for the start, which took place from the signal-gun of the steamer, under the orders of the vice-commodore, Mr. B. H. Jones, who on this occasion officiated in the place of Commodore Littledale. At about eleven minutes after eleven o'clock the yachts were soon canted round to the wind, and set off on the starboard tack down the river. The Stanley appeared the first to feel the wind, and closely followed by the Electric, Challenge, the Blue Belle, Cynthia, and Corallo close after. The yachts, on arriving off Bootle Bay, caught a good breeze, which soon altered the position of the contending vessels. On arriving at the Crosby Light-vessel the Corallo took the lead, showing her power of sailing to windward; and, contrary to the expectation of many persons, the Cynthia fell off some distance. The Electric, a small yacht of eight tons, kept up most admirably with the leading yacht, and maintained this position for some time, until the Northwest Light-ship was made, followed by the Challenge, Blue Belle, and Stanley; but as the interest of the race was about this time concentrated between the Cynthia, the holder of the cup, and the Corallo, we shall briefly record their positions. On passing the Bell-buoy a little way, the Cynthia, by the wind becoming more free, passed the Corallo, and for a long time there was considerable doubt by those on board the steamer if she would be able to take the cup from her larger opponent. On arriving at the N. W. Lightship the Cynthia rounded first, about five minutes before the Corallo, and continued to lead; but, on the second turn round the Light-ship, the Corallo had gained some little distance on her antagonist. The breeze now freshened, with an appearance of rain, which came on later in the evening. In the run back again to Birkenhead the Corallo was very smart in setting her large topsail, which, when fairly set, was of great service to her. The Cynthia, on account of the breeze having increased, seemed to bury her hull, and stopped her much. The Corallo likes a breeze, and kept her bows well out of the water, and sailed before the wind very beautifully, and to this circumstance we are inclined to attribute her success, and the following time taken at the arrival of the winning-post will show that she became the winner of the prize. The Victoria yacht, belonging to the hon. secretary, was the Flag-vessel, and was decorated with flags, and at anchor off the Birkenhead Ferry.

The time of arriving was carefully taken by a chronometer watch, under the inspection of the vice and rear commodores, and was as follows:—

	M.	S.
Cynthia	6	9 21
Corallo	6	12 40

The Cynthia being fifty-one tons, and the Corallo thirty-five, the former yacht having to allow the latter seven minutes and three-quarters for difference of tonnage by the laws of the club, the Corallo became the winner, having four minutes and twenty-six seconds to spare. The other yachts arrived some time after, but as they were out of the race we do not give their time. The owner of the Corallo, Mr. A. E. Byrne, came on board the steamer to receive the reward of his well-earned labour; and he has certainly much to be proud of in his very fine craft having won this very noble prize this year, in addition to that of Her Majesty's Plate won by him last year against the Cynthia, which yacht, however, it is but justice to record, is a very fine vessel, and in a light wind we believe her to be a difficult vessel to beat. Nothing daunted, we hope Mr. Roe, her spirited owner, will again try his fortune for this prize next year, and we are sure that his friends the Mersey yachtsmen will be very glad to see him again. The prize and purse were presented to Mr. Byrne by the Vice-Commodore, who complimented him on his success; and a liberal supply of champagne was supplied by Mr. Byrne to the ladies and gentlemen. Several toasts were drunk, and among them those of the Vice-Commodore, the Rear-Commodore, Mr. Mellish, the hon. secretary, and Mr. Fletcher, the cup-bearer, which were cordially received and responded to by them. The company shortly after seven o'clock separated, after wishing every success and future prosperity to the Royal Mersey Yacht Club, and delighted with the day's amusements. Mr. and Mrs. Oakes, of Lord-street, supplied the wines and refreshments, which were of the very best quality.

We have pleasure in adding to the above report the time of rounding the several points, for which we are indebted to one of the most unflinching and staunch yachtsmen now to be found in any of the clubs.

PRINCE OF WALES YACHT CLUB.

In our second edition of last week we gave a short summary of the proceedings at the monthly meeting on the 7th inst., but want of time prevented our giving full particulars.

The sailing committee met previously, and appointed the 18th of August for the next club match. The course, Erith to the Chapman Head and back. The prizes, 1st, the Yarra Yarra Stake, the gift of Dr. Hutchinson; the 2nd, a silver cup; the 3rd, also a piece of plate;—both club prizes. The 4th of August will be the last day of entry, at the club house. The committee have signified their intention of chartering a larger steamer than that hitherto used, the accommodation, for ladies particularly, being insufficient; but as this involves a larger expense to the club, we hope members will stir themselves to dispose of tickets. We should recommend the Mars as a capital boat for the occasion.

It was also decided on having a squadron of evolution, with prizes for naval tactics, by way of interlude to the next match, and the 28th inst. was the day fixed; the last night of entry the 21st, at the club house; no entrance fees; all yachts under 8 tons. We shall give further particulars in our next. It will take place off Erith. The gardens will be engaged for the private use of the members and friends, and a dinner and ball à fresco will form part of the programme. No steamer will be chartered, as there is easy access by rail from London-bridge.

The nine gentlemen proposed at last meeting were duly elected; amongst them, J. B. Thomson, Esq., yacht Black Prince, 4 tons; T. H. G. Snowden, Esq., yacht Fairy, 3 tons. Ten gentlemen were placed on next ballot-list; amongst them, Frederick J. Divers, Esq., Flying Dutchman, 4 tons; John D. Blinling, Esq., Marmoset, 8 tons; Edward D. Hutt, Esq., Little Duchess, 12 tons; and Robert Leach, Esq., Ottila, 7 tons. We are glad to see this clipper again in the club-list, as she has proved a winner. C. H. Tidbury, Esq., the energetic secretary of the Thames National Regatta, is also on the list for election.

The minutes of the last meeting having been read and confirmed, and the above business discussed and disposed of, and several communications from R. Y. Clubs read by the secretary, a discussion took place respecting certain alterations in one or two of the rules which seemed to give dissatisfaction to members, and we are happy to say a notice of motion was drawn up in accordance with the views of all parties. The business was all completed by 10 o'clock, and some excellent singing followed; and we are pleased in observing that general harmony and good feeling again forms a leading characteristic of this club, and may nothing occur again to disturb it.

The next conversation will take place on the 21st inst., when iron against wood for yachts will again come under discussion, and members are invited to take part in it. We had almost forgotten to state that the donation of £50 from this club to the Thames National Regatta was announced.

ROYAL LONDON YACHT CLUB.

The monthly meeting of this club will be held at the Caledonian Hotel, Adelphi Terrace, on Monday the 17th instant, at eight o'clock p. m. precisely. Members wishing to dine at the club dinner at six o'clock on the evening of the meeting, are to give notice of their intention to Mr. Elder before two o'clock on that day. Each member may introduce one friend, upon giving such notice. Owing to the Lowestoft Regatta being fixed to take place on Tuesday the 18th, the officers and many of the leading members of the London Club will be absent from the meeting of Monday. The following candidates are on the list for ballot:—Mr. C. T. Faulkner, Mr. Frederick Heritage, Mr. Thomas Cotter Gash, Mr. Houghton C. Okeover, Mr. John Turnbull, Mr. Edward Waikin, Mr. Thomas Wilson, senior, Mr. David Wilson, Mr. George Cam-

MEDWAY YACHT CLUB.

The monthly meeting and dinner was held at the Sun Hotel, Chatham, on Monday the 3rd inst.; the Commodore in the chair. The regatta is expected to come off next month, when several prizes will be contended for, and afford the yachtsmen of the Thames a chance of displaying their dexterity on the waters of the sister river.

ADVENTURE AT CONSTADT.—On the 27th of June last the yachts Emeralda and Gondola were taking a pleasure trip round the English steam squadron, and, in order to reconnoitre a little, they reached in within about four English miles of the entrance of the harbour of Cronstadt. They were in a short time surprised by a Russian steam-corvette steaming out at full speed in chase of them, to try to cut off their escape. They, however, started sharply home, and gave them the full of their sails, and after three tacks they were safely under the protection of our steam squadron. One of our steam corvettes, thinking it a good opportunity to take the measure of the Russians, got up steam and proceeded towards her. This was rather too much for her; the Russian corvette very soon put down her helm, and ran at full steam power for the harbour. At the time these yachts were reconnoitring, sounding, &c., there were five English captains of the fleet on board of them, and also a British pier.

OFF CRONSTADT, June 30.—Admiral Sir Charles Napier with upwards of 30 sail, 18 of which are line of battle ships, will remain off Cronstadt until further instructions from the English Government. The yachts Emeralda and Gondola have been in company with the fleet for several weeks past. The latter has on board the Earl of Lichfield and the Earl of Euston, M.P. It is said the Duke of Sutherland's yacht will also visit Cronstadt, with his grace on board.

GRAVESEND.—For the past week there has been a larger assemblage of yachts than we have noticed here for some time, among others were the Lilly of the Text, Acorn and Novice schooners; Marina, Margaret, Drift, Senflower, Phantom, and Little Mosquito cutters; and Vixen, yawl, two of which bore broad pennants, namely, the Novice, that of A. Archibekne, Esq. of the Royal Harwich, and the Vixen, that of J. G. Holman, Esq., of the Medway Yacht Club, in the course of Monday and Tuesday, most of them got under weigh and stood to the eastward for Harwich and Lowestoft Regatta.

THE RANELAGH YACHT CLUB.—At a meeting held at the Swan Tavern, Battersea, on Wednesday evening last, a club was formed to be called the Ranelagh Yacht Club, limiting its members to 50, to afford the owners of small yachts of the maximum tonnage of seven tons an opportunity of testing their powers on the River Thames, above bridge, as it is many years since the Royal Thames Yacht Club ceased to sail their matches over that course. The meeting was well attended, and after the preliminaries of selecting a chairman, business was commenced by the proposed rules being read, which were unanimously agreed to. The attention of the meeting was then drawn to the selection of their officers, when Mr. Tomblin, R.N., one of the few survivors of the Victory battles, was unanimously elected commodore; Mr. E. Guest, vice-commodore; Mr. F. Dunbar, hon. secretary; and other gentlemen to fill the usual offices of the club.

TORQUAY REGATTA has been fixed for Friday, 4th August, being two days after the Plymouth.

IRISH YACHTING INTELLIGENCE.

ROYAL CORK YACHT CLUB.

A special general meeting of the members of the R. C. Y. Club was held on Thursday, the 6th July, Sampson T. W. French, Esq., in the chair, when it was resolved in consequence of the lateness of the season that no regatta will be held this year, but that next year a regatta will be given worthy of the "Old Royal Cork."

After the business of the day was concluded about forty members sat down to a dinner prepared by Mr. B. G. Martin, the steward of the club; who by his excellent arrangements and the manner in which everything was cooked gave promise of what might hereafter be expected from his skill. A number of appropriate toasts were drunk, and after a most pleasant evening the company dispersed at a late hour. During the above meeting the following gentlemen passed the ballot and became members of the R. C. Y. Club. Ordinary Members—George Crawford, William Oliver Jackson, Colonel Hickman, Thomas Henry Hewitt, Alexander Law, Thomas M. Osborne, John Carroll.

DUBLIN BAY.—The arrival of the Cynthia at her moorings in Kingstown without her distinguishing flag was a sad clamor to her owner's friends and backers. Her success, and consequent retention of the Challenge Cup won by her last year, and sailed for on Saturday last in the Messy, being looked upon as almost a certainty. The Cynthia, however, proved herself a good one, and won upon her time for tonnage by three minutes, and holds the Cup till another trial comes off next year. We hear that a very large muster of yachts is expected at Kingstown during this week, and the bending up for amateur crews for the Corinthian Cup given by the Royal Western of Ireland, to be sailed for on Thursday and Friday the 20th and 21st, is carried on with great vigour; the exhibition of a Club button invariably calling forth the question—Do you understand either sailing? Can you go aloft and set a topsail? &c., &c. The value and the number of the prizes to be competed for next week, has given a great stimulus to the clubs here, and the balloting has been going on vigorously. The Commodore of the St. George's, the Marquess Conyngham, is expected in his new craft the "Fairy" schooner, 143 tons, at the end of the week. The Vice-commodore Lord Orchofield is already afloat in the Blanche, and under his flag are the Cynthia, Coquette, Gitana, Julia, Waterkelpie, Phaunton, Wizard, Jilt, Fay a way, and several others. The Royal Irish are without a flag-officer, but have a considerable number of yachts afloat. The Royal Western (Ireland) expects the arrival of their commodore, R. Bath, Esq., in the Magellan yawl, 63 tons, and Vice-commodore Stopford in the Water Wyvern, 42, is already here, the club yacht Owen Glendown will be at Kingstown this week. The members of the St. George's, have presented a beautiful piece of plate to the Royal Irish, and all the clubs are exerting themselves to the utmost to ensure the success of the regatta, which has been got up under the most favourable auspices.

LOUGH DERGE YACHT CLUB REGATTA.—The above regatta will take place under distinguished patronage on Tuesday the 25th, Thursday the 27th, Friday the 28th, and Saturday the 29th of July. The sailing will take place off Ballyvalley, near Killaloe, in Donineer Bay, and on the Shannon, at Portunna.

LOUGH SWILLY REGATTA.—This regatta will be held off Rathmulla, on Lough Swilly, on the 3rd of August. The 28th inst. was the date originally fixed on, but in consequence of the Donegal Assizes interfering, the committee have deemed it prudent to alter the time.

* * We shall feel obliged by the Secretaries of "Rowing Clubs," and others, forwarding their appointments of Matches or Notices of Meetings to come, at their early convenience.

LEANDER CLUB BOAT-RACE.

The gentlemen of the great Leander Club rowed their annual race on Friday evening, the 7th inst.; and it is to be regretted that it was not more generally known that the match was to come off at that time, as it was a very animated contest, with a variety of changes in it which rendered it peculiarly interesting. The distance was, as usual, from Vauxhall to Putney.

Messrs. Webber and Prior	..	..	..	..	1
Goulding and J. Davis	..	..	..	..	0
Davis and Twining	..	..	..	..	0
Woodbridge and Willoughby	..	..	..	..	0

Two other boats started, but were behind the greater part of the course, although making good play at first. Of these Messrs. Bivil and Cameron took a slight lead, followed by Messrs. Woodbridge and Willoughby, who were closely pressed by Messrs. Goulding and Davis, and a most capital race it was all the way up. At Battersea Bridge Messrs. Goulding and Davis were first through, then followed Messrs. Woodbridge and Willoughby, next Messrs. Davis and Twining, and then Messrs. Webber and Prior. The race was here continued with the greatest spirit, and amongst other changes with which it was diversified, Messrs. Webber and Prior passed the whole of the other boats, and reached the first position at Wandsworth, ultimately winning by two or three lengths; Messrs. Goulding and Davis being second. The gentlemen were started by James Parish, their coxswain.

THE NORTHERN ROWING AND GYMNASIUM CLUB.

PATRON.—The Right Honourable the Earl of Carlisle.
PRESIDENT.—Mr. Michael Buckley, Adelalde Hotel, Newgate-street, Newcastle.

CAPTAINS.—Mr. G. G. Taylor, Gosworth-street, Shieldfield, Newcastle; Mr. Henry Clasper, Benwell Boat-house, Benwell.

TREASURER.—Mr. Robert Newton, Pilgrim-street, Newcastle.

SECRETARY.—Mr. Joshua Baguel, 5, Nuns'-street, Newcastle.

COMMITTEE.—Mr. Robert Coulson, Dean-street, Newcastle; Mr. Martha Taylor, Dean-street, Newcastle; Mr. James Patterson, Church-walk, Gateshead; Mr. C. R. Spraggon, Porth-cree, Newcastle; Mr. Andrew Lawrie, Cottenham-street, Newcastle; Mr. William Wren, Market-street, Newcastle; Mr. James Haddock, Newgate-street, Newcastle; Mr. Kenneth Hall, Dean-street, Newcastle; Mr. A. Vickery, 1, Pollock-street, Gateshead; Mr. John Gillings, Gateshead.

Subscription, half-a-guinea per annum, payable in advance.

The Committee of the "NORTHERN ROWING AND GYMNASIUM CLUB," beg leave to state that the above society is formed for the promotion of Water Sports and Athletic Exercises among the Middle and Working Classes, the principal object being to rent or purchase a suitable site for the purpose of erecting a Boat House and Gymnasium on the banks of the Tyne, and to raise the necessary funds for the purchasing of boats, &c., for the use of its members.

In order to carry out the above plan effectually, the Committee, in compliance with the wishes of several friends of these healthy and exhilarating exercises, not becoming so popular in this country, have resolved respectfully to solicit the patronage and assistance of the nobility, gentry, and inhabitants of Newcastle and neighbourhood, for their support in furtherance of the above objects; and they feel convinced that the assistance of a few honorary subscriptions, in addition to the large number of Members, who have already joined, would materially aid them in carrying out the objects of the Club, and afford an inducement to further exertion.

The committee beg respectfully to express their opinion that the sport in this town has hitherto not received that encouragement it deserves; and it is generally admitted to be a mainly, healthful, and national exercise, unobjectionable in a moral as well as a physical point of view; and the committee are fully convinced that these exercises will have the effect of removing the attention of the people from such sports as have a vulgar, immoral, and degrading tendency, and will to a great degree be the means of lessening dissipation.

The committee beg to inform the public that the Club will admit all classes, but it has been established chiefly with a view to the recreation and amusement of the middle and working classes; and they vain hope that as the early closing movement is making rapid progress, the young men of the town may add, as a change to their instructive studies, the manly aquatic exercise of boat-pulling; and, in conclusion, they beg to assure those gentlemen who may coincide with their views above expressed, that so long as the management rests with them, they will endeavour to ensure such regulations in carrying on the Club, that they shall not discredit any patronage with which they may be honoured.

JOSHUA BAGGALL, Hon. Secretary.

THAMES NATIONAL REGATTA.—The Elswick crew left Newcastle on Wednesday last by steamer for London, bringing with them a handsome new boat, built by Jewett, of Dunstan; the names of the crew are C. Winship, T. Bruce, W. Davidson, and Mark Cook, of Oxford. On Saturday next H. Clasper leaves the Tyne for the scene of action, also bringing with him a new boat built by himself, the one in which his crew won the principal race at the late Durham Regatta, and a first-rate crew, consisting of himself, his youngest brother Thomas, Samuel Wood, of Manchester, and his old opponent Anthony Maddison. These two crews for muscular development will, perhaps, not be equalled; and the crew that defeats either of them may with confidence consider themselves one of the best, if not the best, crew in Europe. Candlish will also accompany Clasper's crew, as both he and Harry intend rowing in the Sculler's Race; Bruce and Winship will represent the Northern division in the oars contest.

MATCH AT RICHMOND.—The distance rowed was from opposite the "Angler's," Teddington, to the end of Lady Dysart's Park, Richmond; and the two-pair oared gigs were as follows:—Dark blue—Stroke, H. L. Farrer and Alfred Firth; Coxswain, J. Price. Pink—Stroke, W. Farrar and Fred. Firth; Coxswain, J. Inglis. Pink had the lead for the first three hundred yards, when Blue gradually passed them, and at Pope's Villa were two clear lengths in advance; but Pink, by some plucky pulling, succeeded in once more catching them, and after pulling ear to ear for a short distance, Blue once more gained the lead, and although closely pursued by their adversaries, managed to improve it—by the time they passed the winning post, to three boats length clear. The boats rowed in were two new gigs of Wheelers of Richmond.

STOWE.—During several days in last week the Duke of Buckingham and friends had some excellent fishing in Stow Park waters, which abound in fish of size and quality fit from common. A jack of 18lbs. was landed, after an unsuccessful combat with his captor.

SPORTING EXTRAORDINARY IN THE FAR NORTH.—F. P. Whithead, Esq., Lomberoy, Sutherlandshire, killed, with his own rod, on the Oichie, from the 19th to the 24th ult., inclusive, 37 salmon, averaging 10lbs each. We believe this to be unprecedented in angling in that district of country.—North British Mail.

WESTMEATH LAKES.—The "greendrake" has made its exit from those justly celebrated waters, and as to the amount of either profit or pleasure which the season has afforded, we regret to state that the disciples of old "Isaac" have not been as amply rewarded as on previous occasions. The appearance of the drake was slow in its approach, but only equalled in its extent (when it at last appeared) by the brevity of its ephemeral existence. Some good days have occurred, and the "knowing ones" have been successful, but, generally, it is to be ranked amongst the second-class seasons.

ANGLING ON THE MOY.—This sport was excellent on Monday. Major Beddam killed 7 salmon; Captain Preston, 5; Mr. Walton, 9; Mr. Ford, 8; Mr. Simpson, 6; Mr. Laseilles, 5; and Mr. Vesey, 3—making in all 44 salmon landed that day by these seven English gentlemen.

GAFFING SALMON.—Two very fine salmon were found dead in a net, near Galway, a few days since, having been killed by a gaff, or strokeall. They weighed about 7lbs each. The middle of one of them was actually excavated by the implement, and the other laid open by a frightful gash. Such a barbarous and revolting practice should be immediately suppressed.

RAILWAYS AND TELEGRAPHS.

WIRES CUT.—A few nights since some ill-disposed persons cut four of the six wires belonging to the European and American Electric Telegraph Company, at a spot near Brackley, Northamptonshire. With the view of ascertaining the authors of the lawless act the company offer a reward of 20l.—Banbury Guardian.

SWEDEN.—The telegraph line from Stockholm to Helsingborg is now ready, and is immediately to be inspected by Major-General Akrell and Captain Falmehjelm. There now only remains the laying-down the wire over the Sound, to connect it with the Danish line at Elsinore. No time will be lost in doing this, and the whole will probably be opened before the close of this month. This will be of great consequence in military operations.

COPENHAGEN, July 6.—The railway is progressing rapidly at Rendsborg and Flensborg.

Runs—1st innings, 137; 2nd innings, 67. A judgment, founded on results is of little value, and so, judgment upon the noble Captain who managed the Zingari team, is deferred.—J. L. B.

OXFORD NORTH WARD v. WARBOROUGH.

The return match between the above elevens was played on Port Meadow, Oxford, on Monday last, and terminated in favour of the Oxonians, with 67 runs to spare.

In the first match played at Warborough, a few weeks ago, when the Oxford youths were victorious, both elevens were under 21 years of age; but on this occasion the villagers could not command the services of several of those that played in the first match, in consequence of their being occupied in the hay-fields, and veterans of rather long standing were substituted, to which the Oxonians made no objection.

The occasion was graced by the presence of many of the fair sex, whose appearance doubtless contributed much towards the favourable conclusion of the game, by inspiring the northern competitors with an unusual degree of confidence, which was evinced by the great increase of their score in the second innings.

BRIGHTON CLUB v. WORTHING.

Nothing suits a good old Englishman better than a fine day, a good team, and powerful opponents. Such was the case on Tuesday the 4th, when the above parties met upon Broadwater Green, to try their strength with bat and ball. The green, thanks to the Marquis of Anglesea, was got into splendid condition, and much good play took place. The Worthingians earned out an en masse, including ladies always number, to witness the match. Marquises were crated by the noble Marquis for their special use, and duly appreciated by them. Where all was good it would seem inevitable to particularise; but we could not help noticing the steady play of Lord H. Paget. He will, most undoubtedly, become a great acquisition to the Zingaris, in whose ranks he played upon this occasion. Lord A. Paget, too, made a good defence, but was eventually caught close to his whisker. J. A. Raynes, Esq., made two fine innings, for 20 and 16; this is a very promising young player. The howling of Hay and Pacer was first-run. On the part of Brighton, the batting of C. Carpenter, Esq., and F. Ravensell, Esq., was much admired, and their long scores might be said to win the match for them. The slow howling of — Munster, Esq., made sad havoc with the Worthing second innings, and his fielding at the point was like Lord Paget's, extremely good; nothing came amiss to either. After a tie in the first innings, Brighton won with five wickets to go down.

Our Feller-Rag

REVIEW, BY THE EMPEROR, OF THE FRENCH TROOPS FOR THE BALTIC.

the Oxford Bill, which, in the third night of discussion was read a third time and passed. In a journal in which the interests of animals are very largely advocated, we must not omit to state that the House of Lords has been pleased to legislate for the prohibition of the use of dogs as beasts of draught; and a quantity of curious, if not very valuable, zoological speculation has been elicited during some rather animated debate upon the matters.

Of France we have spoken. From Vienna we hear (somewhat early under the circumstances) that the young Emperor is likely to perpetuate the line of Hapsburg. From Spain we learn that the revolt, at present, wears an unfavourable aspect for the revolters, a larger portion of the army remaining more loyal than was anticipated.

A glowing letter from Abd-el-Kader to Omar Pasha has appeared in the French papers. The African hero exults in the triumphs of the gallant defender of Turkey, and declares that he has had a brilliant dream of Omar's successes. Abd-el-Kader should lay his lance for the head of the Mahometan world—

"One blast upon his bugle horn
Were worth a thousand men."

A melancholy loss to the world of lyric art is recorded in our obituary of the week. We learn that the amiable and accomplished Madame Soutag (Countess Rossi) has fallen a victim, in America, to the cholera. Her success as a girl, and her return to the stage to repeat that success as a matron, will not soon be forgotten. Her last season in London was during Mr. Lumley's final campaign at Her Majesty's Theatre, where the deceased lady was ever a favourite.

ADIEU OF COUNT DE PERSIGNY TO THE EMPEROR LOUIS NAPOLEON.

The following graphic warning is reported, in the salons of Paris, to have been the last words uttered by the late Minister Persigny to the Emperor of the French upon taking his leave:

"Adieu, Sire! Fould will sell you, Baroche will judge you, and St. Arnaud will execute you!"

The Parisians to the full approve of the Emperor's judgment and determination in the affair, but consider the above a shrewd estimate of the parties alluded to by Persigny,—to whom the Emperor, with his usual generosity and remembrance of services, has been most bounteous.

THE SUBLIME AND THE RIDICULOUS.

From the sublime to the ridiculous there is but one step, and certainly, if we have not taken that step, we have approached it so nearly, both in our domestic and foreign policy, as even to make the Times to blench. Bill after bill fades from our vision, and, like the issue of Banquo, the line seems as if it would stretch out to the crack of doom. The House of Commons has ceased to be the pioneers who should lop off the festering limbs of the monsters of abuse, and remove from the oppressed breast of the country the place-hunting men who weigh upon her trade, and are stifling her freedom. Mirabile dictu! for liberality we must exclaim, "Thank Heaven we have a House of Lords!" Electors, look to this, and let it be a warning for the future. The disease is in the lungs and heart of your representatives, so be not deceived by the hectic flush of health, which coughs down every attempt at improving the constitution by enlightened legislation. Reform is now a cant phrase, a gag, a claptrap word, full of sound and fury, signifying nothing. For ages, we may say, the Charitable Trusts have been a corrupt and bottomless well, not of truth, but filled with the wheel-within-wheel animalculæ, that absorb, each into its sinful vortex, the proceeds intended for the keep and education of the poorer classes of society; sacrilegiously laying hands on the holy gifts of the good and pious, long departed. Last year a bubble was blown, sparkling with the prisms of oratory, at an expense of £15,000 a-year, and called the Charitable Trusts Bill, but so utterly powerless as to be unable of itself to remove the smallest evil with which these glorious institutions are encrusted. They may, like good butlers, decant the wine, but must not shake the bottle for fear of disturbing the accumulation of years, nor go quite to the bottom; neither must a strainer be used, lest you destroy the B's wing; so we are left the lees of the job lot to brag of, and John Bull, "though nothing can come of nothing," must continue to pay his £15,000 a-year and look agreeable, because, in Parliament, while there is a place there is hope. Again, can anything be more removed from the sublime than our foreign policy and our war administration? Not one large or decisive movement, by sea or land, has yet been undertaken, though our men are eager for the fight, and quite half the season for operation has passed away. If the shades of Wellington and Napoleon were permitted to visit the glimpses of this half-moon war, how would they upbraid the tardy spirits at home and abroad, and prick the sides of Austria's doubtful intents? The solving of the riddle seems to be, Give time to Russia, that she may repair and prepare. Honour among thieves. Austria never was, nor never can be true, either to herself or others. It is in the blood of the beast, and we are, in every relation of life, cozened by Germans. It is a proverb in Russia, in France a fact, in America a prediction, and in England a foregone conclusion. Many-tongued rumour is busy with reports rife with rotteness at the core of our State. The Morning Herald tells us, "on good authority," that Count Pahlen is among us,—a Russian employé, and son of the impulsive traitor, Count Pahlen, who forcibly locked the Empress of Paul I. in her room, while the regicide of her husband (the father of the present Czar) was perpetrated,—that he is here on a diplomatic mission, and has been introduced at a West-end club by a Cabinet Minister! Strange if true, but not to be wondered at. The Morning Advertiser states, that though a strong feeling was evinced in the Cabinet Council of the propriety of substituting Lord Palmerston for the Duke of Newcastle as Minister of War, that though the noble Duke, with right feeling, was willing to resign the post, and waited upon Her Majesty to that effect, the change was not sanctioned; and the country is deprived of the services of the only statesman fitted by nature and long experience of foreign affairs, to carry on the war with vigour, dignity, and honour, and who now wastes his sweet voice upon muffled air, whose calumet of peace is a non-smoking chimney, and who has to do battle for an unhealthy Board of Health, of which Chadwick and Southwood Smith (of a Little-like novel celebrity) are the Scylla and Charybdis. And the result of these sub rosa doings is, that ships drawing twenty-seven feet water are sent to navigate channels of thirteen feet depth; and troops are dispatched without any definite place and with an inefficient commissariat, when landed (and why not in the first instance at Varna) they are borne down with accoutrements, wearied with inactivity, and obliged to have their audible impatience, calmed by a promissory speech from their commanding officer. How are the mighty fallen! The Post intimates that Her Majesty and Prince Albert would visit Calais to see the embarkation of the French troops on board the English ships, and meet our trusty ally the Emperor of the French and his Empress. This much-desired event did not come off; but singular to relate, at the very hour the Emperor left Paris, on Tuesday, for Calais, the Queen and Prince Albert paid a visit to the Countess de Neuilly, the late Queen of the French, at Claremont. The Duchess of Kent, the day previous, visited the Duke d'Aumale (son of Louis Philippe), his Duchess, and the Princess de Salerno. The small King of Portugal (nephew of Prince Albert) is about to proceed to Vienna, Berlin, and Gotha. All this looks bright for the future, complimentary to our neighbours, and confirmatory of the entente cordiale.

THE WAR ON THE DANUBE.

(From our own Correspondent.)

CAMP AT DEVNA, BULGARIA,
24th June, 1854.

I would have written to you before this, but having little to communicate, and less opportunity, I constantly put off. The Light Cavalry Brigade being the advance guard of the English army, we consequently occupy a position in front of the main body of, generally, fifteen or twenty miles, and keep up a constant chain of communication between the camp of Lord Raglan and that of Omar Pasha. Thus bivouacked among the hills, at the base of the Balkan, our facilities for correspondence are scanty indeed. The duties, too, at this post are very harassing, with the continuous outposts, pickets, and patrols necessary for the maintenance of the position. Shumla is nine miles to our left. We have a corps of Turkish cavalry encamped near us, the outpost of the Ottoman army. These troops are much inferior in every respect to European troops. The men are low, clumsy-looking fellows, not half disciplined, and badly armed. Their carbines and pistols are of a curious antiquated description, with flint lock, and the barrel secured to the stock by bands of brass wire. Their horse appointments are wretched, and scarcely two of them alike. Some have bridles of leather, similar to our bridle, while the major part have only either a rope or girl's web bridle. Their horses, though very small, are remarkably swift, and capable of enduring much fatigue. They evince great surprise and admiration on seeing our horses and accoutrements, and take peculiar delight in learning the names in English of the different articles of our appointments.

There are great numbers of the Bashli Bozooks, or Irregular Cavalry, always roving about us. These would make a very effective cavalry force, but for their total want of discipline and officers to command them; as they are, they are little else than a legalised banditti. They find their own horses, arms, and rations, and receive from the Government a very precarious moiety of pay per month (nominally 92 piastres, or 14s. 6d., English). They are thus, as it were, driven to plunder, to find subsistence for themselves and horses; as their small allowance of pay, even if regularly received, is very inadequate to their maintenance at the present exorbitant price of provisions, which are continuing to advance in rate as the demand increases by the arrival of the troops in the country. In some articles the price now asked is five times as much as was demanded for the same ten days since. Taken individually the Bashli Bozooks far excel the regular Turkish soldier. Fine dashing looking fellows, active and athletic, they would, if officered, disciplined, and properly armed, make the finest troops in the world. They use no tents, and have an utter contempt for rain or severe weather; the only luxury they indulge in being their chibouk, or pipe, which is generally about three feet long, and which they invariably carry stuck through their girdle, or scarf, which they bind round their waist in lieu of that article. Here also they carry their pistols, with a long knife, or rapier. Some carry a musket, the greater part none. Yesterday morning I witnessed an instance of their predatory disposition. Having strolled about a couple of miles from our encampment, I met a Turkish peasant driving a large flock of geese towards our camp, where they always find a ready market for their fowls or anything else of the sort they bring. After passing this man a short distance, a party of eight of these Bashli Bozooks, came in sight, riding furiously, from the direction of Shumla. Presently they dashed through the geese, scattering them about in all directions, and then commenced snatching them up—some one, some two, and some of them three—until they had secured nearly all the flock; then entered on towards the valley, whilst the unfortunate victim of their robbery stood gazing after them, making the most ludicrous gesticulations of anger and disappointment. But they took no heed of his outcry, leaving him only four out of his flock to drive on to the English camp.

The allied army will not, it is thought, advance upon Silistria until both armies are completed to their proper complement of troops. Lord Raglan, with the main body of the army, is encamped at Varna, where, also, is the Duke of Cambridge, with his brigade of Foot Guards. General Sir George Brown's division is encamped at Aladen, eight miles from Varna, on the Shumla road. The first brigade of cavalry (such regiments as have arrived) is six miles further up, whilst the light cavalry brigade, under the command of Brigadier-General the Earl of Cardigan, and consisting of the 8th Hussars, 17th Lancers, and 13th Light Dragoons (the 11th Hussars, belonging to this brigade, have not yet arrived), are posted at Devna, the extreme advance. From this position our patrols and pickets, sent out to reconnoitre the country, approach within a few miles of the Russian outposts. On one occasion, two days since, they suddenly came in sight of a Russian patrol, which, on seeing them, precipitately retired.

On the 20th, there were 400 Russian prisoners escorted through our camp on their way to Varna; they were taken in a sortie by the Turks on the 17th, in an attempt by the Russians to take one of the forts at Silistria by storm. The Turks anticipated the attack, and had a number of mines ready to spring; it is even said they allured them on to the fatal spot by feigning a retreat. As the Russian troops rushed forward, the mines were sprung, and upwards of 1,000 men and officers were killed and wounded, and 400 taken prisoners. This disaster has more and more dispirited the Russian army, and many desertions are taking place daily, especially among the Poles, who are only waiting an opportunity to come over to Omer Pasha's camp en masse. There was a Polish officer in our camp yesterday, who, the day previous, had given himself up as a deserter from the Russian army at Silistria; he was sent on to Omer Pasha to be disposed of. There are numbers of Russian spies going through the country as hawkers of milk, fruit, pipes, &c. One fellow was detected within our lines a few days since by the Turkish soldiers, who had got scent of him being about; he was selling milk to our men. I had had a pony worth from him myself, and it was very good. Milk indeed is the only thing we can get here at all near the mark. The bread is badly baked and invariably sour; the meat, though as good as the country can produce, is very indifferently; it is killed in the morning, and perhaps in less than two hours after it is cut up in our mess kettles. It is impossible to get anything eatable to buy except occasionally some low; and thus left dependent on the ration served out to us, we are assured, we have very often to force ourselves to swallow wherewith to satisfy the cravings of hunger. We got no porter in our brigade, although the rest of the army got a pint per man daily; but the Commissariat will not convey it to us so far separated from the main body, — a deprivation which our men feel more acutely than any other. The horses are doing well; only a very few have died since we arrived in Turkey. They get 12lbs. of barley and 6lbs. of chopped straw, per day; though much thinner, their rants are sleek and glossy. Please excuse my bad writing, which I am forced to do lying on the green sward. We left all our baggage except a change of linen at Constantinople.

26th JUNE.—I insert this slip to say the Russians have abandoned the siege of Silistria, and are retiring by forced marches night and day. The Light Cavalry Brigade are now on the advance to the Danube.

CAMP AT DEVNA, SILISTRIA, 12th June, 1854.

I sent you a letter from Constantinople on the 24th of last month, which you will have, I hope, before this received. I am very much annoyed in not having received a letter from you before this, as I am well assured you must have written, but fear it has been kept back, as no letters have yet been received from England by any of our men, except the officers, and we are afraid none but theirs will be forwarded, which, if the case, is a great grievance to the soldiers, and one which I think the country would not tolerate, if known. Whether you ever receive this God knows; I will, however, try and get it forwarded by the first despatches to Constantinople. If you do get it, you will scarcely be able to read it; but I am sure if you only saw me now writing it, you would excuse the bad writing. I am sitting on the ground writing on my knee, with nothing on me but shirt and drawers. On the 1st of June we embarked on board ship at Constantinople, and sailed up the Black Sea; on the 4th we landed at Varna, and marched a few miles inland, and encamped in a wide, extensive plain, where the French army were also encamped, and about 15,000 of ours. We remained there two days in camp. Our regiment and the 8th Hussars were then sent on forward—the advance guard of the English army. Our first day's march was the most harassing, miserable day I ever spent. We started at three o'clock in the morning of the 6th, and marched on without stopping until after seven in the evening. There were no roads, but a track through the country, which is like a wilderness—no houses, and no inhabitants, except every few miles a shepherd with his herd and tent, which they move about with them wherever they find the best pasturage. It rained incessantly from about two o'clock in the day until we got in, when we pitched our horses and pitched our tents, then lay down in our wet clothes, not having a change with us, as we were ordered to take no kit with us from Constantinople, except one shirt, two pairs of socks, a towel, hair comb, and clothes' brush, also a second pair of overalls—that now constitutes a soldier's stock of clothes on service. This is a most wretched country—we can get nothing but water. Money is no use; it is no more value here than lead. There is a little village close to our encampment, but the inhabitants fled from it on our approach, carrying with them as much of their worldly goods as they could; only two old Turks remained, who keep a kind of store, consisting of bad wine (which our fellows have already exhausted) and a liquor they call arak, but it is most villainous stuff. I drank nearly a glass of it the first night we came in, and threw up dreadfully after it, so since I confine myself to water. There were also a few men who have brought us here some baskets of eggs and fowl, but they will not take English money except at a great discount; for a sovereign they only give 14s. 6d. English money, and we have got no Turkish money with us. The Colonel sent to Constantinople yesterday for a large sum of Turkish money, but it will be many days before it can arrive, and we are expecting every day to be ordered forward, to drive back the enemy's outposts, which are only now fourteen miles from us. It is expected we will march forward on Odessa and take that town, and from that move on to Sebastopol, which, it is surmised, will be attacked simultaneously by sea and land, the fleet acting conjointly with us. It is a very strong place—in fact, the stronghold of Russia—which the sooner we can get possession of the sooner will end the war; but I fear much we will be obliged to spend the winter in this horrid country. But we must only put our trust in God, and hope for the best.

The people of this country are the most inhospitable people in the world. We are treated in every respect by them as an invading army, rather than an army of men who have left their own country and happy homes to risk our lives for them and fight their battles. I would, I assure you, much rather shoot a Turk than a Russian; and such is the universal disgust that they have raised against them in both the English and French armies, that the sight of one of them only gives rise to curses and execrations. The climate is excessively hot, and the weather wet and showery. Our poor women who came out with the regiment do all of them wish themselves back in England. You saw Chobham Camp; this is a hundred times worse. We are obliged to kindle large fires at night round our camp, to keep off wolves, which are very numerous. We had a horse died yesterday, and this morning there were upwards of 100 vultures round the carcass, where we dragged it, outside the encampment, fighting with the wolves for the spoil. The officers amuse themselves shooting them.

HOME NEWS. THE COURT.

Her Majesty and the other members of the royal family are still at Buckingham Palace, where the Court will remain until the prorogation of Parliament, when they will proceed to Windsor Castle. It is expected that the royal visit to the north will be this season a very short one, if it be not, indeed, entirely postponed. The present state of affairs in the East, and the necessity for holding Privy Councils, are stated to be the reasons for this arrangement. On Monday afternoon the Queen held a Court at Buckingham Palace.

Parliamentary.

MONDAY.—LORDS.—The Royal Assent was given by commission to forty-four public and private bills.

The Bishop of London, in putting a question respecting the recent withdrawal of the salary of the Bishop of New Zealand, described the position held by that prelate in the colony, and the valuable services rendered by him to the Church. He viewed his case as one of great hardship.

The Duke of Newcastle fully concurred in the high opinion expressed of the services and character of the Bishop of New Zealand, and expressed his regret at the circumstances which, in conformity with arrangements made during the colonial administration of Sir John Pakington, compelled the withdrawal of the salary, but intimated his belief that the Legislature of New Zealand would feel bound to supply the loss to the Bishop.

Lord Lyndhurst entered into a lengthened statement respecting the claims of Captain Carpenter on the Admiralty, on account of his invention of a screw-propeller for the navy. A sum of £20,000 had been appropriated by the Admiralty, about two years since, on account of compensation for the patentees of the screw-propeller, and the result was that the money to which Captain Carpenter was entitled was handed over to somebody else, and since that period he had been sent back from one department to another, and had been totally unable to obtain redress. The noble and learned lord moved for the production of the papers and correspondence.

The Earl of Aberdeen stated that the Admiralty had acted under the best legal advice, and upon the highest authority they could obtain, in refusing to pay any other claim, after the payment of two sums of £10,000 each, viewing it as a purely patent question, and leaving the parties to find a remedy at law.

The motion was agreed to.

Their lordships having gone into committee on the Cruelty to Animals Bill.

Lord Eglington moved that the clause forbidding the use of dogs in carts for purposes of draught be negatived, on the ground of its being an unjustifiable interference with individual liberty; and, if adopted, would in effect be a confiscation of the property of a very poor class of persons.

The Duke of Argyll supported the clause observing that the onus probandi lay on those who contended that it is cruel to use dog-carts within fifteen miles of the metropolis, and harmless to permit them in the country. He quoted the opinion of Professor Owen in opposition to the views of those who considered the dog an animal fit for draught.

Considerable discussion followed, in the course of which the clause was supported by Lord Brougham and the Bishop of Oxford, and opposed by Earl Granville and the Earl of Malmesbury. On a division there were for the clause—contents, 43; non-contents, 23. The amendment was consequently lost.

The Lord Chancellor, on being pressed by Lord Campbell and the Bishop of Oxford not to persevere with the Divorce and Matrimonial Causes Bill consented to withdraw it.

The Public Revenue and Consolidated Funds Charges Bill was read a second time.

Some other bills having been advanced a stage their lordships adjourned.

In the House of Commons,

Lord John Russell stated, in committee upon the Bribery Bill, that the select committee to whom the measure had been referred had considered it with great care, and they had added to it several clauses from the bills proposed by Sir F. Kelly and Mr. Walpole. New clauses had also been introduced with respect to election officers. Considering the nature of the bill as amended by the select committee, he did not think it desirable to proceed with the Contested Elections Bill in the present session.

On clause 2, which defines bribery, a division took place on the motion, by Mr. Aglionby, that the word "anthracite" be introduced, with the object of more clearly providing for the security of candidates in case of agency.

The numbers were—

For the motion	110
Against it	111

Majority against 1. The clause was then agreed to; and on the next clause, which defines what shall be deemed bribery in voters, objection was taken that it rendered any member of the constituency liable to a penalty of £10 who directly or indirectly asked for any money, gift, loan, or place, for the purpose of voting or refraining from voting. A good deal of discussion followed upon this objection, which ended in Lord John Russell consenting to withdraw the words.

On the same clause,

Lord R. Grosvenor gave notice that on a future stage he should move a provision rendering it illegal for any candidate to pay the expenses of the conveyance of any voter.

On clause 4, which defines the offence of treating,

Mr. B. Dawson asked whether under this clause it would be illegal to issue refreshment tickets to voters who had come from a distance, after an election.

The Attorney-General replied in the affirmative—an answer that led to a long conversation upon the hardship to which it might lead in respect to county voters on the one hand, and the necessity for putting down this, the most easy and convenient form of bribery on the other.

Sir J. Pakington moved the omission of these words from the clause, "in order to be elected, or for being elected," contending that their effect would be to render any gentleman who gave a private dinner in his own house to his own agents liable to a penalty of £50, at the instance of any person who chose to sue for it, though he had no corrupt purpose whatever.

After a lengthened conversation, the Attorney-General consented to an alteration to the effect that this sort of treating must be given corruptly; and on this change Sir J. Pakington withdrew his motion, and the clause was passed, it being understood that the whole question of refreshment tickets and travelling expenses should be considered at a future stage, and the sense of the House taken upon it.

On the 5th clause, relating to undue influence, Mr. Malins insisted upon the necessity of providing against denunciations from the altar, and he moved that the words "temporal or spiritual" be inserted in it, with a view to guard against such practices.

There were calls for an immediate division; and the committees thereupon divided. The numbers were—

For the motion	29
Against it	125

Majority for 96.

The motion was consequently lost.

Mr. V. Smith then moved that any vote given under circumstances of undue influence should, as in the case of votes given under the influence of treating, be utterly void.

Lord J. Russell said he could not assent to the addition; and the committee divided. The numbers were—

For the motion	63
Against it	132

Majority against 69.

The clause was then agreed to.

On clause 10, which provides that electors shall not be paid for their services at elections,

Mr. E. Denison objected to it.

Lord John Russell consented to withdraw the clause for the present; and it was omitted accordingly.

A division took place on the question that clause 12, which provides that voters shall not be liable or compelled to serve as special constables during the election, stand part of the bill.

For the clause	181
Against it	39

Majority for 142.

On clause 14, which states that any offence before which prosecution should be ordered for any offence against the act might order payment of costs and expenses to the prosecution, out of the Consolidated Fund.

The clause was agreed to. The clauses up to 18 were next agreed to, when progress was reported, and the committee appointed to sit again.

The Jamaica Loan Bill passed through committee.

The Standard of Gold and Silver Wares Bill was read the second time.

The other orders having been disposed of, the House adjourned.

TUESDAY.—LORDS.—Their lordships discussed the report on the Oxford University Bill, without leading to any material alteration of the clauses of the bill as agreed to in committee.

The report was eventually received.

A great many bills were forwarded a stage, after which their lordships adjourned.

COMMONS.—In committee on the Landlord and Tenant (Ireland) Bill.

Mr. Serjeant Stree moved, as an amendment on the first clause, that the chairman report progress. His object in doing this was to postpone legislation for the present session upon a subject of such importance, being convinced that it could not be carried on with any benefit to Ireland.

Mr. McMahon seconded the amendment.

Mr. Belcher thought the bills, though originally brought in by Mr. Napier, were, in reality, the bills of the Government by adoption.

Sir J. Young said, if these bills were Government bills they would not have been submitted to the House at so late a period of the session. Nothing could be fairer than the course taken with respect to them by the Government, for they were anxious that the question involved should be settled as speedily as was consistent with its proper consideration. If there was any hope of carrying these bills he had no doubt but the Government, which had given up that morning for their consideration, would give still farther time for their discussion; but as every Irish member, who was in the habit of supporting the Government had solicited him to postpone all legislation for the session, and as there was no hope whatever of being able to pass them, it was perfectly useless to press them any further.

Mr. Napier said he had then heard for the first time that the Government would abandon these bills, which were altogether taken out of his hands. They were, therefore, Government bills.

In the evening sitting, in reply to a question from Sir J. Pakington, Sir G. Grey said that official information had been received of the dissolution of the Canadian Parliament. The dissolution had arisen from an amendment to the address, regretting that some measure had not been proposed for the immediate settlement of the clergy reserves question.

Mr. J. Fitzgerald moved for returns connected with the Irish constabulary force, the object being to show that, as regards promotion, Roman Catholic members of the force had been denied their fair share.

Sir J. Young opposed the motion, as calculated to prove mischievous. Instead of receiving their fair share of promotion, the Roman Catholics had received more, qualification being taken into account. Promotion had not been influenced by sectarianism, and in proof the produced details.

Mr. J. O'Connell supported the motion, Lord Naas opposed it.

On a division the motion was negatived by 62 to 21.

The other business was disposed of, and the House adjourned.

WEDNESDAY.—COMMONS.—On the order for committing the Medical Graduates (University of London) Bill, which extends to persons having the degrees of M.B. and M.D. conferred by the University of London, the same right to practise physic (including surgery) as those persons enjoy who have taken the same degrees at Oxford and Cambridge.

Mr. Bouvier, considering that the bill tended to enlarge and prolong an objectionable monopoly, moved to defer the committee for three months.

Mr. Cowan seconded this amendment.

Lord Palmerston said, he had at first thought it would be desirable to postpone legislation upon this subject until the Government were able to initiate and propose to Parliament some general arrangement of the whole question; but the representations made to him on behalf of the University of London had altered his view, and, with the change, he should propose in the committee, that would exclude the surgical practice, and confine the practice to medicine, he was disposed to recommend the House to adopt the bill, the object of which (as he stated in the committee) was to remedy an injustice inflicted by indirect legislation, whereby persons having medical degrees from the University of London were subject to penalties to which they were never intended to be exposed.

Mr. Atherton supported the bill.

Mr. Walpole suggested whether it was advisable to import more anomalies into the law than now existed. No fewer than twenty-two different bodies in the United Kingdom had the power of granting degrees or licences under various conditions, and this bill would add a further anomaly. He recommended its postponement, and that next year a measure should be introduced that would provide for a uniformity of license and test of qualification, and intrust the power of granting a title to practice to other bodies in the United Kingdom besides Oxford and Cambridge.

A discussion of some length ensued, which ended in a division, negativing the amendment by 90 to 26, and the House went into committee on the bill, where its scope as well as clauses underwent much discussion, the former being extended to the University of Durham.

On the next order, for resuming the debate upon the second reading of the Property Disposal Bill.

Mr. Whitelaw said he should withdraw the bill, which he did from necessity, seeing the impossibility of presenting it this session.

After some remarks by Mr. Newdegate and Mr. V. Selby, the order for the second reading of the bill was discharged.

On the order for going into committee on the Juries and Juries (Ireland) Bill.

Sir J. Young hoped that Mr. Whitelaw would postpone this bill. He did not object to its principle, but he had received communications from high authorities expressing doubts as to its operation; and if the matter were left in the hands of the Government, he would engage to bring in a bill on the subject next session.

The discussion was continued by Mr. Maguire, Mr. V. Selby, Mr. McMahon, Mr. Napier, Mr. J. Fitzgerald, Mr. F. Scully, and Lord Naas, when the committee was deferred for three months; so the bill is lost.

The Absconding Debtors (Ireland) Bill was partly considered in committee, the chairman being ordered to report progress.

Other bills passed through committee, and leave was given to Sir W. Molesworth to introduce a bill for the exchange of the office in Somerset House of the Duchy of Cornwall for an office to be erected in Piccadilly.

The House adjourned.

THE METROPOLIS.

MAGNA CHARTA BUILDING SOCIETY.—The annual dinner of this flourishing society took place at the George and Blue Bear, Holborn, on Tuesday last. About 60 members and their friends sat down to an excellent dinner, provided by the host. Sir Thomas Roberts, Bart., the president of the society, was in the chair, supported on his right by one of the trustees, Richard Williams, Esq., the other trustee, J. C. Hardy, Esq. officiating as vice. Of the directors there were present William Chubb, H. A. Deane, J. Somerville, J. Huxley, J. Sanders, J. Hornby, G. A. Dean, G. F. Hazelden, J. Simmons, and G. Hooper, Esqrs., also the solicitor, C. F. Chubb, Esq., and secretary, J. Messent, Esq. Amongst the members and friends were present Dr. Bain, Percival Turner, A. Turner, M. Thomas, J. Franklinski, A. H. Dry, H. Pickett, B. Massey, W. Richards, J. Palmer, Neil Campbell, J. Harper, A. M'Leinn, W. B. Moffatt, J. Smith, R. F. Inman, A. Bandrowski, Wm. Knight (of "THE FIELD"), and H. M. Dunphy (of the Morning Post) Esqrs. After the cloth was removed grace was admirably sung by four of the members. The chairman on giving the Queen said, at the time the throne was approached when the famous charter was granted from which this society bore its name, it was with feelings of a very different character to those which now animated us in addressing the present sovereign of these realms. The toast was drunk with enthusiastic loyalty; and "God save the Queen" very well sung; the chairman then gave Prince Albert and the rest of the Royal Family, which was followed by the glee of "Long live the Prince." The chairman next gave success to the Magna Charta Building Society, and expatiated at considerable length on its nature and objects; he stated that the gentleness, happiness, and welfare of this country depended upon the possession by the people of the comforts of home, and these societies were formed to enable a man by inculcating prudent habits, to realize in a course of time those comforts for himself and family in a permanent manner. By the rules of this society a man may become the purchaser of his house, through an advance from its funds, and extend the repayment over any number of years not exceeding fourteen; and thus by capitalizing his rent he becomes his own landlord at a very little outlay beyond the actual amount of his yearly rent. To investing members this society had paid a dividend of 6 percent. per annum compound interest; besides at the first quinquennial division, adding a bonus of 10½ per cent., and for the last year a bonus of £1 per cent. on the year's business. He recommended all those who had not hitherto connected themselves with the society to take home the prospectus, and for their own interest to become members. Mr. H. A. Deane spoke in reply to this toast, Mr. C. F. Chubb then proposed the health of the president Sir Thomas Roberts, Bart., their chairman, and spoke at some length of the good fortune of the society in having amongst them a man of his position with such business habits and energetic ability, which was drunk with three times three and one cheer more. Sir Thomas Roberts returned thanks, and said the fervent appreciation expressed in their applause only cemented him still stronger to the interests of the society. Mr. William Chubb then gave the health of the trustees, Richard Williams and H. Hardy, Esqrs. Both gentlemen returned thanks. B. Massey, Esq. then gave the health of the Directors, which was responded to by Mr. W. Chubb. The health of the secretary was proposed by Mr. Hardy, and ably responded to, Mr. Messent going into detail of the society's prospects and position. Mr. Simmons then proposed the health of the solicitor, Mr. C. H. Chubb, in eulogistic terms. Mr. Chubb returned thanks in a somewhat lengthy speech, adverting to the peculiar features of the society, and calling on the visitors present at this numerous meeting to take a share each, if only for esprit de corps and the promotion of good fellowship. The health of the treasurer, and the oldest member of the society, G. Hooper, Esq., was drunk with loud manifestations of applause, and ably responded to. The visitors, coupled with the name of W. Knight, Esq. of "THE FIELD," was given, and responded to by that gentleman, who signified his intention of becoming a member. The "Press," coupled with the name of H. M. Dunphy, Esq. of the Morning Post, was given, and ably responded to by that gentleman. Several other toasts followed, and the meeting was enlivened by some very excellent singing by Messrs. Huxley, Messent, Thomas, Pennington, and others, and a most convivial evening was spent.

HOOD'S MONUMENT.—The public monument to Thomas Hood, by Mr. Matthew Noble, is now being erected in Kensal Green Cemetery, and will be inaugurated on Tuesday next, July 18th, at three o'clock in the afternoon, when an address will be delivered by Richard Monckton Milnes, Esq., M.P.

RACKETS.

BELVEDERE TAVERN, PENTONVILLE.—The match which had been arranged to come off at this court on Monday last, for two silver sauff boxes, were unavoidably postponed, in consequence of the temporary indisposition of George Erwood, one of the competitors. In order to compensate in some degree, for the disappointment of the numerous company assembled to witness the advertised trial of skill, two matches were made up on the evening of Monday, the excellence of the play in which, furnished the company with a substitute for what they had anticipated, a fine evening's amusement. The first match was between the London Amateur and another gentleman amateur, against Ball and the gentleman who was to have been George Erwood's partner in the originally proposed match. Of the four games played three were won by Ball and his partner. The second match was between the London amateur and another celebrated amateur, against John Sawden and a first-rate amateur. The first and third games were won by the former gentleman, the second and fourth by the latter. The fifth and conquering game of the rubber was played neck and neck, the last ace being won by Sawden and his partner, by a mere hair's-breadth. On Monday week, in addition to the long list of talent advertised for Edward's benefit, will be added the interest of the veteran Samuel Young, who beat Divott, Lord Eglington's marker, in the match for the North British Stakes, value £800, played at Egham Castle.

THE CRYSTAL PALACE.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—FRIDAY (HALF-A-CROWN DAY)—Number of season tickets sold to this date, 20,370. Admission at the doors, 2,769; admission by season ticket, 1,128—3,897.

SATURDAY, JULY 8.—FIVE-SHILLING DAY.—Number of season tickets sold to this date, 20,370. Admission at the doors, 1,137; admission by season tickets, 2,888. Total, 4,025.

MONDAY, JULY 10.—SHILLING DAY.—Number of season tickets sold to this date, 20,370; admission at the doors, 12,881; admission by season tickets, 801. Total 13,682. On this day Messrs. Symonds and Co., the extensive galvanizers, of Glass-house-yard, East Smithfield, gave their workmen a holiday to visit the Sydenham Exhibition, allowing them the use of their horses and vans to go down, besides franking them in and paying them their usual wages. Such instances of generosity, whilst they are worthy of all imitation, are rarely lost upon English workmen.

Much dissatisfaction continues to be felt at the manner in which the railway to the Palace is worked by the Brighton Company. They commenced by starting trains when full, without reference to the hour. They then issued a time table, announcing that every 20 minutes before and 10 minutes after the hour trains would start, additional trains leaving in the intervals when the traffic required it. Now they appear to be returning to the previous arrangement. Until every seat is filled the signal for departure is delayed, and, as the accommodation for third-class passengers is the most limited, the inconvenience to them is greatest of all. Considering how favorable the terms are which the Brighton Company have made with reference to this traffic, and its lucrative character to them, their shabby treatment of the public in the matter is a heavy reproach, not only upon their liberality, but also upon their prudence. The ordinary highway approaches to the Palace from the metropolis are exceedingly agreeable and pleasant routes, but unfortunately the omnibuses running to the neighbourhood are chiefly from London-bridge, instead of from the west-end, where they are most wanted. This is owing to old arrangements, remaining unmodified by the changes which have taken place at Sydenham. A vigorous effort made to develop the road traffic would not only be a great accommodation in itself, but would probably compel the Brighton Company to pay more attention than they seem to give at present to the efficient working of the Crystal Palace line. A melancholy accident took place at the building to-day (Monday). A putter and glazier, who was engaged in repairing the semicircular roof of the great transept, had neglected to secure him self properly by a rope while working at that dizzy height. He fell upon the ledge which runs along the side of the roof, and was killed almost instantaneously. Singularly enough, only one pane of glass was broken by his fall, the framing, frail as it looks, being sufficiently strong to prevent his falling through. Had his body, however, rolled off the ledge, on the verge of which it lay when found, it would probably have descended into the nave, and proved fatal to some of the visitors collected there at the moment. This melancholy event created a painful sensation among the thousands who witnessed it.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 12.—SHILLING DAY.—Number of season tickets sold to this date, 20,370; admission at the doors, 9,807; admission by season tickets, 609.—Total, 10,476.

CRYSTAL PALACE, THURSDAY.—One shilling day. Number of season tickets sold to this date, 20,370; admission at the doors, 15,614; admission by season tickets, 1,410.—total, 17,024.

A TEMPERANCE "PALACE."—An arrangement is on foot amongst the friends of temperance, offered by the sale of wine, &c., at Sydenham, to purchase the Surrey Zoological Gardens, and to erect a large building of glass. We have not yet the precise particulars before us, but understand that it is proposed to raise £100,000 by 100,000 £1 shares, and that the gardens have been provisionally purchased for £25,000.—The Builder.

Naval.

SWANSEA.—We understand that two martello towers are to be erected in the south docks at the entrance of Swansea harbour, and that several canon of large calibre are to be placed upon the piers and on the heights to defend the port.

THE BALTIC.—The various ships in the fleet made all possible sail on the 28th ult. for the purpose of exercising their respective crews. It being the anniversary of Her Britannic Majesty's coronation, the flags of England, France, and Turkey were hoisted—those of the two former nations flying prominently at the mainmast heads of every ship. At noon, a royal salute was fired, the bands playing the English National Anthem.

FUNERAL IN THE BALTIC.—The funeral of the late Capt. Foote took place at Memel on the 5th, and was conducted with much solemnity. The procession started from the British consular (Mr. Herrell's) house, and was announced by nine guns from the Castle, the Amphion firing minute guns. Great numbers of the military attended in uniform; the consular staff, and members of masters from ships in port. The coffin left on the 6th for the northward. Her first lieutenant (Hore) goes home overland, to command one of the newly-built gunboats. There are now at Memel 17 vessels, prizes to the squadron, waiting orders either to be sent home, or to be sold there, which is considered much the safest plan. One of the lieutenants of the Amphion and a party had a very narrow escape when returning on board in crossing the bar. The boat was swamped, but, being favoured by a lull, they managed to get her head round and pushed for the beach, where the boat capsized. Happily, all escaped with a few bruises. It was in exactly the same spot that Capt. Foote lost his life.

SWEDEN.—The naval authorities of Sweden have announced that an extensive shoal has been discovered, for the first time, about half a Swedish mile (three English miles) south-east of Trollborg, a town in the province of Schonen, from which a not inconsiderable quantity of corn is exported.

HOW TO ATTACK CROONSTADT.—An opinion being entertained that an attack on Cronstadt was practicable on the northern side of the island, Rear-Admiral Chas. and Vice-Admiral Parveval-Beershenes, accompanied by Lord C. Paget, of the Princess Royal, the Hon. H. Keppell, of the St. Jean d'Acre, and others, embarked on the 20th ult. in the Driver paddle-wheel steamer, and proceeded as far up the channel as was necessary, in order to judge by personal observation the nearest distance off the town, which could be approached with safety by any portion of the ships in the fleet. I believe I am not mistaken in informing you that the greater part of the ships in the fleet may, without difficulty, steam up the channel on the northern side of the island, and take up a position from which they might, at long range, throw their shells, &c., into the town, and destroy it, without sustaining any serious injury themselves.

PLYMOUTH.—On Wednesday evening a very distressing accident occurred on board the emigrant ship Caroline, lying in the Sound, with Government emigrants on board for Sydney. The captain's son, who was going out on his first trip at sea, accidentally fell into the hold of the ship and was killed. The lifeless body of the poor lad was discovered by the father about an hour after the melancholy event is supposed to have occurred.

CAPTURES FROM THE RUSSIANS.

Intelligence was received at the Admiralty, under date July the 3rd, that her Majesty's steamer Conchit had just taken three prizes, namely the Reinhardt, of Rügenburg, bound from London to Cronstadt, and two Courland decked boats. They have been sent in charge of prize crews home to England. The Admiralty has also received the following:—Rear-Admiral Corry has recently intercepted a boat off Brno Sound, the crew of which gave information that 13 Russian prisoners (belonging to the Vulture), with a boat's gun and a musket, had arrived at Helsingfors, and that about as many more prisoners were at some other place.

GRAVESEND, July 8.—The Amegina Jantina (Russian prize) Austin, from Riga, arrived here to-day.

THE LOST PRIZE.—HAMMUR, July 8.—The cargo of the Russian ship Cesrovitch has been already discharged, consisting of tea and silk, valued at about 1,000,000 Russian dollars, or £150,000. The whole, it has been intimated, will be forwarded overland to St. Petersburg. The crew of this ship have been likewise sent away to their homes via Copenhagen and Sweden into Finland, and four Hamburg police officers accompanied them as far as Lubeck. The master of the Cesrovitch belongs to this place, which accounts in some degree for the clever way in which he managed to avoid the Channel and pass our cruisers into the Rho, having a thorough knowledge of the navigation.

FRENCH NAVY AND MERCHANT SERVICE.

The following, according to an official document, is a list of the vessels despatched by the Minister of Marine to pass the winter at Brest:—The line-of-battle ships the Infatigable (with Admiral Parveval-Beershenes on board), Hyevide, Jemmapes, Tage, Anderschtz, Brosław, Dupuyre, and Trident; the frigates Peysche, Barrien, and Assault; the transports Incarné and Indefatigable; and the steamers Lucifer, Fulton, Brandon, and Duim. It is said that the 4th division, the fitting out of which is being pursued with great activity, will be composed of two divisions of seven ships of the line each. One is to assemble at Toulon, and the other at Brest. The report runs that Admiral D'Amoullien, at present maritime prefect at Toulon, is to have the command of one of these divisions. The levy of carpenters for the port of Toulon is terminated. The whole number with their workmen, will exceed 4,000.

The French transport brig Romanus, Captain Peron, has been plundered of a portion of her cargo and some money by a Greek boat, manned by some 25 pirates, whilst two other vessels were in sight, during a calm.

MARITIMUS.—The French frigate Jeune d'Aro, and sloops of war Anglo and Katfelte, from Réunion, arrived at Port Louis on the 2nd of May. The frigate, which carried the flag on Rear-Admiral La Guerre, put in to replace some sheets of copper. She was to sail immediately with the sloops for China, despatches having been received from Admiral Stirling, in the East Indies, requesting their co-operation to effect the capture of the Russian force in those seas.

LEGHORN.—The Averna is cruising off the port of Leghorna, watching two Russian merchant-vessels, which the captain has been endeavouring to sell, but have not succeeded.

MAJMA. June 26.—The French steamer Jura hurt, a line-of-battle ship, and the Thabor, left yesterday for the East, full of troops. The naval amount of cheering took place as they left the harbour. Among the troops was a son of Prince Polignac, a son-in-law of the 3rd Emperor. The Tribune, Hon. S. T. Carnegie, left on the morning of the 21st for the Black Sea; and the Comarant, No. 103 transport, last night.

JOSEPH RENE BULLOCK.—At the outset of his first Arctic voyage on board of Lady Franklin's own schooner, the Prince Albert, he writes to his family—"Take care of whatever English newspapers may make mention of me. They are my letters of nobility! They will serve to educate our Alphonse. Money I have none; but I am trying to give him a good example." It was indifferent to a son like Bellot's whether the flag under which he braved danger and achieved true glory, were that of England or of France. To such a degree was that noble disinterestedness his peculiar distinction, that even in his country's naval service, at no time remarkable for ungenerous prejudices, and in which an honourable esteem for their hereditary rivals has long ago supplanted every former jealousy, M. Bellot, from an early period of his professional career, had earned the name of "l'ami des Anglais."—New Quarterly Review for July.

The Nantes Journal state that the levies of sailors which had for some time been suspended had been resumed in that maritime town—arrondissement. Ships' carpenters are also being taken, and they are sent to Toulon. The same journal announces that a considerable number of sailors are already collected in different parts: thus at Toulon there are between 4,000 and 4,500 who are waiting to embark; at Brest there are 1,000, and at Lorient 700.

STEAMERS.

INDIA AND THE CAPE.—The General Review Steam Shipping Company's mail packet Calcutta, Captain Goodhall, arrived at Plymouth on Monday afternoon. She left Calcutta April the 15th, Madras the 23rd, Ceylon the 29th, Mauritius May the 8th, Table-mountain the 28th, St. Helena June the 3rd, Ascension the 7th, and St. Vincent the 19th. Lieutenant-General the Hon. Sir G. Cathcart, K.C.B., late governor at the Cape, came by the Calcutta, and, having landed at Plymouth, proceeded at once by the South Devon Railway to Exeter. On the 19th of April, near Clarkenberg, a sharp light occurred between Krethia Caffres and the Tambookies, when the latter suffered a loss of 53 men. The Caffres, who outnumbered their opponents, were severely punished. With this exception the Cape colony was perfectly tranquil. The elections were not finished. Her Majesty's ships Hydra, Penguin, and Junco were in Simon's Bay. The Junco was to leave on the 25th of May, supposed for New South Wales. His Netherlands Majesty's steamer Buenaventura, Commander Peltus, left Simon's Bay on the 21st of May, for Java. The steamship Queen of the South left Table Bay, for Australia, on the 23rd of May, taking several passengers; the Silver Cloud, on the 26th. The screw steamer City of Hobart Town, from London April the 2nd, St. Vincent the 21st, and St. Jago the 24th, arrived at the Cape on the 24th of May, and was to sail for Hobart Town on the 27th.

THE FATAL PARACHUTE DESCENT.—The inquest upon the body of Monsieur Henri Letour, whose death was occasioned by injuries sustained in attempting a descent in a parachute, was held on Monday before Mr. Baker, the coroner. The inquiry excited much interest. The parachute, which was exhibited to the jury, is in the form of a large umbrella, constructed of white and blue cotton, bound with rope line, and when expanded is about 40 feet in circumference. In lieu of a car is a kind of saddle, with a pair of treddles for the feet to rest upon, and above is some machinery propelling three long canvas fans, or wings, intended to guide the parachute in descending. Mr. Adams, the aeronaut at Cremorne-gardens, deposed that he was ordered by Mr. Simpson, the proprietor, to take the deceased up in his parachute on the evening of the 27th ult., and he ascended from the gardens about 7 p.m. He had taken up deceased once before, on which occasion he (Mr. Adams) liberated the parachute, and it fell safely somewhere near Blackheath. The machine was attached to the balloon by a rope, and was liberated by a trigger iron, which held one of the ends. Having prepared for the descent, and descended some distance, he looked over to see if the parachute had expanded, but saw that it had not, and was all twisted, so that it would have been certain death to deceased to have liberated it. He therefore continued to descend, and, when passing over a meadow near Tottenham, the grapnel was caught by some boys, who could not hold it, and the balloon took a course over some land until the grapnel caught by the side of a ditch, when it was brought up. Before then the parachute struck the ground several times; he heard the deceased call out, but he did not understand what he said. He expected that the deceased would have cut the belt, and thus have liberated himself the moment he touched the ground, but he did not do so. Assistance came up, and he saw the deceased carried away. In answer to the jury as to why he did not detach the parachute when so close to the ground, and so have given the deceased a chance of escaping, he said that he did not know but what the machine had by that time got away; but even had it been so, he thought that the grapnel, which was trailing along, would either have picked it up or the man. He (witness) did not understand French, nor did the deceased understand English.—Mr. Marshall, of Brook-place, Tottenham, deposed that he saw the parachute to which deceased was lashed dragged over the ground for about half-a-mile. He heard the deceased call out, and a young gentleman who was with witness, and who understood French, said that he was calling to those in the balloon to cut him away.—Some other witnesses having been examined, including Mr. Green, the aeronaut, who attributed the twisting of the machine and the rope to its being spun instead of plaited, the jury returned a verdict of "Accidental death."

MADAME SONTAG.—It is with no small regret that we read in the American papers of the death of this accomplished lady, who, it seems, died of cholera, in Mexico, on the 10th of last month. The world of art can ill afford to lose so exquisite a vocalist, who, in her peculiar sphere, had no living equal. Like Grisi, the lapse of years had made no broad ridges upon her voice or upon her powers of using it. Her early history will be remembered by every one conversant with the progress and records of the lyric drama. It is now nearly 30 years since she first sang at Devonshire House, in the presence of a large party of connoisseurs, specially invited by the noble owner to listen to a singer of whose extraordinary attributes the world had heard so much, and whose praises were sung in Germany with an enthusiasm to which there had been no previous parallel. Henrietta Sontag conquered the dilettante of Great Britain as completely as she had done those of her own country, and the way she held here, until the period of her marriage with the Count Rossi, was akin to that which we have seen exercised in later days by Jenny Lind. Her return to the operatic stage, after years of retirement, was another epoch in the history of her life. Time had added to her excellences instead of deteriorating them, and her singing at her Majesty's Theatre during the latter rule of Mr. Lumley was marked by a brilliancy and finish which none ever surpassed, and which few, very few, have been permitted to equal. Her career in the New-World, as we have from time to time been informed by the transatlantic papers, has been but a continuation of the successes which attended her in Europe, and she was cut off in the full possession of those gracious gifts, the exercise of which had been the source of delight and enjoyment to thousands. So long and undamaged an experience in the wear and tear of an artistic vocation is wholly without precedent. The news of the decease of this admirable singer will be received with but one feeling of grief throughout Europe. To talent the most striking, she united the utmost blamelessness of conduct. Her example in all the relations of life shed lustre upon a profession, which, unfortunately, possesses but too few instances of personal purity to recommend it. Madame Sontag, however, was one of its most exemplary ornaments, and equally exemplary was she in the practice of those virtues which engender social respect, and which alone can sanctify and ennoble the memory.

MUSIC IN AMERICA.—On the 26th ult., M. Jullien took his farewell of America, and a concert Monstro was given for his benefit at the Crystal Palace. As soon as the benefit was announced, the New York Harmonic Society held a meeting and resolved unanimously—"That the services of this society be tendered to M. Jullien, to assist at his benefit concert, on Monday evening, June 26, at the Crystal Palace." The sacred Society of Newark, the Harmonic Society of Willemsburg, and the sacred Music Society of Brooklyn also assisted; the whole forming a chorus of 600 voices, who sang the "Hallelujah chorus," "The Heavens are telling," and the prayer from Mose in Egypt, with very fine effect; and while the members of the musical societies thus did honour to one of themselves, the general public lagged not behind. A tremendous rush to the Crystal Palace from all parts of the city commenced at 6 o'clock, and continued incessantly until 9, by which time the amazing number of 42,000 persons had paid for admission. Every place in the building where standing room could be obtained was packed with human beings, and the entertainment was well received throughout. The programme consisted of the usual variety, and concluded with the war marches and national airs of the present belligerent nations of Europe, including "Partout pour la Syrie," and "the Marseillaise," "Rule Britannia," and "God save the Queen," the "Muscovite hymn of Peter the Great," and the "Song of the Corsicans," and lastly, the "Turkish war march." It was to be feared that something of jealousy might still have lingered in the American mind; that the recollections of "Rule Britannia" might have awakened old feelings of strife and discord, and that the sympathies of Russia openly expressed by Mitchell and other reagado Irishmen, might have found some echo in this immense assemblage of Americans. But such fears were at once dispelled by the reception given to "Rule Britannia," and when the first notes of "God save the Queen" were heard from the orchestra, the whole of this mighty mass rose as one man, the greater portion standing uncovered during the performance, and cheering the air with Republican lungs, quite as ardently as the most loyal assembly of England. Many of the auditors joined in the chorus, and nothing could exceed their enthusiasm. Here was a living proof that the Irish "patriots" are estimated at their real worth; that the Anglo-Saxon heart in America is a reflex of that of their brethren across the Atlantic, and that the public feeling which directs the destinies of America is in accord with the allies and the justice of their cause. The Russian hymns, notwithstanding their musical merit, were received in solemn silence, while the Turkish war march was vociferously applauded. Before the conclusion of the first part of the programme an agreeable episode occurred. Mr. Fry, the composer, accompanied by Mr. Bristow and other American musicians of note, stepped on the dais, and, after an effective speech, presented Jullien with a magnificent gold wreath, in honour of the musical congress held under his direction at the Crystal Palace on the 15th inst. The chaplet is of considerable value, and is in the shape of a laurel crown. It was subscribed for by the members of nearly all the orchestral societies of America, and by other admirers of M. Jullien, including many of the bankers and principal citizens of New York. The presentation was attended with enormous cheering from an audience which was as large in numbers as the free citizens of ancient Athens—the State of antiquity which had given us the greatest models of art. A golden tablet accompanies the memorial, on which was an appropriate inscription.

Blaine's Veterinary Art (6th edition). By EDWARD MAYHEW. Longman, Brown, and Co., London.

Instead of sixth edition this may justly be termed a new work, both in matter, form, and illustration. Every page added to our knowledge of the noblest and most useful of animals is a boon to society which cannot be too highly appreciated, especially in a country like this, where the breed is so properly cared for, and for which we justly stand unrivalled throughout the world. The subject-matter is divided into four parts—the history and anatomy of the horse, the practice of the veterinary art, and the veterinary Materia Medica; and to the whole is added a copious, clear, and assisting index. We entirely coincide with the editor that the knowledge of this art until lately was positively disgraceful; and even now pig-headed ignorance gnaws at the inroad of science, and is still allowed to torture man's best assistant in sport and labour, from sheer ignorance of its anatomy and physiology. These former quacks will not learn that the gangrenous state of the lungs is not a chronic disease; that there is an important distinction between spasmodic and flatulent colic; that many bowel complaints are the effect of strangulation, intussusception, and hernial displacements; that molted grease is a dysenteric attack on the mucous surface of the intestines; that the shoulder is not the seat of almost every lameness which occurs; that a horse may be relieved from navicular disease by neurotomy; and that we no longer need to cruelly deprive the horse of his sight for ophthalmia; and they yet are allowed to carry on their malpractices both in town and country to a fearful extent, when the lives of horses and the money of their owners might be saved by timely consulting the skilled practitioner of the Veterinary College. It is the same with humanity; they dabble on with the apothecary, who is often, in remote towns and villages, the grocer, baker, butcher, linendraper, and innkeeper also, and when all hopes are passed, apply to the eminent physician or surgeon, who, if first applied to, might have saved life, untold pain, and means. It is in the hands of the possessors of these valuable animals to remedy this abuse of a valuable art. Employ none but those who have authority to practise, and the evil will be at an end. This book is well worthy the studious attention of every gentleman owning a horse, and every coachman, groom, and farrier would find it invaluable, giving him an insight into the construction, diseases, and remedies of the animal rarely met with. Neat cattle and sheep are also subordinatedly cared for, and the illustrations, by Messrs. Baggs and Adlard, all that could be wished.

The Angler's Guide. By the Rev. JAMES MARTIN. Cox, London.

To "The United Sons of Walton and Cotton," and all other lovers of the piscatory art, is this concise and instructive little book properly dedicated. Our author is hearty in his commendations of the sport, considers it healthful and innocent, and a necessary recreation both for body and mind. By the water side his meditations have furnished him with many a goodly homily, and he has felt that wisdom may be found in stones and running brooks. Roach fishing claims his first attention, and every information, even to the cooking and eating them, is furnished, with a song on its excellence afterwards; and

"The roach of the Lea
Are the finest you see,
In the whole of fair England's bright rivers."

Then jack has his turn, and the author spins a few verses to his praise. Barbel, lace, club, gudgeon, perch, eels, tench, carp, bream, and, "last though not least in our dear love," the trout, have each their due place and rhymes, with useful remarks on the rivers Thames and Lea, the docks, &c. A capital story winds up, with stanzas to ladies on angling, a very excellent and amusing guide.

The Life of Cardinal Richelieu. By WILLIAM ROBSON. Routledge and Co., London.

This Machiavel of the 17th century has found an able but stern biographer in Mr. Robson. Taking Leclerc as his best authority, he has stripped the monkey-tiger of much of the romance and fascination with which he was surrounded by him; but his great powers of diplomacy tower above all others of his time. Richelieu, with the most weak and vacillating right-divine kings, contrived not only to keep the state in a dignified position, but to shield the throne with the vigils of his mighty mind from contempt and destruction. The evident research and the impartiality with which this work is written show a just appreciation of necessities of the history. It is well got up, and is a valuable addition to the truth of those unscrupulous times.

The Cabin by the Wayside—A Tale for the Young. By LADY CAMPBELL. Routledge and Co.

The gifted authoress of this delightful little book, in her preface, says: "I write for the young. My chief aim is to make those among them who are blessed with this world's good acquainted with the trials, the sufferings, the pleasures, and consolation which their less fortunate fellow-creatures experience. 'The poor ye have always with you' is a broad, dark shadow in all lands—a sad contrast by the side of bright prosperity! Let us not cast away the blessing we ought to seek in all God's providences, but rather learn to love the poor, that we may understand how to serve them best. 'Pity, like mercy, is twice blessed; blessing those that give and those that take.' Ours will then become a well-informed charity, a loving kindness, teaching us to deny ourselves and to do good indeed. Should I succeed in awaking such sympathies in the hearts of the young, I shall feel I have not written in vain." And well indeed has she carried out her "heaven-born" task. Hard must be the heart, old or young, that is not softened by sympathy for the trials of Michael, Katty, and Tommy. The book is full of charming episodes, such as can only be found among the good of the poor Irish—creatures all heart and soul. We cordially recommend it to all; not only the young, for whom it is specially written, but the old. There are few indeed who cannot take a lesson from such a book.

Angling; or, How to Angle, and Where to Go. By ROBERT BLAKEY. G. Routledge and Co.

One of the best books ever published on the subject, containing more practical information than dozens of its pretentious rivals.

How to Angle comprises every necessary information on tackle, the various kinds of fish, and the laws and regulations for taking them.

Where to Go describes the rivers of England and Wales, Scotland, Ireland, and the Continental States. We can only say, as an angler, that if any of our piscatorial brethren enjoy a portion of what is here described, they are happy Waltonians; and if they do not provide themselves with this shilling volume, they deserve never to catch a roach above two ounces in weight.

The Last of the Barons. By SIR EDWARD BULWER LYTTON. G. Routledge and Co.

Another boon conferred upon the public by these spirited publishers, and perhaps the greatest work of the author. Well may this series be called "The Railway Library," for it can only be in these days of railway progress that such a work could be published for two shillings.

The Flitch of Bacon; or, the Custom of Dunmow. By W. H. AINSWORTH. G. Routledge and Co.

The latest and one of the most charming works of this popular author, who has contrived to weave a delightfully interesting story out of a most popular legend. It is beautifully illustrated by John Gilbert.

Lewell Pastures. By the Author of "Sir Frederick Derwent," &c., &c. G. Routledge and Co. 2 vols.

A book not only to be read, but remembered. The author is evidently well acquainted with human nature, and writes with a purpose; and the farmer on the Pastures relates his story in a manner at once interesting, simple, and truthful. In Erskine, Sir Jasper, Malvern—in fact, all the characters—it is easy to recognise types of many around us. Again we say, the book is written with a purpose. There are many most powerfully written scenes, some of which we would gladly have placed before our readers, had we space.

Transmutation; or, The Lord and the Lout. By N. or M. Chapman and Hall.

"There's a divinity that shapes our ends, Rough-hew them how we will!"

And, to prove this, the author repeats an old story, children changed in their cradle, and who, to the end of the chapter, remaining in ignorance of their real parentage, retain the peculiar feelings of their races. The lout, educated as a nobleman, retains what his titled mamma thinks a "love for low society," but which is evidently the author's ideal of a real country gentleman, whose heart beats in sympathy alike for poor and rich. The poor transmuted noble infant does not pass through life so satisfactorily. He is above his station. Nature intended him for a statesman; but, taken out of his proper sphere, he becomes a vagabond and murderer. Deprived of all adventitious distinctions, he, being predestined to purple and fine linen, and entitled to be encained in crimson velvet, and laid in the stately mausoleum at Rycot Castle, now awaited the experiments of the dissecting surgeon attached to a penal settlement! The phrenologist, meanwhile, examined his cranium almost with consternation, so completely were its developments at variance with the principles of science. "This youth ought not to have been a robber or an assassin," said he. "If born of the higher classes, he would have become a great diplomatist; if of the lower, a swindler. Nature has been circumvented. He seems to have missed his vocation!" Still, although not agreeing entirely with the author on the necessity of such a result, we are bound to acknowledge he has written a most interesting story. "Poor Bessy!" is a beautiful creation, and few who commence reading the book will be able to lay it down till finished.

Jermingham—A Story. 2 vols. Chapman and Hall.

This is a well-written tale, abounding in variety of scene and character. The transition from England to France, and vice versa, give great freshness to the details, and keep the senses alive to the incidents, which are numerous and full of effect. Ayesha, the Queen of the Gipsies, is finely drawn.

SINGULAR ACCIDENT.—While some boys were engaged a few days ago in taking a bird's nest from a tree on the premises of Mr. Cooper, tanner, at Milton, one of them, named Gowen, thrust his hand so resolutely down the hollow in which the nest was situated, that he was unable to extricate it, and it was found necessary to saw the tree asunder, in order to liberate him.—South Eastern Gazette.

DISCOVERY AT GALLIOLI.—In a letter from a private soldier, dated Gallipoli, June 10, and addressed to his family, we read: "And another thing I have to inform you, we found a young girl here—an English girl. She was a slave to some Greek hero; she was found working in the fields, by one of the women of the 25th Regiment, who was going across the fields to go to market, when the poor creature called her over, and asked her for a drink of water, and then she told her she was an Englishwoman, and had been slave to this Greek four years; she was shipwrecked with her father when she was 13 years old. She says this fellow was a pirate when he first took her." But the soldiers went and got some clue to where these fellows were, and pulled the nest about them, and brought five of them prisoners, and brought 20 women away with them—all slaves. But they had the Englishwoman confined in irons somewhere else. But they told the men they would hang them all there and then to a tree, if they would not tell where the Englishwoman was; and to save their lives they told, and they found the poor girl in a dungeon underground, and in irons, with a goat weight on her chest; so they released her. These men are to be tried, and they are sure to be shot. The soldiers are going to make a subscription for her; she is a native of Essex."

PLEASANT FOR ST. PETERSBURG.—There is what is called in India a bazaar report, that in the event of the Allies making a serious impression on St. Petersburg, the Czar has prepared a force of 40,000 Tartars, who are to pillage the place and leave it in the condition least calculated to be of advantage to the conquerors. Is short a copy of the Moscow history. This may be a bazaar report.

APPROACHING MARRIAGES IN HIGH LIFE.—We understand that the preliminaries of a matrimonial alliance have been arranged between Lord Harry Vane, M. P., youngest brother of the Duke of Cleveland and Viscountess Dalmeny, relict of the late Viscount Dalmeny, and only daughter of Earl Stanhope. The contemplated matrimonial alliance between Mr. Staynor Holford, the wealthy Commoner, and the youthful Miss Lindsay, daughter of Colonel Lindsay, is expected to be solemnised early in the ensuing month.

LADIES WITH THE EXPEDITIONARY ARMY.—Several ladies are now with the army in the East. Among them are the Hon. Mrs. Jocelyn, the lady of Lieutenant-Colonel the Hon. C. Scott, Scots Fusilier Guards; likewise the ladies of Captain Munro, Grenadier Guards, and of Lieutenant-Colonel Brownrigg, Grenadier Guards. These ladies are taking practical lessons in the useful art of "roughing" it in camp. They have, of course, lodgings in the town, but, nevertheless, pass a considerable portion of their time under canvas.

THE extent of the weekly mail for the Baltic fleet has astonished the weak nerves of the post-office authorities at Danzig: it is mentioned with astonishment that in the course of 14 days 8,500 English letters passed through their hands. On the 28th of June the police report of the cholera gave the number of cases in treatment in St. Petersburg at 405, the day previously it was only 111; on the 1st of July there were 580. It is understood that it is making great ravages among the garrison of Cronstadt.

A GROWING TIME.—Genial weather makes crops laugh—a man could almost see the grass grow without the aid of a microscope or spectacles, and spring again came out of the ground by the inch. Such weather pays well for a wet skin.

A DRUNKEN BEAST.—Some wags gave a bear, at the Ham-tramck House, a quart bowl of whisky toddy, well sweetened. Bruin fancied either the alcohol or the sugar, and sucked down, and followed it up with the performance of a series of most complicated ground and lofty tumbling ever before witnessed, until the liquor overcame him, and he lay without sense or motion until ten o'clock the next day. On waking, it is said that he called for "a fresh bruin" and the temperance pledge.

FORTUNE-MAKING IN AUSTRIA.—CALIFORNIA OUTDORE.—Among the passengers by the bark Heloise, from Melbourne, Mr. Rowe, well known to the California public as the proprietor of the first circus company in this State, returned to San Francisco for the purpose of investing the money he had made in Australia. Mr. Rowe has realized extraordinary success; having accumulated the sum of 200,000 dols. during a sojourn of less than two years. European and home capital is so abundant in the colonies that the inducement for the investment is by no means comparable to what exists in this country. We are also pleased to learn that Mr. and Mrs. Stark have been so well rewarded abroad as to enable Mrs. Stark to present her sister in this city with 20,000 dols.; a remittance to that amount having come to hand by the Heloise. It is not the best for all professional people to allow their heads to be turned by the intelligence; but that there is a good prospect for dramatic talent in Australia cannot be questioned.—San Francisco Times & Transcript.

JENNY LIND WANTS TO GO TO AMERICA.—Extract from a private letter from Vienna:—"A few days since I called at the Hotel zum Ranschen Kaiser to pay my respects to Jenny Lind Goldschmidt. She has a decided penchant for America and Americans. She informed me of her expectation to settle permanently in the United States mainly on account of her child, a bright little boy. She has been giving concerts in Vienna, in a quiet, unassuming way. She spoke of a Boston Sabbath as a delightful luxury. Here the Sabbath is made a gala-day by all classes. Public persons must keep open rooms as on other days of the week, and the people go from the church to the theatre. The Jenny Lind of former days has become the dignified Madame Goldschmidt of the present. She appears somewhat older, but retains the frankness and simplicity of manners which have characterised her above all others."

PROCESS OF MAKING SHOT.—The pig lead is carried to the top of the tower by winlass and chain, and worked by steam; it is then put in a furnace, kept constantly burning night and day, and attended by two sets of men, one for the fire and two to pour the melted lead in the strainers. After passing through the strainers it falls a distance of 150 feet, the passage through the air giving the shot their shape or form; they fall into a large tub or basin of water; here a man is engaged in dipping them out with a ladle and throwing them on an inclined plane, down which they run to a drum heated by steam and worked by machinery, so as to dry the shot; when dry they are passed into a revolving drum, which stops by actions of machinery every five minutes for polishing them; from this drum they are thrown into a hopper, and from this pass over a series of inclined planes, where the defective shot are carried off, and then through sieves into drawers, where they are assorted by the action of machinery on the sieves; then into the large boxes from which they are taken and put up in sacks, weighed and are ready for use.

A NEW WAY TO STOP OLD THIEVES.—The Liverpool magistrates are trying a new plan to stop robberies at night; they have ordered the police to look up all known thieves found abroad after sunset.

THE MODERN PARNASSUS.—Since the promotion of the originator at the Penny Postage, St. Martin's-le-Grand may be called the English Parnassus, for is it not the abode now of England's Hall of Letters?—Punch.

SPANISH ENGLISH.—The Espana has a piece of intelligence which is worth giving for the sake of the astounding spelling of English names:—On the 11th ult., it informs us, the English steamers Orinoco, Trump, and Toung reached the Bay of Gibraltar; the first two from Southampton (Southampton) with the 7th and 23rd regiments, and the last from Dept-fon with General Brooking's Camp-vol.

ALLEGIANCE.—We learn that an American citizen, belonging to that category recognised as such by the nationality doctrines of Mr. Marcy, in his Hulsevanum letter, but now in France, has been compelled by the French authorities to draw in the conscription, and, having drawn an unlucky number, he has been placed on the rank and file of the French army. An active negotiation is now going on at Paris for this man's liberation, and the French Cabinet is being pressed to make a final decision on the European doctrine of "once a subject, always a subject." It is expected that the Cabinet will declare, once for all, what amount of respect they consider due to a renunciation of allegiance, and to a simple declaration of intentions to become the citizen of another Government. The name of the individual in question is Menard.—New York Tribune.

HEAD-GEAR.—The Bash-i-Bozouks do not wear the fez, but have a strange and nasty fashion of bandaging their heads with all sorts of wrappers of dirty white and dingy red and yellow, an ill-favoured head-dress, which gives the idea of a perennial toothache.

MULES.—Colonel John Kinloch has passed through Madrid, on his way to Catalonia, to purchase mules for the use of the army in the East.

KAMAZAN.—In Turkey a singular custom may be noticed even among the most elevated of the land. At dinner for 11 months of the year the Pasha will use the European aid of knives and forks and separate plates for each guest. During Kamazan the dinner is served in the old Turkish style, and it is looked upon as meritorious or pleasing to return for a time to the usages which are abandoned, but which yet have not ceased to be remembered and regretted.

"CHARLEY" IS THE BATTLE.—Ships are in advance of the squadron, looking out for the "infernal machines." All the ships have watches posted in their tops, reporting every floating log of wood that floats near bearing any resemblance to a buoy—an appendage said to be attached to all those submarine traps.

FORTUNE'S CHANGES.—On the 10th of April, 1818, Prince Louis Napoleon acted as a special constable in the streets of London; on the 10th of April, 1851, as Empereur Napoleon III., he ratified in his palace of the Tuileries a convention of alliance between his own and the British government.

A Michigan man, who was a long time absent in Indiana, where he went to buy horses, apologized upon his return by saying that at every little damned town he passed through, the people wanted him to stop and be president of a bank.

FALLING OFF IN GOLD IN AUSTRALIA.—Melbourne, February 15, 1851.—It is pretty well "all over" with the Australian gold mines; the weekly yield is becoming "small by degrees and beautifully less." What will your Californian readers think when they hear that, for the past six months, every man in these diggings has not been earning, on an average, 1s. a week, an outside average yield of 80,000 ozs. per week, among, at the least, 150,000 diggers—out of which pittance each has to pay 30s. a month for his licence to the government.—Cur. San Francisco Herald.

SMART MANAGEMENT.—The lossiness with which matters are managed in the navy, is shown in America as well as here by a fact, that a sloop-of-war sailed from the United States for the West Indies, not long since, and not until she was near Jamaica was it discovered that there was no shot on board to fit a gun. Her guns were thirty-two's and her shot forty-two's; and she was compelled to put into Jamaica to obtain shot. We get this from Senator Mallory. At the Brooklyn navy yard they build gun-carriages for no other purpose, that we can perceive, than to sell them at auction for kindling wood. Clever old relation that "Uncle Sam," well he is.

Silistria, or, as the Turks call it, Distria, is an important post at the head of ship navigation on the Danube, standing on the south side of the river, in Bulgaria, about 275 miles from Constantinople. It is the capital of the sub-province in which it is situated.

CAUTION.

MESSRS. ALLSOPP AND SONS find it necessary to caution the Public, and especially Shippers of their Ales to the Colonies, against Frauds committed by parties in selling spurious Ales for those of Messrs. Allsopp and Sons.

Messrs. ALLSOPP and SONS have felt compelled, in the extent to which this disgraceful practice has been carried, to proceed in several cases by obtaining Injunctions from the Court of Chancery, and have ultimately been driven to prosecute criminally for the commission of this offence. They beg in call attention to the Case of THE QUEEN v. GILBY and GOSLIN, in which LORD CAMPBELL sentenced the parties charged to "Twelve Months Imprisonment, with Hard Labour."—Vivid Times and "Morning Advertiser" of the 18th May.

Messrs. ALLSOPP and SONS will thank all persons having reason to doubt the genuineness of any article sold under their name, in and then the earliest information, in order that immediate steps may be taken for prosecuting the parties.

Messrs. ALLSOPP and SONS will be happy to furnish the Names of respectable Houses, where a supply of their Ales may be dependent on, as genuine from the Brewery.

WATER
POISONED

BY LEADEN
PIPES.

"The above engraving represents accurately a section of a leaden pipe, which was employed for a short time in conveying water from a well on the grounds of Mr. DICK, of Honchurch, Isle of Wight. The original section of pipe is 8 1/2 in. long, 2 1/2 in. diameter, and 3-16 in. thick. A great part of the internal surface is corroded by the action of the water; but, as shown in the drawing, four deep excavations have been made, and another is shaded out of view by the manner in which the section of the pipe has been cut. The water has cut these deep pits almost through the pipe, and not only upon the portion which we have illustrated, but has formed similar channels throughout the entire length."—Expositor.

N.B.—The corrosive water of the Isle of Wight has no effect on Gutta Percha Tubing. See Testimonial below:—

DURABILITY OF GUTTA PERCHA TUBING.

Many inquiries having been made as to the durability of Gutta Percha Tubing, the Gutta Percha Company have pleasure in giving publicly to the following letter from SIR RAYMOND JARVIS, Ventnor, Isle of Wight.

(Second Testimonial.)

March 10th, 1882.

"In reply to your letter received this morning, respecting the Gutta Percha Tubing for pump service, I can state, with much satisfaction, it answers perfectly. Many builders and other persons have lately examined it, and there is not the least apparent difference since the first laying down, now several years; and I am informed that it is to be adopted generally in the houses that are being erected here."

UMBRELLAS.

THE "PARAGON," made on Fox's Patent Frames, is the only Umbrella that combines strength with such extraordinary lightness, withstanding only from 8 to 10 ounces.

From the experience of the last twelve months, during which time several thousands have been sold, W. and J. SANGSTER have such confidence in it as to warrant that they will undertake to keep in repair for a period of two years all that may be bought at either of their Establishments.

To gentlemen going to India, or any other hot climate, as also to tourists, the "PARAGON," as a sunshade, will be found invaluable.

W. and J. SANGSTER beg likewise to call attention to their ALPACA Umbrellas, which, on account of their durability and cheapness, continue to be largely patronized.

The extraordinary results of this application may be briefly noted in a few of the most prominent features, as the following:—All sharp edges are avoided; no springs, wires, or fastenings are required; a greatly increased freedom of suction is supplied; a natural elasticity, hitherto wholly unobtainable, and a fit perfected with the most unerring accuracy, is secured; while, from the softness and flexibility of the agent employed, the greatest support is given to the adjoining teeth when loose, or rendered tender by the absorption of the gums. The acids of the mouth exert no agency on the chemically-prepared White India-rubber, and, as it is a non-conductor, fluids of any temperature may with thorough comfort be imbibed and retained in the mouth, all unpleasantness of smell or taste being at the same time wholly provided against by the peculiar nature of its preparation. To be obtained only at

Copy of a Letter from Mr. G. Briggs, Chemist, Doule, Dated February 16th, 1850.
To THOMAS HOLLOWAY.

Sir,—I have much pleasure in informing you of a most wonderful cure of Dropsy, recently effected, by your valuable medicine. Captain Jackson, of this place, was afflicted with Dropsy for upwards of eleven months, to such an extent that he could scarcely walk, and he was much swollen, and water came out of his skin, so that a daily change of apparel became necessary, notwithstanding the various remedies tried, and the different medical men consulted, all of no avail, until he commenced using your Pills, which, and a strict attention to the printed directions, he was effectually cured, and his health perfectly re-established. If you deem this worthy of publicity, you are at liberty to use it.
I am, Sir, your respectfully,

The Company was originally a strictly Proprietary one. The Assured, on the participating scale, now participate unquenchably in four-fifths of the amount to be divided.

To the present time (1853) the Assured have received from the Company, in satisfaction of their Claims, upwards of £1,100,000.

The amount at present Assured is £3,000,000 nearly, and the Income of the Company is about £125,000.

At the last Division of Surplus, about £120,000 was added to the sums assured under Policies for the whole term of Life.

The Lives assured are permitted, in time of peace, and not being engaged in mining or gold digging, to reside in any country, or to pass by sea (not being seafaring persons by profession) between any two parts of the same hemisphere—distinct more than 33 degrees from the Equator, without extra charge.

All Policy Stamps and Medical Fees are now paid by the Company.

By recent enactments, persons are exempt, under certain restrictions, from Income Tax, as respects so much of their income as they may devote to Assurances on Lives.

The Annual Reports of the Company's state and progress, Prospectuses and Forms, may be had, or will be sent, post free, on application at the Office, or to any of the Company's Agents.

ENGLISH ARMY IN TURKEY WAR WITH RUSSIA.

Now Ready, Price One Shilling.
KNIGHT'S POCKET VOCABULARY
IN ENGLISH AND TURKISH. By Wm. KNIGHT, Member of the Royal London Yacht Club.
"This book will be indispensable among commissioned and non-commissioned Military Officers ordered to Turkey, as well as Officers of the British fleet in the Black Sea. The section devoted to provisions will be particularly useful on the coast near Sinop, as well as Varna."

"From being printed in English letters instead of Arabic characters, this book is as useful to a man before the mast or in the ranks, as to an Admiral or Field-marshal. No soldier or sailor bound to Turkey should be without this pocket vocabulary."

THE FIELD OF WAR.

OUR WOODEN WALLS.

THE BALTIC FLEET.

OFF CRONSTADT, JUNE 27-29.

Our two fleets left the anchorage of Seskar on the morning of yesterday, and, with the Imperieuse, 51, Captain Watson, Arrogant, 47, Captain Yelverton, and Desperate, 8, Captain D'Eyneourt, ahead, to look out for the infernal machines said to have been placed in our way, hove in sight of the fortress of Cronstadt about noon. Several floating bodies in the shape of beacons and buoys were examined, but the only infernal machines that we saw were in the shape of granite batteries bristling with heavy ordnance from every point.

After the fleets had anchored about 10 miles to the westward of Cronstadt, Captain Sullivan, in the Lightning, with the Bulldog, 6, Captain W. K. Hall, and the Magicienne, 16, Captain Fisher (paddle frigates), under his orders, proceeded to the approaches to Cronstadt to sound and reconnoitre, while the Imperieuse, with the Arrogant and Desperate under her orders, followed, and took up a position off the Tol Beacon to protect them. On the morning of the 27th the Lightning, with the Bulldog and Magicienne, got under weigh, and steamed to within about 2,000 yards of the outer forts. A small Russian steamer was near them all the time, but offered no interruption. It is believed she was without guns, perhaps sent to watch proceedings. We have heard a great deal about submarine batteries, to be fired by electricity.

We are at this moment about five miles north of Cronstadt, waiting for the weather to moderate a little to allow Captain Sullivan to pursue his duties. After his examination of the approaches to Cronstadt, the Imperieuse, &c., followed him round the Tol Beacon on his way to an anchorage, to sound and examine near the causeway formed between Cronstadt and Lisa-ness, but the wind has been too high to admit of anything being done in an open boat.

Soon after noon on the following day (28th) the recall to this exploring squadron was made, and the Imperieuse and her charge returned to the Admiral, who, fancying they had been too far from the fleet, ordered them to their former anchorage off the Tol Beacon. Having recalled the Arrogant, Magicienne, and Bulldog, all repaired to the prescribed rendezvous, and anchored about two miles from it, forming a line across the channel to Cronstadt.

On the 29th Rear-Admiral Chads, in the Driver, 6, paddle-sloop, Commander the Hon. A. Cochrane, with the Bulldog, went in near the forts, to search for one of the "infernal machines" reported to have been seen by some one on board the Driver. The Imperieuse also got under way for their protection. The Russians did not, however, attempt to stir during the time they were employed. The only thing found was a bea-coa. These "devils," as they are named, do, no doubt, exist; but it will be in the narrow channel to their ships, which number in all, as near as we can count them, 27 sail.

You will remember (says another account) that it has been asserted that these implements of destruction are covered with stones and small rocks, and their position marked with small buoys. Accordingly, very great circumspection and care were used by the gallant officers, as they discovered several buoys, which from their appearance answered the description that has been given of the marks placed to point out the locality of these newly-invented submarine wires. Cautiously the buoys were approached, carefully the chains to which they were attached were raised; and very anxiously their pendent burthen was looked for. It was quietly hauled on board, and to the anxious looks of the discoverers was exhibited only a large stone. The infernal machines have not yet been found, and it may be doubted if they are worth the trouble of looking for. Their power has been greatly exaggerated, and a little reflection upon the effect produced upon the surface of the sea by the discharge of powder in submarine blasting, will go far to dispel the unnecessary alarm that the implements have raised.

Our ships here are ranged as under:—

Duke of Wellington	131	Edinburgh	60
Hogue	60	Cressy	81
St. Jean d'Acro	101	Cicero	91
Imperieuse	51	Royal George	121
Blenheim	60	Majestic	81
Princess Royal	91	Nile	81
James Watt	91	Arrogant	47
		Desperate	8
		Pennelope	18

Pennelope—Bulldog, 6; Driver, 6; Magicienne, 16; Pennelope, 18. But these are not stationary.

INFLEXIBLE	FRENCH
Inflexible	93
Horcule	92
Tage	92
Duquesne	92
Austerlitz (screw)	100
Intret	80

These ships are anchored about 10 miles to the westward of Cronstadt, except the Imperieuse, Arrogant, Desperate, Pennelope, and Magicienne, stationed across the entrance near the Tol Beacon.

JOLLY TARS IN THE BALTIC.

The Portsmouth Guardian has the following letter from a native of Portsea, now serving in H.M.S. Blenheim, in the Baltic:—

FARO SOUND, June 22, 1854.

At twelve o'clock on Sunday night last a party of blue-jacket volunteers, from different ships in the fleet (three being from the Blenheim), rowed four miles up a creek, and having landed, walked five miles inland, where they attacked a Russian telegraph office—took all their signal-books, telescopes, &c.—cut down the staff, and chopped it into fragments. The party then dug a hole, and put in a decent dose of sixty pounds of gunpowder. They then laid a train to it, retired to a respectful distance, fired it, and in less than one minute the foundations of the telegraph office were fighting their way through the clouds to a tremendous height. The party then took one of the men and made him conduct them the shortest route to the water side, in case of the Russian cavalry coming down upon them—this being only about two miles from a station where there was a body of cavalry and lots of troops of all sorts. When he had brought them to the water-side they gave him a sovereign, thanked him for his kindness, and despatched him back to his comrades. They returned on board about nine on Monday morning.

Our men had to pass through a village on their way, and as they were strongly armed with cutlasses and loaded muskets with fixed bayonets, the villagers ran out to beg for their lives, thinking the new-comers were Frenchmen, as they do not much like the French. However, on being given to understand that they were Englishmen, the women turned from sobs to smiles, and the men, some of whom could speak a few words of English, began to speak and call them "good men." They also understood shaking the hands as a token of friendship. The little Finnish lasses soon found that a British tar would sooner kiss them than kill them—and this they soon experienced. They were very pretty girls, and in a few minutes they seemed to get very much attached to our men. So much for the life of a jolly tar.

A SAILOR'S LETTER.

"BARO SOUND, FINLAND, June 21.

"Dear Sir,—I have just read your kind letter, and I humbly beg pardon to answer it at once, although it is past time at night, and I am writing on the upper deck. Dear sir, I must tell you we are under sailing orders to go to sea to-morrow. We are going to blockade Revel, a port about 40 miles above here. The whole fleet is lying here, with the exception of Admiral Plumridge's squadron. The whole fleet is the finest that ever was seen by the oldest man living. To see the implements of destruction on such a scale, it really looks something awful grand. They are the finest ships that men can build. I wish you could have the beautiful view this evening. The sun is getting low over the trees; on shore it really is splendid. Thank God, you are not here, for this is no place for you, sir. Here we are, like dogs tied by the neck, all ready to fight when let go. To-day we have had a hard day's work. Admiral Chads had us all on shore, with our gun-boats and field pieces and marines, to exercise. We have had a very hot day. What with the heat of the powder and the sun, it made us sweat pretty fair. But, thank God, we are all returned on board without any accident. To tell you, sir, what we hear, sir (but I don't know that it is altogether true, although we expect it every day), we hear the whole fleet is going some day this week to engage Swenborg, the entrance to Helsingfors. It is a very strong place to take. It has three batteries, mounting altogether 800 guns, and 12 sail of men-of-war (line-of-battle ships). So you see, sir, we have our work cut out for us to do; but we shall do it, with the blessing of God. The Vulture has just arrived to our Admiral with the melancholy news of losing 28 men killed, and a great many wounded. The Vulture and some other of Plumridge's squadron engaged the part up the Gulf. They got possession, and took some merchant shipping out of the port without much loss, and two days after the Vulture went on shore, not far from the same place, to get some water. The men were all on shore, hard at work, and some of the steamers paddle-boats were sent to protect them; but the Russians came down by hundreds and murdered the poor fellows like dogs. The boat went in and fired at the troops, when a Russian gun-boat that had been lying in a creek with six guns, the first time she fired at our poor fellows they killed one lieutenant, two midshipmen, and 12 men. Then they were forced to give in by being overpowered. They have lost altogether about 60 men killed, and a great many wounded. The whole fleet is raving mad to have revenge. The whole fleet want to be at it, and settle the dispute; but our Admiral has something in the wind that makes him so quiet. We expect he will break loose every day. We are going to leave the fleet in the morning; but we shall be close to the place of action; so it is very likely by the time you get this Swenborg will be no more, nor any of its shipping. I hope to have the pleasure of fetching some of them to Sheerness, to show you all what we can do. But I must come to a conclusion, for I can scarce keep my eyes open, for I am very tired. But I must tell you, sir, I thought of you most of any time on Easter Sunday; it blew a bitter gale of wind, and the snow and ice was fit to cut my poor face to pieces, for I was at the wheel for two hours, from 6 to 8 in the morning. Another day was the 6th of May, a sorrowful day for us, for we lost one of our young men, off our topsail yard. You must excuse my writing; I have had a very bad thumb, and I can scarce hold the pen, so I must give over and go to bed. So good night, and may God bless you and Mrs. — and the children be the prayer of

"Your obedient and humble servant,

The French frigate, La Pourcelvante, left Wuxholm (near Stockholm) on the 2nd inst., and passed Farnsund (in the Gulf of Bothnia) in the evening.

MA TRA, July 2.—The Labradore, French steam-frigate, from Algiers and Phillipville, bringing 28 officers and 932 non-commissioned officers and privates, and 20 horses, and the Albatros, French steam-frigate, from Toulon and Stora, bringing 30 officers, 831 non-commissioned officers and privates, 23 horses, and 58 seamen, arrived yesterday, and will leave for the East to-morrow. The Victoria, English steamer, having made good her defects, left for Constantinople with 96 horses yesterday, and has on board Lieutenant King, R.A.

The Moniteur de l'Armée says—"The division under the orders of General Baraguay d'Hilliers, which is to embark on the 14th for the Baltic, is composed of two brigades, commanded by General d'Hag, and Cressy. The first comprises the 12th battalion of Infantry, Chasseurs, the 2nd Regiment of Light Infantry, and the 3rd of the line. The second consists of the 48th and 51st Regts. of Infantry of the Line."

EMBARKATION OF FRENCH TROOPS FOR THE BALTIC.

SAILING OF TROOPS.

The Flora, Dummet master, which arrived at Falmouth on Sunday, spoke the transport No. 28, bound to Yarna, on the 3rd inst. She had encountered a gale, and lost fore and main topmasts.

TROOPS ON THE MARCH, OR UNDER ORDERS FOR FOREIGN SERVICE.

Major C. C. Young's No. 2 company, 12th battalion, and Captain Alexander Irving's No. 3 company, 12th battalion, assembled on the Guard Mounting-parade of the Royal Artillery, at Woolwich garrison on Monday forenoon in service marching order, and were inspected by Major General E. C. Whynot, commandant of the garrison. These companies are ready to embark for the East on the shortest notice.

Colonel William Campbell, commanding the 2nd Dragoon Guards ("Bays") at Dondalk, has been recently called on furnish 15 serviceable troop horses for the 15th (Kloze's) Regiment of Light Dragoons (Hussars). The latter corps has just returned from India, after fifteen years' service there; and yet it is said that it is about to be equipped for Turkey with the least possible delay.

The 4th Dragoons have this week moved from Dorchester and Trowbridge to Exeter, en route for Plymouth, to embark for Turkey.

SOLDIERS' WIVES AND FAMILIES.

SUMMARY, June 12.—Freed from the trammels of packhorse, gubbe, and baggage, we proceeded on our road along the banks of the Devon, and just the French and British camps, which extended far over the hills. It was in the lazy hour of the noonday heat. The little flags marking the encampment of each regiment dropped lazily on the staffs; soldiers in undress lay basking in the sun; soldiers' wives, carrying heavy jugs of water, came trudging up the hill, in attitudes of the greatest dejection, and with words of complaint, scarcely audible from their parched and blistered lips. Sore was the havoc which their first days of real campaigning had made with the proverbial notions of the British females. The bonnets were gone—Heaven knows how long ago. Perhaps they got soaked in the violent rains which drenched the camp at Santarl, and then they were hung aside as worthless, half-rotten things, which only heat the head, but cannot protect it from sunshine, wind, or rain. These women that wailed or muttered about the camp at Dewna, went with their wretched, seedy-looking shawls drawn over their heads, their faces were flushed with the sun, and perhaps with strong drink, and their features wore that settled expression of suffering, discomfort, and despair, which at length, hardened and bronzed with depravity, stamps the face of the confirmed camp-follower. And what else can they become, these poor women, whom a cruel kindness has allowed to attach themselves to the baggage-train of the army? How they live and what they live on is a mystery to the world, to the soldiers, and perhaps to the women themselves, for it would appear that after giving them a passage out, the War-office has made no further provision for the support of the regimental women. They really and truly wander about, and know not where they shall lay their heads. It appears that no tents are provided for them, and that with the cavalry no provision is made for the transport of the women from place to place. They are a burden to themselves, to their husbands, and to the officers, and in a great many instances the poor creatures are hated and scouted by the soldiers generally. A great many of them are even now heartily tired of the life they have led, and the worse life which they foresee. It seems a strange inconsistency in a manner to legalize the women joining the expedition, to let them draw lots for the privilege, to grant them a passage out, and then all at once to treat them as strangers, and persons who have no business to be where they are. I am convinced that this matter need not be known in England to receive its immediate correction. Those who did so much for the soldiers' wives that remained at home, will raise their voices on behalf of those that have been permitted to follow their husbands. If these women have no business in the campaign, and most assuredly I am not one of those who say "they have, why then let them be sent back; but do not, for God's sake, for your mothers' and sisters' sake, who are widows as well, condemn them, your countrywomen, to a life of unspeakable misery and woe!

SOLDIERS' WIDOWS AND ORPHANS.—It is a significant fact for the Czar that this country, in four months, has most cheerfully given the astonishing sum of £76,000 for the special benefit of her soldiers' wives and families, and this in the face of a double income-tax, an increasing rise in the price of provisions, and the prospect of a lengthened struggle by sea and land with one of the most military nations in the world. We are informed, and we doubt not for a moment, that should there be any general action, in which great loss of life will be inevitable, the same ready benevolence is prepared to double the amount for the widows and orphans of our brave and patient defenders. We use the word "patient" advisedly, thoroughly appreciating the excellent endurance of our soldiers. From the peculiar position of the soldier, and the very necessary and admirable state of discipline which results from the ranks are very great benevolent reforms in the soldier—his regimental savings-bank, the reading-room and barracks fair and just rotation system, and the almost entire extinction of flogging. But has crime increased in the army, or discipline been relaxed, because the soldier has been encouraged to read and not to drink, to save and not to squander? There is a regiment now in India, upwards of 1,000 strong, which, in the course of one month, had only two soldiers brought up for drunkenness—a regiment as notorious for its discipline as it is remarkable for the amount of savings deposited in the regimental bank. We must now save the widow and orphans of the soldier from pauperism. At present there is no home for the widow but the workhouse, no pension but a few weeks' outdoor Poor Law relief. Every community, every body of tradesmen, artificers has some asylum or benefit club for their widows and orphans; for the army there is nothing of the kind, except the Cambridge Asylum, where there is only room for 21 widows without children, and no widow under 50 years of age is admitted. Is it right that the five widows and 11 orphans of the men who went down with their colour in the Euro transport should have no national fund to look to as a resource? Had it not been for the ready and effective aid of the Central Association for Soldiers' Wives and Widows in Waterloo-place, which has granted the sum of £415 for the permanent relief, these poor people must have become paupers, although their husbands were among the best non-commissioned officers of this regiment.

THE TURKS AND RUSSIANS.

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 26.—The Russians did not succeed in taking any of the outworks of Silistria. The heroic defence of that city and its detached forts, by the Turks, reflects the greatest honour and glory upon the Ottoman arms. A Turkish bulletin has just been published, and is circulating about Stamboul, announcing these welcome tidings to the population, who are to-day celebrating the festival of the Bairam, at the close of the forty days' fast of the Ramazan. Early this morning the Sultan repaired in state to the palace of the old Seraglio, where he was met by all the Ministers and high officials of the realm, who on this day prostrate themselves at the feet of the Ottoman throne, and declare their allegiance and devotion to the Padishah. As may easily be imagined, the news from the Danube has added a zest to this ceremony, and the hearts of the people are elated at the success of the Ottoman arms against the Russian armies.

We read in a letter from Simla, of the 29th ult.:—"Omar Pasha has lately received the following letter from Abdul-Kader, dated Broussa, the 18th:—

"My very dear Brother,—The gates of Paradise opened themselves for me when I had a conversation with the only Prophet in a dream on the eve of the 1st Ramadan. I heard all the great and holy souls who repose in Abraham's bosom proclaim your name with shouts of joy, and I saw a large rainbow extend across the striking ranks of the holy souls when they called you by name. God is with you, my brother. Wherever you go glory and victory will attend you. I envy you. Carry off the camps of your enemies by your troops. May my blessing accompany you. The enemy will fly before you like jackals, and our children's children will glorify your name. Do not draw back, but march your troops forward. The Prophet will fit. The day of expiation is arrived for the Glours of Moscow. Blessings on you, my brother.

"ABD-EL-KADER."

THE WAR IN EUROPE.

An Ottoman brigade, consisting of a regiment of infantry, a regiment of Lancers, and 20 pieces of cannon, commanded by Mustapha Pasha, has been attached to the 3rd division of the French army commanded by Prince Napoleon. This force attracted particular attention at the late review of the troops at Douai-Pasha. The regularity of its evolutions, the sturdy make of the men, and the cleanness of their attire, were the subject of general praise. The new gaiters—which, in imitation of Napoleon's soldiers, and perhaps as a compliment to his nephew, have been introduced into the Turkish military wardrobe—seem very serviceable.

The French, under General Biquet, have quite taken possession of Adrianople. A military mass came off at this place on the 18th. The Consular corps and the most distinguished Catholic families were invited to attend the ceremony, which took place in the park of the city, the altar being fixed under the shade of a large tree. General Prim was among the notables on the occasion, and the ceremony was followed by a collation given by the General to the distinguished visitors. The camp occupies an island formed by the two arms of the river Toudja and also the left bank of the stream. The dreary town has become quite cheerful through the presence of the active and energetic Westerners, who, however, are said to give no cause of complaint as to their general behaviour.

On the 19th three battalions of Chasseurs d'Afrique had arrived from Gallipoli.

THE WAR IN ASIA.

General Osen-Sacken is to be Governor-General of the Caucasus vice Prince Woronzow, whose retirement, at first announced as temporary, now assumes its true character of a resignation. According to the tenor of the news from Circassia, the new Russian Governor may look to be soon relieved of his duties. The Turks will soon have a powerful ally in the field. The union of all the Circassian tribes against the common enemy is rapidly going on. Already Schamyl hangs on the slopes of the Caucasus with 30,000 men. The Russians are preparing to defend Tiflis, the capital of their government, against the expected attack. The mountain tribes concentrated by Schamyl have entered an entrenched camp between the rivers Kur and Jori, and their incursions already extend to the immediate neighbourhood of the Russian head-quarters.

BARDANE, COAST OF CIRCASSIA, May 25.—It was here, between the Russian forts Golovino and Navagidaski, now abandoned, and some twenty miles apart, that some months ago Mustapha Pasha, with a division of steamers, landed powder for the Circassians—an event brought forward by the Russian commander as an excuse for the destruction of the Turkish fleet at Sinope. Bardane was now chosen as the starting-point of the first British expedition into the interior, as most likely to afford greater means of communication, and also because it was the native place of Ismail Bey, the principal man appointed by the Turkish Government to accompany Captain Brock. Ismail Bey went on shore immediately after our arrival, and was honoured with a salute of nine guns. Sir Edmund Lyons and ourselves soon followed him, and were cordially received by the Circassians. After pulverizing some time with them, and wandering a little along the beach, where the furrow of a Russian shot was pointed out to us, we returned to our ship, to dine once more with the admiral, before embarking on our somewhat venturesome expedition. It was late in the afternoon before we took leave of the Aganemnon and Sir Edmund Lyons, and the moment our boat touched the beach, bang went nine guns from the Aganemnon. Sir Edmund was saluting an old friend, Capt. Brock, with a view, at the same time, of increasing his importance in the eyes of a semi-savage nation, by giving this further mark of official character to his mission. Ismail Bey had procured horses to take us to his house, where we were to remain until we could complete the necessary arrangements for journeying to the interior. Our luggage, and the five sappers and miners that were to accompany us, had already preceded us there. We were soon in our saddles, and soon disappeared in the thicket, losing sight both of ships and men.

KAZEROUN, June 19.—Along their whole line, from the Caucasus to Bafazid, the Russians seem at length in motion, and so far as we can glean from all reports, are concentrating on positions where defensive warfare can be easily converted into any measure that the event may invite. Gori, at the distance of about 40 miles from Tiflis and 150 from the coast at Cherketli, is the point to which the moving bodies seem converging. It is a wide level plain, capable of containing a prodigious mass of troops, and furnishing ample forage for the cavalry, while its position, at the junction of the Koor with a large stream from the Elt-ur range, covers it on the west and south, and places the force occupying it on the flank of any army moving upon Teflis by Akhalkizik and the inviting valley of the Khrum. It is at the same time directly in the way of any attempt of Selim Pasha by the passes in front, from which his troops, should an advance be attempted, must either debouch in detail upon this very plain, or must, by endeavouring to turn it, expose themselves to an attack in flank from a concentrated and powerful force. All estimates of the enemy's force at this point must be merely conjectural. Even to the public authorities the actual number of the enemy in Gumri (only a few miles from Kars) is as great a mystery as the squaring of the circle. Feriul Pasha (the German Colonel Stein), who has been recalled from Kars, through General Guyon's instrumentality, arrived here on the 11th, and reported that, after mature digestion of all the information gained during a long course of espionage in Georgia, he could estimate the whole available forces of the enemy at 54,000 men, and not one bayonet more. He himself rode into Gumri in disguise, with five men, and penetrated so far as actually to count the tents, and even the horses, and he positively states that 10,000 men is the greatest number possible to assign as in a garrison.

NAVAL OPERATIONS IN THE BLACK SEA.

(From the Monitor.)

Vice-Admiral Hamelin has addressed to the Minister of Marine and the Colonies a report, dated Baltiseik, June 23, giving an account of various operations of the squadron. To this report is annexed that of M. Darrieau, Captain of the Descartes, of which the following are the principal extracts:—

"Admiral,—Conformably with your instructions, I left the squadron on the 10th inst. in company with the English frigates Furieuse and Terrible.

"I placed myself under the command of Captain Loring, of the Furieuse. We arrived in sight of Sebastopol on Sunday, the 11th, about five o'clock in the evening. We approached the entrance of the bay near enough to take a good view. Everything there appeared to us to be in the same state as at the preceding inspections. We counted eighteen ships of large dimensions—viz., twelve ships of war, four frigates, two steam-frigates, and also a great many masts belonging to ships of smaller dimensions. We imagined that three steamers, which we did not perceive, were at sea, and perhaps in the direction of Nicolaief. We, consequently, sent envois to the Gulf of Péreecop, to the north of Cape Tarkan. We inspected the coast everywhere with care. I was able to convince myself that it was guarded with vigilance. Throughout its whole extent a service of inspection and transmission of despatches was established. As soon as we appeared two Cossacks left with their horses at full gallop in the two opposite directions of the coast.

"We were expected, and, besides, the Russians, I believe, wanted to get us into a snare, which we avoided. Three ships of war kept towards land at a very short distance, going in the direction of the north; six steamers, two of which were frigates, were placed a little to the west of the Quarantine Bay, without allowing their smoke to appear. The object was to allow us to approach, and then to endeavour to hem us in, so as to take us between the frigates and the ships of war. We came from the north, the ships were under the land to the north of Sebastopol, the frigates were in the bays situated between the port and Cape Chersonesus. We steered at first to the south for a vessel signalled by the watch, when we perceived the six steamers and the three ships in the positions under the land which I have just indicated above.

"Our route then became more oblique. We made use of the variable wind from the S.S.W. to the S.W. to render the presence of the ships useless. The Russians had allowed us to go beyond their parallel, when they sailed upon us. We formed ourselves in a front line, the Descartes in the middle. The Russians imitated this manoeuvre, and steered upon us in the same order, the Cape to S.W. one quarter S. At ten minutes past 12 o'clock a frigate, recognised as the Vladimir, fired a gun at a great distance. We replied by hoisting our colours. The fire was not continued, the distance being too great. We had slackened our course. It was only when the bullets could reach with full power that we began the firing. It was half-past one o'clock. We then took aim, directing our fire upon the Russians, who took to flight as rapidly as possible. We pursued them with all our steam up, firing upon them in the direction of Sebastopol. We did not discontinue the fire till half-past 3 o'clock.

"It was with a feeling of pleasure, and I may almost say of pride, that we saw in the presence of this squadron of vessels the flags of six steamers disappear behind the walls of the fortifications of the port.

"The Russians must have had the idea of the vessels running foul of each other, as the decks were covered with soldiers.

"From Friday, the 16th, to Monday, the 19th, we proceeded, with little steam up, to the south of Bolaklova. In this interval we only saw one three-masted Sardinian vessel, proceeding to the Sea of Azoff.

"On Monday, at daybreak, we were under Cape Chersonesus. The weather was hazy and rainy, so that we could not make the reconnaissance we desired on that day. At intervals of better light we perceived several sail in the horizon, without being able to distinguish their number. In the afternoon the weather improved, and we saw four vessels beating about at the entrance to the port. We immediately made for that division, which was composed of two frigates and two ships of the line, one a three-decker; but, although we approached within reach of a cannon shot and a-half to offer battle, they did not accept it, and the steamers remained at anchor behind the line for bearing upon us at the extremity of the roadstead of Sebastopol. We were near enough to be able to judge that the number of the ships in the port of Sebastopol was the same as at the period of our first visit.

"After leaving Sebastopol, we passed the mouths of the Danube and Kostendje."

Vice-Admiral Hamelin sums up the above report in the following terms:—

"Your Excellency will see, in short, that our three frigates in cruise could not induce three Russian frigates and three corvettes to measure their strength against them, beyond the protection of the ships of their squadron."

THE ATTACK ON ODESSA.—The Monitor publishes a despatch from Vice-Admiral Hamelin, commander-in-chief of the French squadron in the Black Sea, giving some details of the damage done to Odessa during the late bombardment:—"The ten pieces of artillery that defended the entrance and heads of the mole were all dismantled; the powder magazine constructed to provide the wants of the battery were blown and nearly all the men employed on the battery were killed by the explosion. The Government storehouses, containing all the matériel for the use of the Government steamers in the Black Sea, were entirely consumed. A barrack, constructed for the Cossacks, shared the same fate, burying many men and horses in its ruins. A large storehouse, full of grain and provisions, was also burnt. The mole itself, struck by a great many balls, was seriously damaged. The field-battery of four guns—16-pounders—which attempted to reply to the artillery of the steamers, was almost totally destroyed, with men and horses. The Imperial port contained 53 sailing vessels, three steamers, and five dragging machines. Of the three steamers, one, the Dniester, an iron boat, of 40-horse power, belonging to the Government, having received various shots, filled and went down in five minutes. Unsuccessful attempts have been made to raise her. Another iron steamer, the Lulea, sank, after receiving 16 shots in her hull; it is not thought that she can again be set afloat. A third steamer of 90-horse power, the Audin, was sunk, but has since been recovered. Of the five floating dragging machines the newest was totally destroyed. The four others have been more or less damaged. Of the 53 sailing vessels which were in the port of Odessa, one, the Nicholas I., of about 600 tons, was burnt; two brigs were totally consumed, as also a schooner laden with coals from Newcastle, bound for Ismail. The remainder, consisting of vessels of different tonnage, were all more or less damaged, and many of them sunk. From private information it results that the number of killed was not less than 200. The above information comes from a person who was present at Odessa during the bombardment, and who has since remained there. The despatch is dated Balchik, June 29, on board the Ville de Paris.

CAPTAIN BUTLER AND LIEUTENANT NASMYTH.—[From the Morning Chronicle.]—Sir,—It appearing that some of the newspapers describe Captain James Armar Butler, of the Ceylon Rifle Regiment, who (with Lieutenant Nasmyth, of the Bombay Artillery) has so highly distinguished himself during the siege of Silistria, and of whom honourable mention has been made in your journal, as being, as well as Mr. Nasmyth, in the East India Company's service, I beg leave to state that he is in Her Majesty's service, and served the campaign of 1846 and 1847 in Kaffrland as ensign in the 60th regiment. Captain Butler, who was unfortunately severely wounded on the 18th ult., is son of Lieutenant-General the Hon. H. E. Butler, and a cousin of the Earl of Carrick. —I am, sir, your obedient servant,

HONOURS FOR THE ARMY.—The following letter, from a British officer, at Malta, appears in Saunders's News-Letter:—

Malta, July 2, 1854.

"Lieut. King, Royal Artillery, who has been on special service at Tunis for the last two months, purchasing horses for the service in Turkey, returned here in the transport steamer Victoria on the 27th ult., and left the same evening with his cargo of animals for Constantinople and Varna. In consequence of some accident to the machinery of the Victoria, she was obliged to return to Malta to repair her screw, and ultimately left the harbour last night.

"Lieut. King's purchases consisted of some 260 horses and 70 mules. Of the horses he had the pick of the Bay's own stud, consisting of about a thousand; but neither they nor any of the horses he saw while in the country were particularly good. He was obliged to travel some 120 miles up the country, but all the examination he was allowed, although he came as an unlimited purchaser, was to look at their teeth and feel their legs, which, as the country was swampy and muddy, and they had been floundering about in it for some months, was not a very satisfactory proceeding, and to see them driven past him, trotting, walking, and cantering, without however being backed.

"The average price paid for the best of the Bay's horses was about £13 per head, which Mr. King gave reluctantly, having in the first instance valued them in their own country at only £8 10s. The mules he describes as far superior to the horses, and he was obliged to pay very nearly as much for them as for the others. In bringing these horses from the interior to Tunis he was much annoyed by a predatory band of Arabs, who, however, on a slight hostile demonstration being made by him and a few artillerymen who accompanied him, gave him afterwards but little trouble. He experienced every attention from the Bey and his government, and is by the authorities here considered to have been highly successful in his mission.

"We have now got 10 Russian prizes lying in the harbour. Very great dissatisfaction is expressed, particularly among naval men, at there being no Admiralty Court to condemn them at Malta. Their officers and men are idly spending their valuable time here doing nothing; the cargoes are, in this roasting weather, rapidly deteriorating, and eventually it will appear these prizes have to run the risk of a voyage to England, which, as some of them have not the very best rigging or spars in the world, and moreover would not rank A 1 at Lloyd's, would uselessly expose the lives of those who man them.

"The officers of the 68th Light Infantry got up, a day or two ago, some manly athletic games for their men; the prizes were all of a useful description, such as shell jackets, boots, socks, forage caps, &c.—in fact, all that a quartermaster's store could furnish, with one exception. The 'stock' was not included in the list."

LETTER FROM TURKEY.—The following is an extract of a letter received yesterday morning from an officer of the Light Division, dated "Aladyn Camp, June 27:—You will have been informed by telegraph before this reaches you that the Russians raised the siege of Silistria on the night of Friday, the 23rd inst., and retired across the Danube. The official announcement reached the authorities here on Saturday evening, the 24th, stating that the Turks had destroyed all their outposts. On receipt of the information Lord Cardigan was immediately despatched in the direction of Silistria with two squadrons of the 5th Dragoon Guards and the 5th Hussars, to reconnoitre and watch their movements. The general impression is that they will retreat beyond the Pruth. Silistria was so closely besieged for some days previous to the raising of the siege that the Turks were on the point of capitulating. Had the Russians made one more vigorous attack Silistria would undoubtedly have fallen. The allied force was just about marching to its relief when the unlooked-for and astounding news of their retreat reached us, and it, of course, has stayed all formal movement for the present. From all I can learn, the Russians are in great dread of us; indeed, so much so, that I greatly fear we shall never be afforded an opportunity of testing their own much vaunted powers. But suffice it to say that, should we ever get a chance of encountering them in the field, I feel confident we shall give them a fearful thrashing, for every man appears determined that those he has left behind shall not have reason to be ashamed of him. Sir Richard England's division has arrived at Varna from Gallipoli. The allied force here, including Turks, amounts to upwards of 70,000. It would astonish you to see the immense tract of ground it covers. All the troops are in excellent health and spirits, notwithstanding the intense heat—the thermometer 94 in the tents. Russell dined with me the other day; all our fellows like him much."

EMBARKATION AT CALAIS.

THE FRENCH EXPEDITIONARY FORCE FOR THE BALTIC.

The Emperor arrived at Boulogne from Paris shortly after seven o'clock on Tuesday evening, for the purpose of reviewing the auxiliary army intended for the Baltic, previous to the embarkation of the first division in British ships.

At eleven o'clock on Thursday morning His Majesty, accompanied by General Baraguay d'Hilliers, Generals d'Hugues and Grévy, Colonel Fleury, and numerous other military officers, proceeded to the extensive camp now formed at Wimereux, a short distance from Boulogne. The troops were drawn up in lines of regiments in the separate camps, to receive the Emperor, whose appearance on the ground was the signal for the usual military salutes. As his Majesty proceeded on horseback along the lines, each regiment shouted "Vive l'Empereur" in the most enthusiastic and unanimous style. The inspection having been brought to a close, his Majesty summoned the officers of the respective regiments, about immediately to march, towards him, and a circle having been formed, the Emperor, in the hearing of a large portion of the troops, and many of the spectators, delivered with much animation the following address:—

"Soldiers,—Russia having forced us to a war, France has armed five hundred thousand of her children. England has called out a considerable number of troops. To-day our troops and armies, united for the same cause, dominate in the Baltic as well as in the Black Sea. I have selected you to be the first to carry our eagles to these regions of the North. English vessels will convey you there—a unique fact in history, which proves the intimate alliance of the two great nations (peuples), and the firm resolution of the two Governments not to abstain from any sacrifice to defend the right of the weak, the liberty of Europe, and the national honour.

"Go, my children! attentive Europe, openly or secretly, offers up vows for your triumph; our country, proud of a struggle which only threatens the aggressor, accompanies you with its ardent voice; and I, when imperious duties retain still distant from the scene of events, shall have my eyes upon you,—I shall be able to say: They are worthy sons of the conquerors of Austerlitz, on Eylau, of Friedland, and of Moskowa.

"Go, my God protect you!"

Loud and prolonged shouts of "Vive l'Empereur!" and other loyal cries followed this address. Several of the non-commissioned officers were afterwards decorated, and stepped forward to receive medals from the hands of the Emperor. The 12th battalion of Chasseurs, the 2nd light infantry regiment, the 3rd regiment of the line, and the 43rd and 51st regiments, then departed in excellent style, in full marching order, before the Emperor and his staff, and proceeded en route for Calais, the place of their embarkation. The enthusiasm of the troops, with their evident anxiety to be employed in "the defence of the weak, the liberty of Europe, and the honour of their country," imparted a large amount of interest to the proceedings of the day, which, in other respects, were not characterized by any of those more exciting features usually connected with reviews and military movements. His Majesty returned from the review just at the moment when the steamer from Folkestone had steamed up to the jolly, and the numerous passengers (210 in number) and crew gave him a warm and truly English cheer. The whole number of troops to be embarked from the port of Calais is 9,300 infantry; there are also a number of the horses of the staff. Admiral Berkeley has, in concert with the French Vice-Admiral Lapierre, made all the necessary arrangements for carrying out the embarkation. The troops embark in English ships, but the artillery and heavy ordnance will, it is expected, be conveyed by ships of the French navy. The present division will be formed into two brigades, under General d'Hugues and General Grévy; the whole force under the command of General Baraguay d'Hilliers, General Ronault, and General Niel, of the Engineers. Nothing has transpired with respect to the destination of the forces in the Baltic, though the report that it is intended to take military possession of the island of Aland, as a point d'appui fortifié, is very generally received. The whole strength of the division intended for service in the Baltic, including some English marines, will be equal to 25,000.

A large flotilla of steamers and small vessels arrived at Calais on Thursday evening, to carry the troops on board Her Majesty's ships. The squadron of French ships for the transport of artillery and stores consist of two of 100 guns, two of 90, two frigates, and some smaller vessels.

The following are the ships of war employed:—
Hannibal, with broad pendant, screw two-decker. Roy William, three-decker.
Algiers, screw two-decker. Gladiator, 6, paddle-frigate.
St. Vincent, three-decker. Sphinx, 6, paddle-frigate.
Fermagat, screw-frigate.

The following are transports:—

Prince, screw, 2,700 tons. Columbia.
Belgravia. Clifton.
Herefordshire. Julia.
Fox. Nimrod.

The Columbia ships the staff horses (21).

The French Government steam-packets Reine, Hortense, and Corse assisted in the embarkation; and the following English steamers were employed to convey the troops to the ships:—

Dasher, 3, paddle, Captain Lefebvre. Sprightly, paddle, tender.
Wildfire, paddle, tender. Adder, paddle, tender.
Echo, paddle, tug. Comet, paddle.
Fire Queen, paddle, tender. Avon, paddle, tender.
Fearless, paddle, tender.

(All of the Royal navy.)

Four Royal Mail steam-packets, three of the South-Eastern Company's steamers, and one Dover-harbour tug, with many fishing boats.

EMBARKATION OF FRENCH TROOPS IN BRITISH SHIPS OF WAR.

CALAIS, FRIDAY.

The Emperor Napoleon arrived at Calais from Boulogne yesterday afternoon, at four o'clock.

Commodore the Hon. F. W. Grey, Captains Talbot of the Algiers, Kingcome of the Royal William, Mansell of the St. Vincent, and Clifford of the Sphinx, with Mr. Consul Bonham, waited on the Emperor, and met with a most cordial reception.

Proceeding to the business in hand, His Majesty expressed an opinion that the embarkation had better not take place on Friday, referring condescendingly to the still lingering English prejudice against that as an "unlucky" day.

It was then proposed to postpone the embarkation to the 20th inst., but the weather being fine, and all the transports ready, it was finally settled by the Emperor and the British officers that the baggage and material—which includes 6,000,000 cartridges and 320,000lbs. of powder—should be placed on board on the Friday, and that the troops should embark on Saturday, July 15.

AQUATICS.

LIVERPOOL YACHT CLUB.

The second club sailing match of the Liverpool Yacht Club took place on Wednesday last, the course being from the flag-ship at Birkenhead, round the North Magazine, thence round Askew's Buoy, which is half-way between the Rock Light and the Crosby Ship, at 12 o'clock. The following yachts were at their station:—

1. Truant	sloop	4 tons	Commodore.
2. Lirone	cutter	8 "	H. C. Tomlinson, Esq.
3. Kelpie	sloop	4 "	Vice-Commodore.
4. Priesten	cutter	13 "	Rear-Commodore.
5. Challenge	sloop	8 "	A. Bower, Esq.
6. Electric	cutter	8 "	Thos. Wilkinson, Esq.
7. Spirit	sloop	4 "	Thos. Wilkinson, Esq.

The signal gun being given they all got well away with the exception of the Truant, which was unfortunately capsized owing to the center board being raised instead of lowered in its place, she was quickly righted, but not in sufficient time to admit her taking her place in the race. The Challenge took the lead to the magazine, which she rounded first, closely followed by the others, from this point they had to bent to the buoy, and the breeze having freshened told well on the larger craft, Challenge and Electric fought hard for first place, but Priesten being more powerful in the sea-way headed them both, and was the first round for the run home, followed by the Challenge and Electric passing the Rock-light, the wind having died away, the Challenge again took the first place, which she held to the finish, gaining every minute on her competitor until the Flag-ship was reached, the Yachts rounding as follows:—

Challenge	h. m. s.
Electric	4 35 30
Priesten	4 39 40
Spirit	4 45 0
Kelpie	5 1 0
Lirone	5 1 55

The Sphinx having carried away the jaws of her gaff had to give up the race early in the day. After the match, the prize, a silver tankard value £20, manufactured by Mr. Hunsburgh, was presented by the Commodore to Mr. Bower, who was congratulated by the members present on the success of his pretty little vessel.

ROWING AT ETON.

The grand heat of the Pulling Sweepstakes came off on Friday, four boats came to the post. Every one looked in first-rate condition. They were placed thus from the Eton shore:—

Hall, ma. and	Mills and	Clive and
Warre.	Chapman, ma.	Mr. Trefusis
Malcolm, cox.	Gosling, cox.	Lubbock, cox.
	Collins, ma. and Collins, mi.
	Lane, Fox, mi. cox.

Soon after the time appointed they took up their positions, and many an eye was cast on Hall, ma., and Warre, who were the decided favourites; nor was their opinion wrong, for immediately the gun was fired they showed in front, and at the Railroad-bridge were two boat's lengths ahead. The rapidity with which they shot ahead was a good deal owing to their station, which is so far superior to any other. Now a splendid race ensued between the other three boats, Mills and Chapman lying first, and Collins (major and minor) last. In this order they rounded Lower Hope; but before Upper Hope had been arrived at, Collins (major and minor) went ahead of Clive and Mr. Trefusis, Mills and Chapman, ma., still keeping two boat's length in front of the former pair. Collins (major and minor) now set to work in determined style, and before long overhauled Mills and Chapman, and consequently occupied the second place, Hall, ma., and Warre rowing strong and well together, kept some way in advance. They turned the Rye Peck in this order. Hall, ma., and Warre, Collins (major and minor); Mills and Chapman, ma.; Clive and Mr. Trefusis. All continued well in their stations all the way down, till Clive and Mr. Trefusis drew close to their opponents (Mills and Chapman), and both are deserving of the greatest merit for the plucky way in which they strained every nerve for third place; and after nearly 400 yards had been gone over, both boats keeping exactly in a line, Clive and Mr. Trefusis shot ahead by hard spurt. In the meantime, the first and second boats had been gradually gaining on their opponents. Hall and Warre rowed under Bridge, amidst deafening cheers, about five boat's lengths ahead of Collins (major and minor), the third pair about the same distance from the second.

Thus, Hall, ma., and Warre, are entitled to the Silver Oars and Challenge Cups. And Collins (major and minor) to the Silver Medals. This year, every one was satisfied with the result, there being no foul or stoppage during the whole race.

The winning pair are the fastest we have seen at Eton, and every credit is due to them for the great pains which they have taken. The second pair rowed well and in good style, but could not compete with their opponents in pace.

FREEMASONRY—GLOBE LODGE, No. 23.—On Wednesday this lodge held their annual banquet, at the Star and Garter, Richmond, when about seventy ladies and brethren of the craft assembled, under the presidency of the W. M. Hewlett. All went off with éclat, and the excellent singing of Messrs. Perren, George, and Farquharson Smith, contributed very considerably to the pleasures of the evening.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

THURSDAY, LONDON.—Earl Granville gave some explanations touching the civilities he had shown to a Russian subject, Count Pahlen, who was now in London, upon which some criticisms had been passed in another place. The count, he said, held no political functions, had not been in Russia for many years, came to England from Madeira, and solely for the purpose of arranging some private business.

The subject then dropped.
The Merchant Shipping Bill was read a second time.
The Bankruptcy Bill was read a third time and passed.
The Oxford University Bill was read a third time and passed.
Commons.—At the morning sittings, the Drainage of Lands was read a third time and passed.

The consideration in committee of the Convict Prison (Ireland) Bill was resumed, and the remaining clauses agreed to.

In the evening,
Replying to questions from Mr. Hunt,
Lord J. Russell and Sir J. Graham stated that the mouths of the Danube were strictly blockaded; that the blockade of other Russian ports in the Black Sea and Sea of Azoff was contemplated, but could not be carried into effect before the interchange of certain communications with Paris and Constantinople was completed; and that the White Sea would be blockaded upon the 1st of August.

In reply to Mr. L. Burt, Sir J. Young announced that a bill would be brought in to amend the Crimo and Outrage Act, which expires in ordinary course on the 31st of August.

The House having gone into committee on the Landlord and Tenant (Ireland) Bill.

Mr. Naylor complained of the course adopted by the government with regard to this and another measure designed to settle the Irish landlord and tenant question.

After an angry discussion in which Lord John Russell and Mr. Disraeli participated.

The subject was permitted to drop, and the Chairman reported progress. The House went into committee on the Stamp Act, and agreed to the new schedule of duties proposed by Mr. Wilson, after some discussion.

The Standard of Gold and Silver Wares Bill, and the Turnpike Acts Continuance Bill and the Highway Rates Bill also passed through committee.

The Parochial Schoolmasters (Scotland) Bill, the Youthful Offenders Bill, and the Merchant Shipping Acts Repeal Bill were respectively read a third time and passed.

The Militia (Scotland) Bill was read a second time.

The House having gone into committee, Mr. W. Patten obtained leave to bring in a bill for regulating the sale of beer and spirits on Sunday.

The House adjourned at two o'clock, Friday morning.

GREAT NATIONAL ARCHERY MEETING AT SIREWSBURY.

The long-expected meeting of the Royal Toxophilites took place on the Race Course, on Wednesday and Thursday last.

A line, says the Shropshire Conservative, that we are all best acquainted with from the peer to the peasant, is one that was instilled into our minds in our juvenile days. Then we thought it sublime poetry—

"A was an archer, and shot at—a frog!"

We challenge any of our readers to recall a passage on archery more antecedent to this in their memory.

The gentlemen commenced shooting at half-past eleven o'clock, and attention was chiefly drawn to No. 3 target, as there stood H. A. Ford, Esq., the holder for several years of the champion's gold medal. At two o'clock luncheon was served up in the "Waterloo Tent" at two shillings per head. Mrs. Mayward, of the Raven and Bell Hotel, provided for the occasion in a most liberal manner. More than 560 ladies and gentlemen availed themselves of places at this board of plenty. At the back of the "Waterloo Tent" was a large marquee where the Horticultural Society held its first exhibition. The interior was tastefully decorated, beautiful statues and vases being interspersed amidst the magnificent floral collection. Adjoining this

IRELAND.

THE TIPPERARY ABDUCTION CASE.—The application to admit Mr. Carden to bail was made on Monday in Chambers, before the Lord Chief-Justice Levey. After hearing counsel on both sides, his Lordship refused the motion—first, on the ground of the near approach of the assizes, and secondly, because it was doubtful if a much more serious charge might not be preferred than that of attempting to commit an abduction. It appeared by the information that the prosecutrix, Miss Arbutnot, was moved from her position in the car or carriage in which she was seated, and the Chief-Justice would not say that an actual abduction had not been committed in point of law. A charge of conspiracy might also, perhaps, be preferred. In fact, without going into the whole case, which he should not be justified in doing, he had no hesitation in refusing the motion. The particulars of the above abduction case appeared in "THE FIELD" of last week, at page 636.

ARMY.—When the 21st Fusiliers and 63rd Regiment embark from Cork for the East there will be only two regiments and 28 depots of infantry in Ireland—a smaller force than has been in that country for many years, not excepting the period of the Peninsular war.

DUBLIN BAY REGATTA.—A regatta, under the management of the Royal Western Yacht Club of Ireland, will take place in Dublin Bay on the 20th and 21st of July inst. This club gives a cup of 100 guineas for yachts to be manned and steered by gentlemen members of Royal yacht clubs. There is to be a cup of 50 guineas for yachts under 25 tons, to be manned and steered by similar hands.

GOLD FIELDS.

The gold brought by the New York steamer to-day is less than on former occasions, the amount being £57,000. A larger sum was intended to have been sent, but, owing to a decline in the rate of exchange, a portion was withdrawn. Meanwhile £250,000 had arrived from California, and some recovery in the stock-market may therefore be anticipated, although at the departure of the packet there had been scarcely any abatement of the pressure.

Foreign Intelligence.

ADVICES FROM MADRID of the 11th inst. state that the city is tranquil. The insurgents were near Despernaperos. The Queen's troops pressed them close. General Serano had joined them, but had been unable to induce any one to accompany him.

THE TURKS on the 7th took Mogan Island, in the Danube; and on the 8th Omar Pasha, with 40,000 men, surrounded the Russians and took Giurgevo. The Russians cut their way through with the loss of 900 men. General Chruleff lost an arm. Prince Cortschakoff was to take up a position on the 8th, four miles in front of Bucharest, but has only 32,000 men under him.

ADVICES FROM CONSTANTINOPLE of the 3rd state that the Duke of Cambridge had returned to that city. Considerable bodies of French troops were daily despatched to Varna. The works of the Russians at the Sulina mouth of the Danube have been bombarded.

LETTERS FROM ATHENS of the 17th state that piracy was increasing. Twenty Samian vessels had been burnt by an English steamship. Domestic visits had been made at the house of M. Metaxa, ex-Minister of Greece, at Constantinople, at the office of the Bank of Athens, and at several other places. M. Deliani, Secretary-General of the Interior, had been dismissed.

A LETTER FROM BUCHAREST, dated July 2 (O. S.), says—"We have all sorts of rumours here about the war; one thing is certain, the Russian troops are quitting Bucharest daily, though there are still plenty left. They generally march off in the night, or very early in the morning. It is said that the French, Turks, and English are advancing. The Russians are retreating to Pokschani, the frontier town between Moldavia and Wallachia; they have fortified the place, and there they will probably make a stand, and there will be the grande bataille, if any. Bucharest is without fortifications, and not a good place for a battle, as they have no position to retreat on. The Russians want to take the Wallachian police, the military, and the Ministers and employés—in short, to remove the seat of government to Pokschani—and they wish as many of the inhabitants to follow them as possible, so as to leave Bucharest as poor as possible for the Turks; but the Ministers, military, and employés won't stir, as they don't want to spoil their interest with the Turks if they get the mastery, which is likely. On the whole, there is no personal danger, nor is anybody afraid. I for one shall be glad to see the English red coats."

THE GREEK INSURRECTION.

KALABAK, IN THESSALY, June 19.—Kalabak, the bugbear of the Turkish authorities in Thessaly, and the last stronghold of the Creek invaders, was taken yesterday afternoon by the Turkish troops of Epirus, under the personal command of the diplomatic General Fuad Effendi. The Creek invaders in Thessaly had concentrated their whole force in Kalabak; and, emboldened by their late success over Selim Pasha and his Arabs—their only success during the whole war—they had established themselves in that place, interrupting the direct communication between Epirus and Thessaly, and spreading a panic over the whole of this latter province. It was accordingly determined to attack as soon as Abdi Pasha should come up with the troops.

This happened on Friday evening, the 16th inst., and on the morning of the 17th the whole army, composed of five regular battalions, 3,000 men, and about 4,000 irregulars, marched off towards Kalabak. The regulars and the six guns proceeded on the side of the river, while the irregulars skirted them on both flanks. The valley formed by the river Silymbria extends more and more as you go on towards Trikala; the country is one beautiful park, covered with oaks and gigantic plane trees, while in the distance you see the mountains of the Pindus on the right, and those of Ilass on the left. Without encountering any resistance, the army marched on to about two or three hours' distance from Kalabak, where it remained for the night. On the morning of the 18th Fuad Effendi assembled all the officers, and made them a speech, in which he said that, having delivered Epirus, they were going now to succour their brethren in Thessaly, and that he hoped they would behave as they had done hitherto. The address was answered by the assurance that he could count upon them, and the march began in excellent spirits. A body of regular soldiers going to attack is always an impressive sight, and Turkish troops are even more so, for they march in silence; hardly a word is heard; only now and then a couple of soldiers put themselves at the head of a battalion, and intone with stern simplicity a religious chant; and those few touching notes, uttered with an awful earnestness, gave to the force an air of solemnity seldom seen in a body of soldiers. Kalabak itself is built on a slope which extends to the foot of three gigantic limestone rocks (about 1,000 feet high), on which 14 monasteries are erected. There is no access to these extraordinary structures, except by means of ropes and a basket, something like in the monastery of St. Catherine on Mount Sinai. The strength of the position of Kalabak consists in three conical hills slightly connected with each other, and forming a semicircle in front of the village, but leaving it open towards the east on the side of Trikala. On these three hills, as also on the three points which form the promontory of Prevendi, the Greeks had thrown up their fortifications and pitched the tents which they had taken from Selim Pasha. In a council of war, under a plane tree, among the burning stones of the river-bed, it was determined to make a demonstration towards Kalabak, and attack Prevendi. For this purpose, three bodies of irregulars were despatched towards this latter place, while the whole regular force and the guns marched, with flags flying and drums beating, in the river-bed, as if against Kalabak. In front of Kalabak they halted, and the guns began to play on the fortified hills. In the meantime, the irregulars advanced in three bodies on Prevendi, and in less than half-an-hour after the first shot was fired the Giga Arnavts took the hill nearest to the river by assault. No one ever saw regular troops advance more steadily and with greater determination under a murderous fire. And the most curious thing is, these people have no bayonets on their muskets, only yatagans in their girdles. The example of the Gigas was soon followed by the rest of the irregulars; a few minutes after the hills were all taken, and the Greeks, after leaving about 100 dead and two flags, were flying in all directions. As soon as these hills were won, the Turkish regulars made an attack on the three hills before Kalabak, and carried them with a gallantry which would make them worthy to fight on the Danube. The taking of Prevendi had spread such a panic among the Greeks that they ran off without losing a man, and made only a stand behind the village in one of the gorges between the great rocks, but were driven also from them. The whole fighting began at three, and was over at five. The results of the victory, besides the dispersion of the insurrectionary head-quarters in Thessaly under Huhji Pétros, are six flags, about 20 chests of ammunition, the four guns which the Greeks had taken from Selim Pasha, all the tents which they had taken from him, about 30 prisoners, and 25 Egyptian soldiers who had been detained since Selim Pasha's defeat. The Turks, regulars and irregulars, number between 40 and 50 dead, and as many wounded. All the troops behaved admirably, but we cannot find words enough to speak of Fuad Effendi. He was the soul of the whole. He paid for every prisoner of war brought alive, and threatened to have every one shot who would cut off a head. Now, this is a Turk! Let us contrast his behaviour with that of the patriots (!). The correspondent of the Times walked with Mr. Longworth on the slope of the hills before Kalabak, where Selim Pasha had abandoned his camp. They found 15 places with the remains of burnt human bodies, several of them burnt with pitch. According to the accounts of the Egyptians and the prisoners, they were the bodies of the Egyptian wounded whom Selim Pasha had abandoned to their fate. In several places they also found the stakes to which they had been bound.

FRANCE.

(From our own Correspondent.)

PARIS, THURSDAY, JULY 13.

An uneasy feeling, for a moment, prevailed here on the prospect of the renewal of the negotiations with Russia, through Austria, by which all Europe was imposed upon last year; but the Emperor quitting Paris for the camp at Boulogne, took occasion to assure some of the general officers, who attended his farewell levee, that there was no room for apprehension on that score, and that he had not called upon France for such sacrifices as she has made for the war, to allow of such palpable trifling, at a moment when every day is of incalculable value in the progress of hostilities. His Majesty left Paris on Tuesday, and though some care had been taken to avoid giving anything of a public character to his departure, a crowd assembled at the railway station, who received him with loud acclamations, and on his taking his seat in the carriage, the air rung with cries of "Vive l'Empereur." It burst from a detachment of the military who were waiting at the terminus to proceed to Boulogne, to embark for the Baltic, and was taken up with enthusiasm by the crowds without. The Emperor came to the carriage door, affably acknowledged the demonstration, and the train started amid loud huzzas.

The terminus of the Northern Railway has been for the last few days in a state of unusual activity and bustle, owing to the departure of the troops intended for the Baltic; and, in addition to this, the quantity of heavy artillery sent off has been so immense, that the belief of serious siege operations being in contemplation amounts nearly to a certainty. It is really gratifying to witness the genuine gaiety exhibited by those soldiers as they march through the city on their way to the terminus, returning every demonstration with a heartiness and goodwill, and keeping up that character for cheerfulness and gallantry which distinguishes them at home as much as their courage and endurance in the field.

The late "revolution" in Paris—start not, I only mean the revolution of the Grand Opera—has, like most events of the same kind, led to much dissatisfaction. That some serious change of system was required was too evident, but people have little faith in a well-turned "report" from the Government, such as that you published last week, when they see it wind up with the nomination of a committee of directors, not one of whom have a scintilla of practical knowledge of a theatre, and in which the name of a single musician, or one even connected with musical science (although there are many in Paris admirably qualified to assist in a reform of this nature), seems studiously omitted. The fact is, the management of a theatre—one of the most difficult tasks probably known on this little subliminary sphere of ours—has been time out of mind a favourite amusement with gentlemen amateurs, as many of them know to their cost; and doubtless, when, as in the present rare case, they have not themselves to "pay the piper," it promises something extremely agreeable; but how public taste or the Opera are to benefit it remains to be proved. The difficulties of their task will, however, soon begin—or, rather, have already begun—for the want of singers and the impossibility of procuring them has already been announced to the new directory. No; the present French Government has unquestionably done some wonderful things, but it will find it impossible to create singers at its bidding; and without some such miracle, the new management must necessarily be, for some time at least, but a continuance of the past. Of the present company, most of whom are engaged for two years, the following sketch will give you a pretty correct idea. I begin with the best man, though his stay among us, you will perceive, is very uncertain.

M. Roger, who lately threw up his engagement, in consequence of the slights put upon him by the management, is to be entreated to remain, but his compliance is by no means certain, tempting offers both from Germany and Russia. His engagement will not expire until the end of October; his salary is £240 per month. He is altogether an accomplished artist, though not sufficiently powerful for the vast area of the Salle. The second tenor, Gueynard, who has been thrust into a first place in a most unseemly manner, to annoy Roger, possesses a good voice but no execution, and, worst of all, belongs to the roaring tribe. This lucky gentleman receives £160 per mensem. This engagement lasts until the end of next year. Chapais, Boulo, and Brignoli conclude the list of tenors; they are all of a certain kind of secondary merit, and receive from £300 to £700 per annum.

In basses and barytones we are worse off. The best is Obin, possessing a fine voice, commanding figure, and much intelligence as an actor; but he cannot bear the fatigue of the terrible long operas, the terrible size of the Salle, and the archi-terrible orchestra. His salary is between seven and eight hundred a-year. Depassio, second to the above, is a ready and useful artist, without ever rising to be great, which Obin sometimes really is. Morelli is a fair barytone, of the Italian school, and would be far more at home at the Italian Opera. Merly, Marie, and Kenig follow in their train, at salaries varying from two to five hundred a-year. We must add Massol, who, though no singer properly speaking, produces a certain effect in characters requiring energy, and to this alone he owes his engagement.

Of the ladies you know as much as we do in Paris. The first soprano is of course Mdle. Cravelli, who, with immense means, is so self-willed and fanciful, that she seldom does justice to the composer or to herself. Her engagement was for two years, and commenced last winter, terms, £6,000 for the first year, £6,500 for 1855, for which she gives up her summer congé in consequence of the Great Exhibition. The sum is very large, but so far this engagement, heavy as it is, has paid the theatre well, though it cannot be said that she has fully succeeded in satisfying the musical public in either of Meyerbeer's operas, the Huguenots or Robert le Diable. Her singing in Spontini's Vestale was however perfection.

Second on the list stands Mme. Todesco, possessing a high and clear soprano, with very rich lower tones, altogether a splendid organ, and, though somewhat stout in person, remarkably handsome; as an actress cold and inanimate. Her salary is £2,400 a-year, but in consequence of Cravelli's engagement she gave immediate notice to quit, and is engaged at St. Petersburg for two years, if our old friend Charley allows the opera to go on there this winter. Mdle. Pomot is a first second rate, and Mdle. Marie Dupuy is a promising young aspirant from the Conservatoire. Both are soprani. Of contralto we have none. I make no account of Mme. Bosio, one of the best and most rising singers of the day, as she is announced as having quitted this theatre for the Italians.

So much for the singers, who you will perceive do not promise very brilliantly; but the real attraction of the Grand Opera for the public lies not in the music, but in the ballet. In this department, the Parisians are not only unrivalled but unapproached. In individual dancers they may be equalled and even surpassed—as in the case of the Italian Tagliani, or the German Ellsler; but what nation in the world ever equalled their taste for elegant grouping or for the picturesque beauty of their arrangements of a stage tableau? In these their taste and invention seem positively inexhaustible, and whatever be the heaviness of their operas, which is greatly augmented by the nuisance of spinning them out to five acts, it is impossible to witness the ensemble of a ballet at the Académie without delight. As singers are not to be had, it is to this attraction the Direction will rely for public favour. With a good ballet they may perform even "Gluck" to crowded audiences, whose name—notwithstanding all the cant about classic music—without some such talisman, would render the house a desert.

Our splendid new street, the Rue de Rivoli, is rapidly approaching completion, and will indeed be magnificent. The houses are all of noble proportions, and several have profusely ornamented balconies up to the highest floor, while others have richly sculptured ornate balconies, but no balconies; for the terrible mistake of having the houses all alike, which makes the part of the street originally built, facing the Tuilleries' gardens, so monstrous, has been happily avoided. The effect of the street, even in its present unfinished state, is admirable; when completed it will be the finest in Europe. The street is to close, I am glad to find, with the magnificent barracks, or rather military palace, just erected beyond the Hotel de Ville, which will form a noble termination. The intention of carrying it to the quarter St. Antoine is abandoned for the present,—I hope never to be taken up. It would be bringing the Sicus Cidotte and Aristo—old St. Giles's and Belgravia—into too close a juxtaposition.

COLONIAL INTELLIGENCE.

AUSTRALIANA.

OUTWARD BOUND.—The departures from the port of London for the Australian colonies during the past week show a considerable increase. They have comprised altogether 14 vessels, nine to Port Phillip, with an aggregate burden of 5,030 tons; three to Sydney, with an aggregate burden of 1,913 tons; one to Adelaide, of 934 tons; and one to Hobart Town, of 387 tons. Their total capacity was consequently 8,264 tons. The rates of freight continue to exhibit heaviness, owing to a decrease of general shipments.

LIVERPOOL.—The new mammoth clipper, Champion of the Seas, built by Mr. Donald McKay, of Boston, for Messrs. James Baines and Co's. Black Ball line-of-packets, from this port to Australia, arrived in the Mersey on Monday evening from New York, with a very large cargo of breadstuffs. The Champion of the Seas cleared at New York on the 14th ult., but owing to the difficulty of procuring seamen, she was detained for a considerable period in the stream, and at Sandy Hook. Notwithstanding that she had very unfavourable and baffling winds during the entire length of the voyage, her performances have been regarded as exceedingly satisfactory; several of the first-class liners for this and other ports which left a considerable time before her not having yet made their appearance.

THE AUSTRALIAN TRADE.—The shipment of goods to the southern colonies continues good, although not quite so active as about a fortnight back. The clearances during the past week were 15 of the aggregate burden of 8,928 tons, whilst the entries outwards for loading were 11, at 7,361 tons. The trade is nevertheless dull, and freights have further declined to 50s. and 60s. per ton, while instances are known where even a lower rate has been taken.

HORTICULTURE.

HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The third and last flower fête of this society took place on Saturday, the 8th inst. In the grounds at Chiswick, and unusual exertions were made to give éclat to what was understood to be an effort to revive the falling popularity and declining fortunes of the gardens. The great source of the income of the society has been these flower-shows, but, of late years, the fickleness of the climate has told sadly against them, and the ill-luck of the Chiswick fêtes has become almost proverbial, two out of three in each year proving failures from unfavourable weather or other causes. There is a fashion in these matters as in everything else, otherwise we can scarcely understand how the attractions of the Chiswick gardens on a fête day could ever fall of bringing together a large assemblage of the rank, beauty, and fashion of the metropolis. The collection of trees and shrubs in the arboretum is unusually rich; the green sward and the promenades are nowhere else in such excellent order; the display of fruit and flowers is the finest and most extensive of the season; the society procure the best musical entertainment, and are patronised by the largest and most brilliant assemblages seen out of doors in the metropolis; and yet the glories of Chiswick have apparently departed, and fashion, in one of its usual incomprehensible vagaries, has taken flight to the Botanic Gardens in the Regent's Park, or meditates a visit to Sir Joseph Paxton's suburban palace at Sydenham. With a view of halting the season with éclat, and making up for the failures of the May and June fêtes, Her Majesty was pleased to signify her intention of visiting the grounds on Saturday last in the course of the afternoon; and as a visit at that hour was unusual, and as there was some risk that Her Majesty might be subjected to some inconvenience from the eagerness and pressure of the fashionable crowd, very extensive preparations were made by the council to enable the Royal visitors to inspect the exhibition without intrusion or annoyance. The public were requested to assemble before four o'clock, in order that the road and drive through the Duke of Devonshire's grounds might be kept clear. The entrance gate opposite his grace's avenue was set apart for the illustrious visitors, and an awning was put up, scarlet cloth laid down, additional policemen posted, strong wooden barriers erected round the tents, and every other precaution taken to make Her Majesty's condescending visit as agreeable as possible. At half-past four all the tents were closed, and the visitors—of whom at least 7,000 or 8,000 were present—took up their positions outside the barriers, and at every point from whence a view of the illustrious party could be obtained. Owing to some mistake or misunderstanding on the part of the society, the visit of Her Majesty was expected and announced for five, instead of half-past six—the hour at which the Royal party arrived; and for more than two hours the visitors, to their great discomfort, were kept standing round the barriers in momentary expectation of the Queen's arrival, many of the ladies almost fainting from the heat and exhaustion, but none being disposed to give up their vantage ground in the aerial ranks which swarmed round the tents. The military bands, of which there were three in attendance—the Coldstream, 1st Life Guards, and Grenadier Guards—washed their sweetness upon inattentive ears; they marched from the gardens into the Duke of Devonshire's grounds, but very few persons accompanied them. At length the cheers of the populace outside announced Her Majesty's arrival, and she shortly afterwards entered the gardens, leaning on the arm of Prince Albert, and followed by their Royal Highnesses the Prince of Wales and Prince Alfred, and attended by the Countess of Gainsborough, and the other ladies and gentlemen of the suite. The Queen, who looked in excellent health and spirits, wore thin muslin robes, deeply bonneted and trimmed with blue, a white silk mantle, and white lace bonnet, and carried in her hand a magnificent bouquet, the appropriate tribute of her loyal and dutiful lieges at Chiswick. The Royal party, who were attended by several members of the council, spent upwards of an hour in examining the splendid collection of fruit and flowers, and then returned to their carriages, proceeding through the Duke of Devonshire's grounds to Buckingham Palace. The noble proprietor was, we were sorry to learn, absent from indisposition. Although the morning was dark, threatening, and showery, the afternoon turned out exceedingly fine, and after the Queen's departure some thousands of the visitors remained promenading in the gardens and through the grounds of the Duke's suburban villa, which as usual were thrown open on this occasion. The following is the award of the judges:—

DEVIZES FLOWER SHOW.

The first horticultural exhibition took place in the Old Castle grounds on Thursday. The principal stands were the orchidaceous plants shown by Mr. Wheeler, of Warminster; the stove and greenhouse plants by Mr. W. Simpkins, of Exeter; Mr. Joy, of Broomfield, and Mr. Allen; and the calcareous plants by Messrs. Joy and Wheeler. The geraniums contributed by Messrs. Simpkins and Mould were in the opinion of judges, the best ever exhibited in Devizes; and the fuchsias of Messrs. Joy and Fox (considering the time of the year) were also very good. Other flowers and plants there were exceedingly beautiful; among them we may mention the delphinium, shown by Mr. Wheeler; the ferns, by Mr. Joy; and the gloriosa, by Mr. H. Butcher. The collection of roses was not so large as it has been on former occasions; but there were some remarkably fine blooms.

DUNMOW FLORICULTURAL SOCIETY.—On Wednesday week the summer exhibition of this society was held in a spacious marquee erected in the pleasure-grounds of W. T. Wade, Esq. There was a marked improvement in the quality and quantity of the specimens, and especially the roses, which were the admiration of every spectator. A splendid hyacinth bearing fifty-three blossoms, and a pretty trained hoya carnea, sent by Mrs. Barnard (Olive), the cut flowers from the garden of the Viscountess Maynard, the unique geraniums of T. White, Esq., and indeed the entire display of floral beauties was well worth a visit. Mr. Stacey's 12 verbenas, Smith's King, Napoleon Buonaparte, Zouave, Madame de Lavière, Azura, Morning Star, Madame Pompadour, Mr. Kikpatrick, Paganini, Celine Malet, St. Margaret, and Madame Thoral—several of them being seedlings, and all very new, were beautiful examples of first-rate culture; and the bouquet of British wild flowers, sent by Mrs. Clayton, was a pleasing addition to the show. In the fruit department there was some magnificent strawberries.

HEREFORD HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.—This society announces its next show for the 25th inst., on which occasion will be offered two special prizes of 5*l.* and 3*l.*, for the two best miscellaneous collections of nine stove and greenhouse plants—distinct species.—The competition will be open to all England.

AGRICULTURE.

THE POTATO IN IRELAND.—The fatal second week in July—the period at which the first symptoms of the blight have invariably shown themselves—has brought with it the usual reports of isolated cases of failure in the new crop. A Cloves paper announces the undoubted appearance of the disease on the leaves and stalks in some fields in that district, but a hope is expressed that it may be but a solitary instance, and that the large breadth of potatoes sown in the county at large may be still spared from the devastating ravages of a general blight. The taint has also been traced in some fields in the county of Dublin and other places; but by some the sickly and shrivelled appearance of the plant is attributed to the unseasonably high winds which prevailed since the commencement of the present month.

CHARLTON-CUM-DOVER.—HAY-MAKING.—The haycrop in this neighbourhood is nearly all down, and much of it is in the rick. The crop is not so heavy as in most years, which may be attributed chiefly to the cold spring, which impeded its growth. By the end of next week, if the weather continues as favourable as it has been for these few days past, we may hope to see most of the fields cleared, and the hay secured in good condition.—Maidstone Journal.

GUANO.—A deputation of shipmasters had an interview with the Right Hon. E. Cardwell and Lord Stanley of Alderley on Saturday, at the office of the Board of Trade, with reference to the loading of guano at the Chiswick Islands.

IMPORTATION OF GUANO.—On Monday a return was printed by order of Parliament, which showed a great increase in the importation of guano. In the month ended the 5th June, there were 17,793 tons of guano imported, against 5,891 of the same month last year.

MARKETS.

MONEY MARKET.

MONDAY.—The English funds closed at a decline of a half per cent. from the prices of Saturday. Consols for money, which left off at 92½, opened at 92½ to 92½, and, owing to a steady preponderance of sales, although the transactions were not generally large, they declined until they touched for a moment 92½. From this point there was a slight reaction, and the final quotations were 92½ to 92½ for money, and 92½ to 92½ for the August account. Bank Stock left off at 208 to 210; Reduced, 92½ to 92½; Three-and-a-Quarter per Cent., 92½ to 92½; Long Annuities, 4½; India Stock, 227 to 232; India Bonds, par to 3s. premium; Exchequer-bills, 1s. discount to 2s. premium; and Exchequer-bonds, ½ to ½ premium.

TUESDAY.—The English funds were again heavy and closed at a further decline, although some reaction from the lowest prices was experienced before the termination of business. Consols for money, which left off on Monday at 92½ to 92½, were first quoted 92½ to 92½, whence they receded to 91½. This fall brought in one or two buyers, and there was a partial recovery, the last official transactions being 91½ to 91½ for money, and 91½ to 92 for the August account. Throughout the day the rate of interest for loans on Consols was 4 per cent., and on all other descriptions of Government securities it was 5 per cent. Bank Stock left off at 208 to 210; Reduced, 91½ to 92; Three-and-a-Quarter per Cent., 92½ to 92½; Long Annuities, 4½; India Stock, 227 to 231; India Bonds, par to 3s. premium; Exchequer-bills, 1s. discount to 2s. premium; and Exchequer-bonds, ½ to ½ premium.

WEDNESDAY.—Owing chiefly to the state of the weather, this was the heaviest day experienced in the Stock-market for several weeks past. Consols for money, which left off on Tuesday at 91½, opened with extreme dullness at 91 to 91½, and ranged between 90½ and 91½ throughout the greater part of the day. Towards the close of business, in consequence of a considerable decline on the Paris Bourse, the tendency to depression increased, and the final prices were 90½ to 91 for money, and 90½ to 91 for the August account. Bank Stock left off at 209 to 210; Reduced, 90½ to 91; Three-and-a-Quarter per Cent., 91½ to 92; Long Annuities, 4½; India Stock, 227 to 230; India Bonds, par to 3s. premium; Exchequer-bills, 1s. discount to 2s. premium; and Exchequer-bonds, ½ to ½ premium.

THURSDAY.—The English Funds opened under the full influence of Wednesday's depression, but they rallied almost immediately, and closed at an advance of more than 1 per cent. Consols, which left off on Wednesday at 90½ to 91, were first quoted 90½ to 91, and one exceptional transaction took place even at 90½; a steady rise, however, then commenced, and continued up to the termination of business, when the prices were 91½ to 92 for money, and 91½ to 92½ for the August account. Bank Stock left off at 209 to 210; Reduced, 91½ to 92; Three-and-a-Quarter per Cent., 92½ to 92½; Long Annuities, 4½; India Stock, 227 to 230; India Bonds, par to 3s. premium; Exchequer-bills, 1s. discount to 2s. premium; and Exchequer-bonds, ½ to ½ premium.

FRIDAY.—Consols, which closed last night at 91½ to 92, opened this morning at 91½ to 92. At twelve o'clock they were 91½ to 92.

SMITHFIELD.

MONDAY, July 10.—There were rather more beasts, but choicest descriptions were not plentiful, and, consequently, quite as dear as of late. Trade was heavy for inferior qualities. The supply of sheep was larger; they were, however, readily sold at about last Monday's quotations. Lambs met with a dull sale at rather lower rates. Calves, on the average, were lower. From Germany and Holland there were 1,197 beasts, 1,040 sheep, 377 calves, and 80 pigs; Spain, 1,380 sheep; Scotland, 200 beasts; and 1,900 from the Northern and Midland Counties. Best Scots, Herefords, 5s. to 5s. 2d.; best Short-horns, 4s. 10d. to 5s.; second quality Beasts, 3s. 8d. to 4s. 4d.; Calves, 3s. 8d. to 4s. 8d.; Pigs, 3s. 6d. to 4s. 8d.; best Downs and Half-breds, 0s. 0d. to 0s.; best Downs and Half-breds, short 4s. 10d. to 5s. 0d.; best Long-woolled shorn, 4s. 6d. to 4s. 10d.; Rwes and second quality shorn, 3s. 8d. to 4s. 4d.; Lambs, 5s. 0d. to 5s. 8d.; Beasts at market, 3,335; Sheep and Lambs, 29,240; Calves, 453; Pigs, 310.

COUNTRY CATTLE.

DERBY, July 11.—Our market continues to be but thinly supplied with fat Beasts. The number to-day was less than the average for several years past; the quality of the animals was of the inferior kind, for which high prices were asked. The supply of Sheep and Lambs, about the average, without any alteration of price. Fat and store Calves, about the same. There were several pens of fat Pigs, which were well sold. Beef made 6½d. to 7d.; Mutton, 6½d. to 7d.; Lamb, 7d. to 8d.; Veal, 6d. to 6½d. per lb.; Pigs, 10s. to 10s. 3d. per score; rough Fat, 6s. per stone, commencing July 12; Hides, 3d. to 3½d. per lb.; Calf Skins, under 10 lb., 4d.; above 10 lb., 3½d.

OXFORD.—The show of fat Cattle at the Oxford monthly cattle fair, on Wednesday, was unusually small; buyers were plentiful, consequently great prices were obtained, in some instances as high as 5s. 4d. per stone. Milch and store Cows were also scarce and dear. Good Mutton was by no means abundant, and former prices were easily obtained. Store Sheep of all kinds were numerous; trade rather slack. The supply of Pigs was moderate; a great many changed hands at prices somewhat higher than our last quotations.

ROTHESAM, July 10.—There has been a remarkable falling off in the number of stock sold; all were sold at full prices. Mutton a farthing a pound advance. The numbers disposed of were 262 English beasts, foreign ditto 20, and Sheep 2,140. The quotations were, English beef, first quality, 8s. 3d. per stone; second, 7s. 9d. to 8s.; third, 7s. 6d. to 7s. 9d. Foreign ditto, 8s. Mutton, first quality, 7d.; second, 6½d.; third, 6½d. per lb.

MARK LANE.

MONDAY, July 10.—A moderate supply of English Wheat could only be disposed of at a reduction of 1s. to 2s. per qr.; to effect sales of Foreign wheat had to be submitted to. American Flour maintained late rates. Barley was in moderate request, at the currency of last Monday. Oats met with a fair demand from both dealers and consumers, and the currency of this day so might was fully supported. Beans and Peas quiet, at former rates. Arrivals into London from the 3rd to the 5th of July—English Wheat, 559 qrs.; Scotch ditto, 2,920 qrs.; Foreign ditto, 37,663 qrs.; English Barley, 268 qrs.; Foreign ditto, 2,388 qrs.; English Oats, 10 qrs.; Scotch ditto, 660 qrs.; Irish ditto, 4,803 qrs.; Foreign ditto, 18,626 qrs.; English Malt, 3,296 qrs.; Irish ditto, 87 qrs. Flour, 7,655 sacks and 153 barrels.

COUNTRY GRAIN.

SCARBOROUGH, July 8.—This day our market was well supplied with grain, most of which was cleared off at a small reduction from last week's prices. The weather has been extremely favourable for the growing crops for the last fortnight. Best White Wheat fetched 80s. to 80s.; other sorts of grain were not pushed off by sellers. The last few days having been very wet, has caused the farmers much anxiety about their hay. The Flour trade continues brisk, and good may find purchasers at 60s. per sack of 20 stones.

PROVISIONS.

LONDON.—A much better demand prevails for mild Irish Butter; Carlow realised 92s. to 94s., and Limerick 90s., but middling and low qualities are operated in with caution at 80s. to 86s. Imports were 5,750 firkins for the last week, and stock exceeds that of the past year. Foreign has been in active request, and rates are much higher for best sorts—fine Friesland realised 90s. to 100s.; surplus and seconds, 72s. to 80s.; fine Holland, 80s. to 82s.; inferior, 68s. to 74s.; fine Hampden and Zwolle, 86s. to 88s.; Bosh, 62s. to 66s.; Groningen, 70s. to 72s.; Embden and Lear, 76s. to 78s.; Holstein and Kiel, 94s. to 98s.; and French, 70s. to 74s. Imports were 10,369 casks for the past week: A free sale for English—fine Dorset selling at 100s. to 102s.; middling, 88s. to 94s.; and 10s. to 12s. per pound, being an advance. In Bacon operations continue on a large scale, and best sorts are still on the rise—sales of Irish small meat at 70s. to 76s.; heavy, 60s. to 74s.; Hambro', 65s. to 71s.; Dutch, 68s. to 64s.; American, 60s. to 56s. Arrivals were 2,400 hales for the past week. Middles have sold slowly—Irish at 58s. to 62s.; and American, 44s. to 52s. In Hams there are larger operations at an advance—Irish realised 68s. to 76s.; and English, 78s. to 80s. Only a moderate demand for Lard, and there are sellers of Irish bladdered at 65s. to 70s.; keg and firkin, 56s. to 63s.; and American, 53s. to 54s. Pickled Middles are wanted at 62s. The market for Provisions for ships' use remains in a firm position, and important purchases have been made. Primo Irish India Beef realised 7½ lbs. to 8½ per tierce; Mess, 120s. to 125s.; ord and low, 75s. to 100s. Primo India Pork, 8½ to 8½ 5s.; Mess, 92s. 6d. to 95s. per barrel, and Bacon Mess, 85s. to 90s. Cheese is less wanted, still rates rule firm—Embsen, grass 45s. to 62s.; hay, 38s. to 42s.; Gouda, 48s. to 54s.; new milk, 36s. to 40s.; Kauta, 19s. to 20s.; and American, 52s. to 60s. 6d. per ewt.

HOPS.

LONDON, July 13.—There is no improvement whatever to report in the accounts from the plantations; if possible, they are worse. The duty is called 45,000*l.* to 50,000*l.*, and prices continue to advance.—R. T. COLTIS, 241, Borough.

BOROUGH, July 10.—Hop factors report that the accounts received this morning from nearly the whole of the plantations, state that the plant has yielded to the blight, and is considered past recovery. Duty nominally at £50,000, but scarcely any one in favour. Small odds are taken against £30,000, prices keep advancing.

TURF TALK.

"The chosen sport of a great and a free people!"
OUR SADDLE KING.

THE delightful change in the weather, so favourable to the enjoyment of racing, has not extended its genial influence to turf-speculation. The state of the betting-market must still be quoted as considerably below par. The only races that appear to excite interest are the Goodwood Stakes, and that far-off event, next year's Derby. Greenius Esuriens maintains his high position, though without any very extensive outlay on his behalf. A new candidate for favour was introduced at Tattersall's on Monday, bearing the poetical title of "The Lord of the Isles"; a name, by the way, showing no great facility of invention, as we have had a Lord of the Isles running over the Carragh for the last two years. Our young Lord is by Touchstone, out of Fair Helen, by Pantaloon, and nominated by Mr. A. Johnston. Commencing at 40 to 1, the at a fast support he received quickly reduced the odds to 15 points, and at the close of the afternoon, 25 to 1 found really takers. Unknown as yet to public fame, it is but right to add that the opportunity has not been afforded him; and, unlike others who hold place in the betting, he has paid no forfeit. Ample scope will, however, be given him at Goodwood to display those pretensions on which he may claim to hold it next May over the Epsom Downs. The Lord of the Isles is engaged in the Stewards' Plate, the Lavant, Great North and South of England Biennial, and Molecomb Stakes. Very pretty pickings are thus open to him through the week, should he possess the prowess his title would indicate. The last race only would subject him to penalty, in the event of his previously carrying off the Lavant or Biennial. Reputations must be admitted, speaks highly of this colt, who is now the property of Mr. Morry, and consequently trained by W. Day, at Woodhouse. It is worthy of remark that many horses hitherto dark have received extensive support for the Derby, and it must be a desideratum on the part of their owners that the first public essay should come off with better effect than was the case with Dirk Hatterick. The friends of the Spigot Lodge stable, however, assert that the bold Dirk will see a better day. For the sake of his noble owner, whose straightforward conduct and amenity of manner, during his long connexion with the turf, have received the warm acknowledgment of every true friend of racing, it could be wished that that day may not be far distant; though it must be confessed that the hope is hardly to be realised in Sussex. Liverpool did not finally escape foul weather. The excellent spirit provided for Friday was considerably marred by the wet. Roseline's running proved that her long rest had nowise impaired her fleetness. The clever wife of the Shinnahilly, now named Cloud, in the Great Lancashire Produce Stakes, was a score in favour of the Irish blood; though the indifferent display made by Rosecom, who had achieved no inconsiderable success in the Emerald Isle, would tend to prove that the three-year-old form on the other side of St. George's Channel must be moderate indeed. Helen, another Irish-bred filly, accomplished a good turn for the holders, and no little for the credit of the curricula, by carrying off the Lovers' Victualers' Plate. The distance on which this mare can distinguish herself, it would seem, should not exceed a mile. The interest excited by the appearance of Dirk Hatterick and Paletot was followed by a feeling of disappointment; the effect on the ring by their performance may be gauged from the fact that 40 to 1 was afterwards betted against each for the Derby. Canezon's first foal and the son of the famous Blue Bonnet, met with but indifferent favour in the eyes of the cognoscenti. Aerobut did as he liked with his three opponents for the St. Leger, winning in the easiest of manners, Arthur Wellesley holding a length and a half behind him, and the others beaten off. It may be remembered that Arthur Wellesley was said to be disappointed in the Dee Stakes, where he was a length from the head and head, Scythian and Champagne. Previous to his race, Aerobut was backed for the Doncaster St. Leger at 12 to 1; but no price was afterwards named against him. This silence, however, may be broken next week, that, the fact is, the Selling or betting just now is all but a dead letter. Derby, to use a significant term, is very shaky; a few days may see him reinstated a better favourite than ever, or at once driven to a lower figure. King Tom, too, is something but firm in the market; yet his friends maintain that his condition is all they can desire. It is believed that his Majesty will take no part in the forthcoming contests at Goodwood. The result from the Currier this afternoon would show that the great three-year-old inveterate of the north, is not quite forgot. Derby and King Tom, received some slight support at 4 to 1; the odds against the former being still offered; and, Aerobut found backers at 20 to 1. Aerobut will not be the first horse that has succeeded in estimation as success has crowned his efforts. The meaning of this has yet to be explained. Is there some bug in the back-ground hitherto unmentioned, and unthought of whose coming may upset all previous calculation? A marked caution, too, appears to prevail for the moment with respect to the Goodwood Cup. For the Stakes, Heapy and Tros are week and neck in the betting, 2 to 1 having been taken conjointly against the pair at Stamford. Diana, who had previously gone back to 20 to 1, has rallied, and 12 to 1 now finds takers. Newton, Stamford, and Nottingham have held their meeting during the week, but, highly as they may be considered apart, their issue must have been dimmed by the approaching princely gathering in Sussex. Lough Bawn, who may always be considered dangerous with anything under seven stone and a half on his back, and the company not too good, won his last victory of the season by securing the Lord of the Manor's Cup at Newton. Perseverance is to be commended; and unnumbered second and third places should be rewarded with occasional No. 1. At Stamford the richest produce stakes were divided between the Duke of Bedford and the Marquis of Exeter; but, as those noble lords were the chief contributors, neither can boast of having reaped any very solid advantage by the result. Mr. Knowles having to do battle with Lord Ribblesdale's nominations, must have been the loser. For the 100 sovs. sweepstakes, Mr. Payne's Boer defeated Badbee by a neck, in defiance of the adverse opinion of the ring, who laid 7 to 1 on the Son of Ion. The Cock Pheasant could not fly away with the Burghley, and his chance, therefore, for the Goodwood Stakes, must be considered all but hopeless. The winner, El Dorado, and who bore off the Gold Cup easily on the following day, gave but little promise of racing superiority in her two-year-old form. She adds another feather to the well-planned coup of John Scott. The hot weather did not serve to improve the temper of Phaeton, who was inclined to play fantastic tricks, and, in short, to do anything but hear his owner's colours to the winning-post.

The electric wurs have just brought the intelligence that St. Andrew is the successful competitor for the Nottinghamshire Handicap. This horse, from his tidy two-year-old running, was always expected some day to accomplish a good thing; but, five failures last year, and his wretched exhibition in the Consolation Scramble at the York Spring, must have tired out the hopes of his backers. The Notts Handicap is no mean reward for such exemplary patience in waiting so long. This Sabat's victory has broken the spell that has during the season nuzzled the exertions of the Tugill stable, usually so clever in making free with the larger handicaps. Lord Alfred's win in the Robin Hood Stakes with 7 lb extra speaks loudly in favour of the stout blood of Chanticleer.

This is the thirteenth race the game youngster has taken part in—surely, he must be cousin-german to Ratuaplan. But, we have delayed too long in turning our glance towards Goodwood. When we consider the variety of races, the value of the prizes, and the number of horses engaged, this meeting may indeed be pronounced matchless. May its shadow never grow less! A long string of horses has already arrived from Whitehall; and other stables, large and small, will no doubt furnish their quota, that the contests may lose nothing of the interest and excitement elicited in the best of former years.

The 300 Sovs. Sweepstakes over the Queen's Plate course, a long gallop of three miles, five furlongs, and 97 yards, has proved the termination of the racing career of more than one good horse. There are nine subscribers, and the list includes the name of the renowned Australian, whose victory cannot be doubtful, though Cabot and Vandaecken may dispute, if not the honour of the prize, the credit of saving stake. Among the 35 nominations for the Gratwicke Stakes, there is no name of any great note. Prince Arthur will probably be the favourite.

Heapy and Tros are now firm in the market, with scarcely any difference of price. Ratuaplan has been mentioned; but, stout and game as he is, 80 to 1 is too much for a four-year-old to encounter such a field with. Both he and Muscoville might be expected to cut a better figure for the Cup. From the style in which Adine won the guineas at Ascot she ought to be considered to have the best of the top weights. Nancy has been backed in some quarters for some money, and could we believe her to be in anything like her original form, she would, with 70 to 1, possess the fairest of chances. Miss Tenyson, having modestly withdrawn herself from public gaze ever since last year's Oaks, has glided into the handicap at the very light impost of 50 lb. Such a feather-weight for a four-year-old, should prove either that she is very inferior—or very likely to be close to the winner. Neither Heapy nor Tros have cause to complain of the handicappers having visited them with too heavy a hand. Diana and Jacqueline also strike us as being well in. But we must refer those readers who are eager to discover the winners of the numerous races at Goodwood, to the letter of Toby Peeps, analysing the different items of the meeting, and which will appear in our Second Edition.

TATTERSALL'S.—MONDAY.

Thanks to Ammonia, there was a very pleasant revival for the fielders in the settlement of the accounts connected with the recent meeting at Ascot. Much of the depression which previously existed was manifestly removed. For a long time past loss had followed loss in almost uninterrupted succession, so anxiety were the favourites in most instances "spotted" against them. On coming events only a comparatively small amount of business was transacted. Tros, said to have been tried very satisfactorily, was in great force for the Goodwood Stakes—at 5 to 1 a considerable sum of money was invested. Heapy was firm at the odds quoted. Diana, under suspicion; at one time she receded to 10 to 1, but after a slight rally, 9 to 1 was taken to £50. The Crusader was remarkably quiet, considering the very active part he played in the betting at Liverpool.

St. Leger.—After 4 to 1 had been taken about King Tom to nearly £100, 10 to 1 was better in fifties; at the close, however, 100 to 100 was looked.

THE DERBY.—Throughout the afternoon a lively interest was created by the introduction of a new favourite, bearing the taking title of The Lord of the Isles. He is by Touchstone, out of Fair Helen, and is in training at William Day's. He is engaged in the Lavant and Molecomb Stakes next week at Goodwood. At the commencement, 30 to 1 was laid, but so warm was the support he received that at the close scarcely 25 to 1 was obtainable; 1,000 to 100 taken in one bet about Graculus; 1,000 to 50, Crater; 1,000 to 25, and 400 to 10, Moonbeam colt, and 1,000 to 15 Kumbuling Katie.

BETTING AT MANCHESTER.—TUESDAY.
Yesterday, the chief part of the settling being got through, a few investments were made upon the Goodwood Stakes. Nancy was backed at 20 to 1 in hundreds, but subsequently we heard 300 to 10 offered against her. Jonathan Martin, who has been backed for a tolerable amount at 100 to 6 guineas rather unhealthily in the market, having receded to 25 to 1. Jacqueline and Lough Bawn are the only horses that have been backed in our hearing for the Newton Gold Cup, and Typee for the Nottingham Handicap. To-day, upon the close approaching for the departure of the special train for Newton, viz., twelve o'clock, the rooms became deserted, at which time the odds stood as follows:—

THE GAME OF THE SCISSORS.

At the Fife of Nanterre this game is especially devoted to the dancers gay and fair, and is most amusing. We have tried it here in private society with excellent effect, using fruit suspended, as in the game of bob-cherry, instead of toys or more valuable prizes. The game consists in cutting with a pair of scissors one of the suspended prizes, viz.:—Bonnets, neck-ties, handkerchiefs, &c. &c. The difficulty consists in having the eyes bandaged. In France a drum is beaten during the experiment to prevent any hints being heard from nixious friends. Here a piano well supplies the place of the noisy harbinger of war.

THE GRATWICK STAKES of 100 sovs each subscription, h ft for colts 8 st 10 lb, and fillies, 8 st 5 lb; the produce of mares covered in 1850. INTERIOR OF A TURKISH COUNTRY RESIDENCE.

The following account of these generally sealed abodes has been communicated to us by a Spanish gentleman:—

My wife Leonora and I owed our introduction from the daughter of Ibrahim, to whom the house belonged, having heard us sing together L'Estriville—

"Mira no tardes,
(Ayole!)
Que sacle en un momento
Mudarse al ayre."

Upon entering, the draperies fringed with gold, the furniture, all indicated taste allied with opulence. In each corner of the saloon were boxes of flowering shrubs; on the consoles were large China vases filled with flowers, and a divan ranged round with cushions of crimson silk. Ibrahim and his daughters were seated on the divan, habited in the oriental fashion. Ibrahim wore a rich blue caftan and a muslin turban white as his ample beard. The two young ladies, one dark and the other fair, were charmingly costumed, and looked as bright as an Eastern summer's day. The eldest held a bouquet of damask roses in her hand, and the youngest a lute of antique form. Ibrahim rose, and with dignity addressed us thus: "Be welcome beneath my roof; I present to you my two daughters, Amine and Rachel." He informed us that he was a native of Centa, and consequently by birth and religion a Moslem, and had amassed a large fortune by commerce in Corlova, the ancient capital of the Moors, and the birthplace of the two Senecas and Lucan. He invited us to dine with him, and said—"We do not drink wine, our law forbids it; but you must not be bound by our customs. I have ordered to be placed before you a bottle of Spain's best growth." Better I never tasted.

SPORTING MISCELLANEOUS.

HATCHING GROUSE.—On Saturday last, we were shown in the aviary of Mr. Boustead, Dulce-street, the novel sight of a brood of young grouse. The birds, four in number, appeared strong and healthy, and were perfectly tame. In another apartment, a female was sitting on about a dozen of eggs. The nest is made of blocks of peat moss, and the bird did not appear to be alarmed at the approach of strangers. The old birds were also quite tame, and picked up the crumbs thrown them by the visitors. In referring to the nestling of grouse the Gleanings correspondent of the Banffshire Journal says "that the grouse this season in that quarter were nestling nearer the abode of man than they ever were known to do before." Another correspondent adds, that "in that far-famed strath, Glonilvat, a pair of grouse nested in a turp field on the farm of Scanlan, and were left unmolested until the female hatched, and herself and young were able to take to the hills—a case, we may say, unprecedented in the history of the grouse."—Glasgow Herald.

ANGLO-SAXON ENERGY.—Not long since, at a dinner table at Mr. Milton, a wealthy but somewhat blasé sportsman was complaining of the contemptible character of all field sports in England, as contrasted with those in countries where game of every kind was to be found worthy of the prowess of the assailant. "True enough," said a neighbour at his elbow "True enough: there is no place in the world now left for sport but the Himalayas!" "Say you so?" replied the other. "The Himalayas! are they far off? I think I'll try them." Ringing the bell, he desired his servant to pack up forthwith two double guns, a few rifles, an ample supply of lead and powder, and at five o'clock on the following afternoon he and his valet were steaming down the Channel on their way to the aforesaid Himalayas!—New Quarterly Review for July.

CRUELTY TO HORSES.—A correspondent of an evening paper makes the following suggestion for the prevention of the many accidents to horses which occur in the streets of London:—"I am thoroughly convinced that more than one half passing the place alluded to (a strong incline) are included in that category. And what is the cause? Why, simply that they are (at least those of heavy harness) not properly shod! Great numbers (independent of being overladen) scarcely can move, and every day many fall and dangerously rise, from the fact of their being shod without what is locally called 'tips.' In making shoes for cart and draught horses in Liverpool, and all other northern places, at the toe or front part of the shoe, is formed in making it a kind of wedge, about an inch and a quarter in length, and half an inch in depth. This enables the animal to get a good foothold on any sort of pavement, and however he may be laden will struggle gamely before he will give in; but here, in London, the poor creature slips and sprawls like a fish out of water, and, to add to its misery, very often is severely flagellated by its unmerciful driver! Why, then, cannot London adopt at once the country system, and do away with the folly of flat shoeness?"

BIG BEAR CAUGHT.—The New Hampshire Patriot says that, in Oxford, a very large bear was shot lately by a pair of hunters, composed of C. Savage, S. W. Savage, John Chase, H. Stevens, and Messrs. Davis. He measured 8 feet in length, 4 feet in girth, 20 inches round the leg, and two feet round his thigh, and weighed 350 pounds. Such "critters" are rare plenty in those parts.

A PERVERSE ANIMAL SUBDUED.—An itinerant was at a public-house, where he exhibited his horse, and a nobleman came to exhibit feats of horsemanship, and the people had collected from far and near to behold the exhibition. When the man had done with his own horses, he turned and said, "Now, my lord, I am willing to ride any horse of yours in the same manner." Having one remarkably stubborn, the nobleman told a groom to bring her out. The stranger then deliberately mounted, and urged her to move, but not one of them would stir. After a pause, he quietly dismounted, gave her one severe stroke with his whip, and again resumed his saddle. The mare remained immovable, but the man p served his temper, and got down quietly a second time, repeating the blow, but with no better success. After the third stroke, however, she was completely subdued, and moved forward with perfect obedience. It now became evident that the design of the horseman was to give the animal time to associate the idea of her disobedience with the stroke that followed. When this was established, she was willing to move. On the contrary, if a shower of blows had been dealt out, as thousands of horsemen would have done, the mare would have had no time to reflect, and both she and her rider been roused into fury. With good temper great savings might be made in the article of whips.

NEW PLAN OF BREAKING-IN HORSES.—A new system of breaking-in horses, by means of a very few lessons, and so as to preserve all their precious qualities, has come into use; and what is singular is, that the author of it is a lady, named Isabelle. Having a great liking for horses, Mme. Isabelle some years ago began studying the different systems employed in breaking-in horses, and came to the conclusion that they were all more or less defective. She then sought for a plan of her own, which should render the horse more tractable by developing its intelligence; and she succeeded in discovering one so perfect, that the most restive horse is reduced to obedience in a very short time, and without the slightest ill-treatment. Her plan, as is almost always the case with things really useful, is very simple. She begins by making the horse carry his head high, and perpendicularly, whereby she prevents the weakness caused by the constant binding of the neck, gives free play to the muscles in the neck, and allows full action to be exercised over the mouth. Then she places on the horse a surcingle, surmounted by an iron rod about 15 inches long, which is bent about four inches forward at the summit. On each side of the rod are placed four rings, destined to receive the reins according to the height that may be desired. The horse soon gets accustomed to this check, and it exercises a great moral effect on him. He places his head in such a manner as not to suffer from the bit in the mouth, and thereby soon gets accustomed to being held in hand by his rider or driver. The surcingle also promptly accustoms him to adopt the best movements, and to advance when desired without offering any resistance. The breaker-in remains at the left of the horse, and is armed with a whip with a spur in it. After forming her system, Mme. Isabelle went into Germany, and practised it with marked success on horses belonging to Prince de Lichtenstein at Vienna. From Vienna she went to Russia, and there stopped two years. In the course of that time she rendered completely docile all the most restive horses of the model cavalry regiment at St. Petersburg, as well as those of the Emperor Nicholas. Recently she returned to France, and having explained her plan and stated its results to the Minister of War, she was, by the special direction of the Emperor, who was consulted, authorised to practise it on a number of young horses of the regiment of Ouldes, and with an equal number of recruits who had recently joined the regiment. The lessons were given under her direction at the riding school of the Ecole Impériale d'Application d'Etat Major. After the fifteenth lesson the horses manœuvred with the tranquillity and precision of old troop horses. A few days ago, Colonel Fleury, who commands the regiment, manœuvred the horses and recruits, and every one of the usual cavalry movements was admirably executed.

ARTIFICIAL HATCHING.—A very ingenious improvement has been made in artificial hatching by Mr. Carlo Manisi, son of the well known pen and ink artist, by the use of a small naphtha lamp without wick, and burning with an equal flame continuously for weeks together. Seventy eggs are hatched at the top of the apparatus, and the young are reared by the assistance of an artificial mother at the bottom. The first cost of the whole affair being but trivial, the improvement admits of the application of gas. It is, as we have said, ingenious and appears to be useful.

The gentleman of Lord Lonsdale's hunt, have kindly subscribed 50*l.* in aid of the funds of the Bucks' Infirmary.

The subscribers and friends to the South Oxfordshire hounds, dined together at Thame, under the presidency of Lieut. Col. Egan, on Friday.

NOVEL MODE OF DESTROYING SEALS.—MR. Campbell, salmon-fisher, Blackhill, Sloughaven, has adopted a novel but successful mode of destroying these destructive animals. Some time ago, observing a seal swimming about the nets, he determined to try an experiment on him, and accordingly got 10 drachms of strychnine mixed up with hog's lard. This mixture he inserted in the side of a salmon, which he fastened to the stake nets, and anxiously watched the result. Next day he observed that the salmon had disappeared, neither was the seal in its accustomed place. No intelligence could be obtained of the missing seal till about ten days after, when some fishermen came upon a dead one cast ashore near Dunnotar Castle. On examination, it proved to be the animal so anxiously looked for, and measured about six feet in length. This mode of destroying these animals, which are so destructive to the salmon fishings on our coast, might be adopted by others with the like success.

Mr. Treen, of Beckhampton, has recently shown the keen discernments for which he is remarkable, by the selection of a fresh training ground, which is situate on Roundway Down, and distant from his stables about two miles, but accessible over the turf the entire way; its extent is nearly three miles in a circle, for the most part a dead level, but varied here and there by a gentle rise. The turf is good and sound throughout the distance, and as a training ground, it must, for the future, give Mr. Treen a great advantage over some establishments whose facilities are not so good as his own, and will place him on equal terms in this respect with any in the kingdom.

LAMBETH REGATTA.

The annual contest amongst the watermen belonging to Lambeth took place on Monday, and was as usual extremely attractive. The prizes were liberal, and had been presented by the ladies and gentlemen of St. Mary's, and other residents of the borough.

It was an oars' wager in three heats, the conditions qualifying the first two boats of the first heat, and first two of the second heat, to contend in the grand heat.

First Heat.

William Perry and Henry Shelton ... (Dark blue) 1
E. Perry and C. Maynard ... (Yellow) 2

Four other boats started. The distance was from Westminster Bridge up to a boat off Burnett's Distillery, down the Surrey shore, round a boat moored off Hungerford Bridge, and back to Lambeth Palace. All the parties engaged got to work very smartly, and formed a line across the river, but were soon put a little out by the steamers passing to and fro, who, however, eased, to prevent doing any damage. The winners shortly drew in front, followed by the second pair, who left their nearest antagonists three or four lengths astern.

Second Heat.

William Shelton and Richard Wilson ... (Pink) 1
John Wyld and Joshua Arthur ... (Green) 2

Two other boats started. The distance was the same as before, and the race closer; although their speed was less, they were out and out for some distance, and when the lead was taken as above, the men had their work to do to maintain it.

Grand Heat.

William Perry and Henry Shelton ... (Dark blue) 1
E. Perry and C. Maynard ... (Yellow) 2

Two others started. The race commenced at Vauxhall Bridge, the course being reversed. After a few strokes the winners took the lead; and, although waited upon closely for a short distance, never forfeited it.

THE RICHMOND AMATEUR REGATTA, will take place early in August, and particulars will be shortly advertised in "THE FIELD."

ROWING AT BERMUDA.—On Monday, the 5th instant, the garbison gig-boat, belonging to Ireland Island, with five oarsmen from the 56th Regiment, made the circuit of Bermuda, 40 miles, in nine hours and five minutes.

ANGLING

SALMON FISHERIES.—Though the time has all but come when in former years salmon had almost entirely quitted our pools in favour of the grilse—when some twenty grilse were usually taken for one salmon, the sea and river nets this year continue to take even more salmon than grilse. The large preponderance of salmon is the most striking feature of this part of the season, and next to that are the splendid shape and heavy weight of the fish taken. A great many salmon have been captured in the Ness, and in the Frith, weighing from 20lbs. to 28lbs. A very handsome fish was taken on Tuesday by Randolph Marriott, in the Two Stones pool. It weighed "a lucky 20lbs." Mr. Marriott, we believe, killed a grilse on the 4th July, which, oddly enough, was the first grilse killed with the rod for many years in the first week of July; it was the first killed this season, and the first fish ever killed by Mr. Marriott. La fortune favoris les mazzettes. Mr. Lowe, the indefatigable herald of good sport and enthusiastic angling in the Ness, has been fishing all this week, but has only landed his basket with some scores of our best sea and river trout. We believe he has not yet taken either a grilse or a salmon.—Inverness Courier.

ARCHERY

THE LEAMINGTON AND MIDLAND COUNTIES ANNUAL GRAND ARCHERY MEETING took place at Leamington on Wednesday and Thursday last, in the upper part of the Jephon Gardens, which appeared to possess additional charms from the rank, beauty, and fashion in attendance. The morning of Wednesday was cheerless, but towards mid-day the sun shone brilliantly. The Jephon Garden band was stationed in the Temple of Apollo, and played throughout the day. This is the first time the annual meeting of this society has been held in these real attractive gardens, and, judging from the numerous competitors and visitors, it is not probable it will be the last. The ladies who entered the lists were very charming, but the effect was heightened by their picturesque costume. Among them we noticed Mrs. Hornblow, in a white "wide-a-wake," with a plume of green feathers. This lady, as did several others, wore such a medal, being a record of a former victory. Mrs. Hornblow was (to use a sporting phraseology) handicapped; she having won the bead prize at the Grand National Archery Meeting at Leamington last year, and the second prize at Shrewsbury this year. She appeared to be the star of goodly fair dames, who were each doing their best to win. Among the supporters of the meeting and those who were present, we noticed the Rev. H. Hildulph, Miss Ada Hildulph, Miss E. J. Cole, Miss B. Perrot, J. B. Brindley, Esq., Lieut.-Col. Chetwood, N. Gammett, Esq., Rev. H. Harding, Miss Harding, N. J. Atty, Esq., Rev. J. Howo, Rev. W. S. Brown, Esq., Rev. G. M. Nelson, Rev. H. Bramfield, Miss Ainsworth, Rev. W. Robinson, Rev. R. Corbett, Mr. Lyon Campbell, M. H. C. Chuddeock.

The distances and the number of arrows were as follows:—Six dozen each at 100 yards; four dozen arrows at 80 yards; and two dozen arrows at 60 yards, for the gentlemen. The ladies shooting the same quantity of arrows, and being nearer to the target by twenty yards in each case. The six best marksmen on Wednesday were Mr. R. Garnett, Col. Clowes, Mr. H. Harding, Mr. A. L. Campbell, Mr. H. Wilkinson, and Mr. N. Merridew. The last-named gentleman, who is the secretary to the society, obtained the greatest number of golds.

HAYMARKET.—A variety and sparkle were imparted to the entertainments at this house on Wednesday evening, by the introduction of a corps of Spanish dancers. The Perpsichorean troupe consists of some two dozen persons, male and female, the principal of whom is a bright-eyed, roguish-looking Espagnolito, Senora Perea Nena. Agile as a fawn, and light in her steps as a fairy, Nena executes a series of pas of the most intricate and mazy character, with an ease and finish, both of which are marvellous. Her appearance is sufficient to captivate the spectator at once. She is unquestionably a Spanish beauty—young and elegantly shaped, with a countenance replete with expression. There is a coquettish and graceful abandon about her dancing which, while it is most fascinating, presents no attribute which could be objectionable even to the most fastidious taste. The first dance she achieved was received with little less than cheering, and a hearty encore showed that the "Ladies of Spain" had gained another triumph, and had established themselves among the favourites which it pleases worthy John Bull to patronise. The Spanish dancers, it appears, have created a furor at the Gymnase in Paris, and were there honoured with the patronage of the Emperor Napoleon. If we may take Wednesday evening as a fair criterion, they promise to be as great favourites here; and we trust they may be, for the sake of the energetic little manager who so merily holds his reign at "the little theatre in the Haymarket." The following, among others, were the dances given on the occasion:—The Chancera, by Senorita Guillo and the corps de ballet; Pavraada, by the corps de ballet; Pas Mimique, Senora Nena and Senor Ruiz; A Pas de Deux, Seguedilla, Senora Perea Nena; Araudito, Senora Nena and Senor Ruiz, and the corps de ballet; Tirana, Senora Perea Nena; Jacara, Senora Perea Nena, and the corps de ballet. The ballet was divided into two parts; but in the second only one dance was given, when the curtain descended, and the audience cleared outwards. The theatre was very fully attended.

STRAND THEATRE.—A burlesque of "Faust and Marguerite," chiefly remarkable for the showy yet tasteful way it is put upon the stage, and for the able efforts of the actors, was presented at this theatre on Monday night. As a burlesque it is the most deadly lively affair we ever remember to have listened to; the dialogue throughout is rapid, droll, and meaningless, and the dismal attempts at jokes, which occasionally are made, render the thing more mournful. So much for the author, and with him we end our censure; for the management is fully deserving of praise for the spirit with which it has entered into the cause. The scenic effects are most striking, and in some instances quite novel, as a proof of which we may name the illuminated gardens, and a street scene, both of which were arranged with artistic taste, and conveyed an idea of space we thought it almost impossible to attain at such a miniature theatre. Places aux dames! Miss Harriet Gordon is the Marguerite, and a charming, animated Marguerite she presents; her style of singing is wonderfully improved, as also appear to have done the volume and quality of her voice. Miss C. Hudson assumed, for the nonce, a picturesque male attire, and appeared as Faust. The vocal and histrionic efforts of these young ladies, went far to secure the burlesque in favourable reception. Mr. Halford limped about the stage as Mephistopheles, to which he imparted a saturnian expression and depth, worthy of a better drawn character. The theatre was well attended.

ASLEY'S.—A successful career is attending the spectacle of the "Cossacks; or, Vive la France," which, with the new burlesque, "A Russian against Turkey," is played every night to large and approving audiences. The scenes in the arena are as attractive as ever, and elicit rapturous approbation from those who appreciate talent such as is here exhibited.

UNITED STATES.—A very destructive fire has occurred at Philadelphia, which destroyed the National Theatre, the guard-houses, and a number of other handsome buildings, with their contents. An actor, named Shephard, lost his life in returning to the burning theatre in search of his watch.

THEATRICALS IN TEMPLE.—On the 28th ult., Lord George Pimble, the commander of the Hellaphium, gave a theatrical representation on board his ship, under the patronage of his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge. For him was reserved the seat of honour, an arm-chair, in the front row, which included all the great folks within hail of Varna. The ship was rigged into a theatre in the most ingenious way. The scenery was good, and well managed—the ladies' parts being taken by midshipmen and boys of the ship. Two of the pieces were The Lottery Ticket and Diamond and Diamond, both of which (the latter especially) were most ably performed. As interludes, there were Ethiopian serenaders, &c., and pieces performed by the splendid band of the ship. The audience, which consisted of some 200 officers, were of course greatly delighted with the entertainment, more particularly as it was concluded by a most excellent substantial supper, in the usual profuse style of hospitality for which the English army are so much his lordship's debtors.

Police Intelligence.

MADEBOROUGH STREET.

THE NEW BETTING ACT.—Fredrick Harding, the alleged keeper of a betting-office and a coffee-shop, 22, Panton-street, Haymarket, was summoned by the police, under the New Betting Act, for that he, being the proprietor of a room No. 22, Panton-street, kept and used for the purpose of betting with persons, did receive half-a-sovereign from Daniel Rayner, in consideration of paying the sum of £3 on an event relating to a horse-race. Mr. Preston attended for the defence. Mr. Rayner said he lived in Compton-street. He went to the defendant's betting-office in Panton-street, and tendered half-a-sovereign as a bet upon a horse called the Knight of St. George, to run at the Worcestershire races. The defendant took the money, and told him, if his horse won, that the next day he would be paid £3. The horse did win; he went for his money, and was met with the very old "dodge," that another man had claimed the money, and had received it. He offered to forego the money if the defendant would produce the receipt of the person in whom he alleged he had paid it. He was told to call the following Monday, and then he should have his money. He did call, and saw the defendant's brother, who asserted that the money had been paid to another person, and who refused to pay his claim. Mr. Preston asked the witness what he was. Witness: A camelion. Mr. Preston: Are you not in the habit of writing for a newspaper? Witness: I have written something. Mr. Preston: Under what name? Mr. Hardwick did not think the solicitor had a right to put that question. He might as well ask a man if he had the smallpox. Witness was willing to state his literary name; it was "Joe Muggins's Bag." (Laughter.) The defendant asserted that the witness was mistaken with respect to the person to whom he paid his money. The person to whom the defendant paid the half-sovereign was his brother. Rayner: Don't talk nonsense; I have known you at least ten years. Defendant: My brother is often taken for me; we are as like as two peas. Rayner: I knew you when you kept a house in Oxendon-street. Defendant: Bet you 20 to 1 of that. (Loud laughter.) Mr. Preston having cross-examined the witness in order to shake his testimony, as far as the identity of the defendant was concerned, and having failed to do so, appeared to the Court for an adjournment, in order to procure the attendance of the defendant's brother. Mr. Hardwick pointed out the positive declaration of the witness as to the defendant's identity, and the corroborative evidence of the constable, who was called in by the witness to take the defendant into custody for obtaining money by false pretences. The solicitor admitted that he could not struggle successfully against that part of the evidence. Mr. Rayner said, his motive for coming forward was, that he felt he had been swindled, and he wished to protect others against being served in the same way. Inspector Parks said, the new act had been of use not first in suppressing betting-offices; but recently these offices had made their appearance in great force, and were so artfully conducted as to baffle detection. Mr. Hardwick was satisfied with the evidence of identity. If the statement were true that the bet had been paid to another person, that would be no mitigation of the offence; it was rather an aggravation of the circumstance to put forward the pretence of having paid the money to another, in order to defraud the right person of his due. This, however, was a case, and the first of its kind, under the New Betting Act—a most useful and salutary act passed for the repression of gambling. It was notorious that betting-offices were the means of leading persons into gambling who could ill afford to lose anything, and who, if they did lose, seldom failed to plunge their families into ruin. It was the purpose of the Legislature to remedy this mischief, and the present salutary act was passed in the expectation that it would accomplish that desirable object. The penalty imposed by the act was 100l. or six months' hard labour without a penalty. The present case being proved, he should inflict a fine of 50l., or three months' hard labour. The full penalty would always be inflicted on a recurrence of the offence. The defendant gave notice of appeal.

Trueman (Edinburgh) entirely misunderstands the matter. It was not stated, the letter of Toby Preps arrived too late for insertion, but that it was not in time for our first edition. "THE FIELD" goes to press a long time before most of the contemporaries, and it may be as well day in advance of most of its contemporaries. The first Edition of the paper, The first is published on an early hour of the afternoon of Friday; the second on the following day; and the third, containing all the latest news, at midnight on Saturday. Returns of races, with other sporting matter of interest, that come to hand after our publication on Friday are, of course, inserted in the early edition of the following week, that no link of the chain may be wanting. As our friend Toby named the winners of the July, Cliffield, and Worcester Stakes, the latter was given in the ensuing first edition as a proof of the general accuracy of his vision. We have no "propheet of the past" Trueman can be exact by applying to our publisher for a copy of "The Field," Sunday, July 2, in which the communication originally appeared. W. Young (Sheffield).—Much of the foregoing will apply to his remembrance. We cannot pledge ourselves that "Toby Peep's" shall appear in the first edition.

Swiftsure.—Blue Bonnet, in 1812, was the last mare that won the St Leger.

Murtingale.—In our opinion, Halopian, O. M. (Manchester).—The Kuron started for the St. Leger at 12 to 1.

* * From the great pressure on our space, five columns of Cricket now in type must stand over till our later editions, together with other interesting records of sporting in all branches. We shall prevent the recurrence of this delay so far as at least as Cricket is concerned. ED.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

"A portion of the English contingent has probably taken the road to Silistria." In this sentence, summed up all that, up to the time of our writing, can be authoritatively affirmed of the movement of our army in Turkey, and this does not really amount to much. It is somewhat more satisfactory to be told that a portion of the Black Sea force has been actively employed, and all the Russian batteries, at the Sulina, mouth of the Danube, have been destroyed, and the command taken. Some more of the ridiculous indulgence which marked the Odessa affair (and which has also marked Dundas as a pupil of the Aberdeen school) has been manifested at this last attack, and the quarantine and other buildings have been spared—the abstinence from using fire and powder to destroy the fortresses, for fear of injuring the rest of the place, having entailed cruelly hard work upon our gallant fellows, who had laboriously to tear down the works, which a few barrels of gunpowder would have served flying over the marshes. But such is the Aberdeen policy—no matter how you disgust the Englishmen, provided you do not injure the Russian.

Prince Gortschakoff is concentrating his force as much as possible, and evidently preparing to sustain an onslaught from the Allies. He is supposed to have about 70,000 men. The Turks appear to have crossed the Danube, and halted, and Omer Pasha had sought a personal interview with the English and French commanders in order, of course, to arrange the immediate conduct of the campaign. It will be through no fault of his if a battle does not take place. The Russians will probably try to hold Bucharest, and had Austria behaved with more energy, this would have been impossible. In regard to the attitude of Austria, the gravest doubts are still entertained. It is urged, and not without reason, that while affecting hostile preparations, she is endeavouring to waste the time of the allies, so that the summer may pass away without any decisive steps being taken, and then the chapter of accidents and the tricks of diplomacy may enable her to avoid crossing swords with her old friend, Russia. One is loath to believe such futility, not to talk of treachery, for as surely as Europe once makes up its mind that Austria is really acting in the interest of Russia, the House of Hapsburg is in a peril more tremendous even than that out of which Kossuth's unwise faith in Imperial honour allowed it to escape so recently. The emancipation of Hungary and northern Italy, and the humiliation and probable dismemberment of Austria proper may be looked for no distant date from that at which the Russian policy of the Court of Vienna shall be fully comprehended. We are inclined to believe that with all her despotic instincts, Austria is well aware that she cannot afford to come into collision with the free nations of Europe, and that half-hearted as the support she must give will be it will be given to the allies. We have now only to hope that real and pretended negotiations may be put to a stop by a decisive blow inflicted by the united armies, the savage proclamation of Russia against the Wallachian boyards, whom Count Nesselrode desires may be treated with as much severity as possible, is rather a good symptom—it speaks of Imperial wrath, and promises Wallachian revolt. The imbecile King of Prussia is in statu quo, and his country is rapidly losing, through his cowardly policy, which abstains from speaking out, the rank of one of the Great Powers, whose opinions it is necessary to collect on a question of European interest. Prussia will speedily be ranked with those insignificant German States, whose chief mission, so far as we can see, is to furnish scenes and characters for French vaudeville writers.

The checks and disasters undergone by Russia have reduced the unfortunate Kinglet, Otho, to despair. His mighty patron being thrust back, there is small hope for the ambitious little "Emperor of Byzantium." The Greek insurrection is all but suppressed, and we hear of nothing more formidable than intrigues and complaints.

The English ships are carrying away the French soldiers from France to the Baltic. The embarkation, conducted under the eye of the Emperor, was effected with great order and speed, and the fraternisation between our sailors and their military passengers seems to have been very cordial. Soldiers of different nations may easily learn to like one another, but that "Jack" should be taught that "Mounseer" may be a very fine fellow, and worthy of the confidence of the "foksele," is really a phenomenon of this Annus Mirabilis. Let us hope that the gallant but irascible Baragunay d'Hilliers will manage to keep his temper in his communications with the English commander in the Baltic, and then all will go well.

Parliament sits a great many hours, and makes a great many speeches, but not much is done, nor do we yet hear when an end is to be put to the session. The new vote of £17,000 for the office of the new Secretary of State for war, was granted without opposition on Monday. It was understood that the Conservatives meant to have raised some questions on the management of the war, but early in the day Lord John Russell assembled about 180 of his Parliamentary supporters at a private meeting, and intimated to them that Government must be more efficiently sustained than hitherto, as the spectacle of a ministry being perpetually defeated was not satisfactory or constitutional. So the liberals came down in force, cheered Lord John and Mr. Sidney Herbert at every other sentence, and seemed, for the time, to have daunted the enemy. But one night next week there will probably be some smart work, Lord John announcing that he intends to ask for a vote of credit for the expenses of the war. It may be convenient to state, for the information of those who may be confused by the similarity of official bills, that the new Secretary for War, the Duke of Newcastle, does not displace Mr. Sidney Herbert, who is Secretary at War, and the new arrangement is that the military portion of the department shall still be under the controul of the Commander-in-chief and the Master-General of the Ordnance, and while questions of patronage and pay shall also be in their hands, the new Secretary of State for War is to have the controul of the civil and political matters, while details remain as at present, under the supervision of the Secretary-at-War. The new functionary will have the controul of the commissariat department. The embodied militia will be subject to the military authorities, and the disembodied militia under the Home Secretary, Viscount Palmerston.

The Government have been defeated but once this week, and that upon a matter of no particular consequence, and in which they are in the right. An Irish member, who was interested in a new printing invention, has succeeded in getting a committee of inquiry into the question, whether the printing of public papers may not be more economically performed. The Chancellor of the Exchequer, pointed out with force that it really was not the business of Parliament to accord the motion really aimed at, namely, a decision between two mechanical systems, but that it ought to leave such matters to the judgment of trade, which is the legitimate tribunal of inventions, and then to select, in the open market, that which is found to work best. But Ministerial members had gone to dinner or else where, and the motion was carried. A great disturbance at a meeting held to discourage metropolitan tractarianism has marked the week. The odium theologicum rode high; a prayer was followed by a mocking chant of "Amen," upon which the chancers were kicked out, after a fight; the leading Protestant orator stated that there was but one sacrament, to the surprise of his audience, who, however, called to him to "Go it," and other unseemliness characterized a meeting avowedly assembled to discuss the proper mode of celebrating divine worship. A long inquest upon a child who died in one of our hospitals has at length been closed after several disgraceful scenes, abusive language by counsel, excitement among all parties interested, and great wrath on the part of the jury. The verdict is, that the child died in consequence of an operation unskillfully performed by Mr. Cooke, and Mr. Wakley the younger. The inquiry would not, it is said, have been set on foot (though it was assuredly demanded), but for the desire of a gentleman who had been extruded from his situation, to punish those who had acted harshly towards him. The public are interested, inasmuch as it is obvious that though want of skill, or of tenderness, is a very exceptional case as regards a professional man, the subordinates in the hospitals are frequently very ignorant and brutal people.

Of foreign news, beyond that to which we have referred, there is none of much interest. The Spanish insurrection is reported to be reviving, and as likely to result very unfavourably for the reigning family. Louis Philippe's Spanish policy may have new illustrations ere long.

Parliamentary.

MONDAY.—Lords.—The Merchant Shipping Bill passed through committee, after a prolonged discussion.

The third reading of the Public Revenue and Consolidated Fund Charges Bill was moved by Earl Granville.

Lord Montagu moved as an amendment that the bill should be referred to a select committee, as many risks and inconveniences might arise from such a measure.

Lord Brougham supported the amendment.

The Duke of Argyll having defended the bill, and the Earl of Derby and Lord Campbell thinking that the bill required further revision, Earl Granville consented to refer it to a select committee, on the understanding that it should be proceeded with during the present session.

The amendment was then agreed to, and their lordships adjourned at half past 8 o'clock.

Commons.—Lord J. Russell announced that in the course of next week he should propose a vote of credit for the prospective war expenditure. The amount for which credit would be asked he could not precisely state, but it should be specified in an estimate in a few days.

On the motion for going into committee of supply,

Mr. Maguire called attention to the necessity of providing a floating hospital for Cork harbour, for the use of the numerous emigrant vessels which touched at or departed from that port.

Sir J. Young submitted that the hospital accommodation should be furnished from local funds.

Some dissatisfaction at this reply having been expressed by several Irish members,

Sir G. Grey promised that the subject should be carefully considered by the government.

In answer to a further appeal, Lord J. Russell declined giving any assurance on the subject; and Mr. Maguire said he should propose a definite resolution on the subject upon some early opportunity.

The House having resolved itself into committee of supply,

Lord J. Russell described the changes in the administrative departments of the government, consequent upon the recent division of the duties formerly belonging to the Secretary for War and the Colonies.

During former wars, he remarked, the functions discharged by that Secretary related principally to the conduct of military affairs. Now colonial questions furnished an amount of occupation sufficient to monopolise the undivided attention of the Secretary of State; and it became obvious that some redistribution of the duties was absolutely necessary.

After enumerating the principle upon which this change was to be based, the noble Lord explained that military questions should remain under the control of the professional chiefs,—the Commander-in-Chief and Master-General of Ordnance, who would also decide all questions relating to promotions, patronage, and pay.

The civil and political functions would be allotted to the new Secretary of State for War; while matters of detail would continue, as at present, under the supervision of the Secretary at War. The Commissariat, he added, would fall to the Secretary of State for War; the embodied militia would be controlled by the military chiefs; the disembodied militia by the Home Secretary.

Lord J. Russell concluded by moving that a sum of £17,300 should be voted to defray the additional expenses which the change would necessitate up to March 31, 1854.

Sir J. Pakington felt extreme disappointment at this outline of the ministerial intentions. The single practical step announced consisted of a transference of the commissariat from the Treasury to the Secretary for War. The Government, he observed, had paid no attention to former suggestions on the point, but had created a new Secretary of State, without doubling the duties of the department; he inquired what distinction was to be drawn between the functions of the Secretary-at-War and the new Secretary of War.

The Secretary-at-War defended the government scheme, and declared that whether the contemplated changes enhanced or diminished its importance, he should allow no personal feelings to prevent his co-operating in its accomplishment.

Colonel Dunno and Mr. G. Butt objected to the ministerial schemes. The vote was agreed to.

The House then went into committee on the Bribery Bill. After considerable discussion, and several divisions upon amendments, Clause 33 having been reached, the Chairman, at half-past 12, on the motion of Mr. Brotherton, was ordered to report progress. Several other bills having been advanced a stage, the House adjourned at a quarter past 2 o'clock.

TUESDAY.—Lords.—The Ecclesiastical Courts Bill was read a third time and passed.

The Court of Chancery Bill, the Merchant Shipping Acts (Repeal Bill) and the Turnpike Trusts Arrangements Bill were read a second time.

Earl Granville moved the second reading of the Towns Improvement (Ireland) Bill. The measure, he said, was designed to obviate the necessity for applying for a number of local bills.

The motion was opposed by Lord Donoughmore, but after a lengthened discussion his lordship withdrew his opposition, and the bill was read a second time, and the House adjourned at half-past seven o'clock.

Commons.—At the early sitting, several bills were considered in committee and advanced a stage.

In the evening,

Mr. G. Dundas moved for copies of documents, and evidence regarding the question between Dr. Held and the Board of Works relative to the ventilation, &c., of the new Houses of Parliament, drawing the conclusion that Dr. Held had received less than justice from the Board of Works.

Sir W. Molesworth opposed the motion, on the ground that the claims of Dr. Held had been already settled by arbitration. The papers asked for would cost £1,000, and be altogether useless after all.

The motion was negatived without a division.

On the motion of Mr. Bowyer for a committee to inquire into the claims of the representatives of the late W. Sturgeon, upon the Compensation Fund, allotted at the peace of 1815 by the French government,

Mr. Wilson contended that Mr. Sturgeon's property had been destroyed by a mob. A sum of £5,000 was nevertheless awarded to him as a sort of compassionate allowance, therefore he had already received more than he was legally justified in claiming.

Mr. Bowyer contended he had made out a sufficient case.

On a division, there appeared—for the motion, 39—against it, 40—1.

Admiral Walcott renewed his motion for a select committee to inquire into the claims of Captain Dickenson, respecting the bullock and property rescued by his exertions from the wreck of the Thetis. From the salvage then obtained the Admiralty had deducted £13,000, which they claimed for the use of stores and the services of the officers and crew of H.M.S. Lightning, who had aided in the diving operations. This deduction he urged was unjust, and the case demanded investigation.

Sir G. Tyler seconded the motion.

Sir J. Graham remarked that the claim now urged was 23 years old, and was decided, as long since as 1831, by the High Court of Admiralty. That decision, he argued, was intrinsically just.

Sir G. Tyler and Captain Pecheil supported the motion.

Admiral Berkeley and Mr. Wilkinson raised it.

Upon a division this motion was negatived by a majority of one. The numbers being—Ayes, 40; Noes, 41.

Mr. Williams moved for returns of the number of floggings and discharges that had occurred on board her Majesty's ship Star, with the particulars of each alleged offence, and the nature of the punishment inflicted.

Sir J. Graham, after repudiating a charge of fondness for corporal punishment on the part of the Admiralty Board, denied the accuracy of the statements on which the motion was founded. The conduct of Commander Warren and his crew had been thoroughly scrutinised by the appointed authorities; the matter was now closed; the vessel had gone to the Baltic under another commander, and the crew were perfectly contented and orderly.

Mr. Williams ultimately withdrew his motion.

Mr. Greeno moved for a select committee to consider the cheapest and most efficient mode of providing for the printing for the public service.

A saving of £40,000 in the single item of parliamentary printing could be effected by the introduction of improved processes.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer declared that the printing was already performed upon the most economical arrangements. The session was too far advanced to give any chance of useful result from the inquiries of a select committee.

The motion, after some further discussion, was carried upon a division by 36 votes to 32-24.

Some other routine business having been transacted, the house adjourned at half-past 11 o'clock.

WEDNESDAY.—The House of Lords did not sit. The Lords' amendments to the Bill, introduced on the 25th inst., made a statement of the Oxford University Bill be considered on the 26th inst. The Lords having resolved that no bill from the Commons (except bills of supply) be read a second time after the 25th of July, unless of peculiar urgency, he read a second time after the 25th of July, unless of peculiar urgency, he proposed that the bill be read up to that House should be sent by Monday next.

The report of the Standing Orders Revision Committee was considered, and, on the motion of Mr. W. Patten, the alterations proposed by the committee were agreed to.

On the order for resuming the debate on the motion for leave to bring in a bill to alter and amend the law relating to Church Temporalities, &c., in Ireland, adjourned on the 6th of July.

Mr. Serjeant Stree, in a long reply, answered the statements made by the opponents of his motion, Sir J. Young, Mr. G. A. Hamilton, and Mr. Napier. He did not wish, he said, to press the motion to a division, unless the House desired it.

Mr. Cogan advised him not to divide. The subject he thought more fit for the consideration of a committee.

Mr. Newdegate characterized the motion as an imprudent attack upon the church establishment in Ireland, with a view to its overthrow. Mr. Bouverie should vote for the motion, though he did not concur with the principle of the proposed measure.

Mr. Brady expressed a similar opinion and the same intention.

Up on a division, the motion for leave to introduce the bill was negatived by 117 to 51.

The House then went into Committee on the Metropolitan Schools (Scotland) Bill, the first clause of which set in active motion the secular element, and a discussion of more than three hours' duration, of which the Irish members took the largest share, was terminated, without anything being decided, by the lapse of time, the Chairman leaving the chair in the midst of a speech of Mr. F. Sully.

The Irish Trial (Scotland) Bill passed through committee. Leave was given to Mr. J. Young to bring in a bill to provide for the establishment of a national gallery of painting, sculpture, and the fine arts, and for the care of a public library, in Dublin; to Mr. Stotterson, a bill to extend the acts in force relating to friendly societies; and to Sir J. Graham, a bill for altering and amending certain provisions which regulate powers in the High Court of Admiralty.

The House adjourned at 6 o'clock.

THURSDAY.—Lords.—Several bills advanced through a stage respectively, but without the concurrence of any serious discussion.

Their Lordships adjourned at half-past 7 o'clock.

Commons.—At the morning sitting, Mr. Agnew withdrew the Criminal Procedure Bill.

The consideration in committee of the Bill was resumed at clause 33.

Considerable discussion took place upon a more stringent form of declaration, which Sir E. Kelly proposed to substitute for the words originally set forth in the clause, by which returned members were to affirm that they had neither sold nor authorised the payment of any money on account of their election, otherwise than through the officially appointed election officer.

Ultimately the amended declaration was carried, as was the clause itself, after two divisions.

In the evening, in reply to Mr. Disraeli, Lord J. Russell stated that the amount for which the Government intended to ask for a vote of credit was £3,000,000. The whole of this sum, he further illustrated, was expected to arrive from the ways and means already granted.

The House having again resolved itself into committee, resumed progress upon the Bill, and passed all the remaining clauses of the measure.

Upon an additional clause, proposed by Lord R. Grosvenor, a prolonged debate ensued touching the legality or expediency of permitting candidates to pay for the conveyance of voters to the polling places, or to issue refreshment tickets. The clause strictly prohibited all payments upon either account, and was carried to a division, but rejected by a majority of 100 to 104.

Mr. Stanhope moved the insertion of a clause legalising the issue of refreshment tickets, not exceeding the value of 2s. each, to the voters at elections.

Upon division this clause was also rejected by 112 votes to 126-10.

Several more additional clauses required for consideration, and a conventional took place respecting the course which should be pursued with regard to them.

Lord J. Russell, with the view of getting the bill through a stage, proposed that it should be reported then, having the requisite propositions in it be considered when the report was brought up.

In the course of subsequent discussion Mr. Bright expressed some censure of the resolution passed by the Peers fixing an arbitrary date as the last day for taking up new bills.

Lord J. Russell explained the reasons which had induced the other branch of the legislature to pass the resolution in question, but believed that it was not irrevocable, and would be waived if necessary in favour of a measure so important as the thirty-third Bill.

After some further debate, the bill was passed through committee, and ordered to be reported.

Upon resuming shortly after midnight, the House proceeded to dispose of the remaining orders of the day, 36 in number, and a considerable number of bills of respectively advanced in a stage amidst a good deal of very uninteresting discussion.

The House adjourned at 3 o'clock.

Foreign Intelligence.

WE LEARN FROM Turin, under date of July 18, that the ship Persian had arrived at Genoa, having on board the submarine cable for La Spezia. The Prince de Carignan, the Ministres, and the corps diplomatique, will be present when it is laid down.

THE MARSH MARE has not arrived to-day. From San Sebastian we learn that 1,000 armed citizens, accompanied by some troops, had left that city for Pampeluna. Vittoria, Burgos, Valladolid, and Granada, have pronounced for the movement. General Zabala is marching on Madrid at the head of a force drawn from the Basque Provinces.

THE PORTO consents to open its ports to Greek vessels, but it demands an indemnity for the expenses of the war, and for Turkish subjects who have suffered from the depredations of the Greek sympathisers.

ACCORDING TO ADVICES FROM CONSTANTINOPLE of the 10th, an Anglo-French force, landed by Turkish steamers, had occupied the Sulina mouth of the Danube. The Russian steam flotilla, threatened on all sides, was wandering up and down the Danube in despair of safety. The navigation of the river was completely re-established, and the steam-boat of the Austrian Lloyd's had arrived at Galatz. The allies are occupied in removing certain sunken vessels from the mouth of the Danube. The Press says, that on the 7th the combined fleets were seen off Akermann, sailing east.

IRELAND.

COMPENSATION FOR LOSS OF PARENTS BY A RAILWAY COLLISION.—On Tuesday at the Wexford Assizes yesterday the orphan children of Mr. and Mrs. Macweeney got five thousand pounds damages against the Great Southern and Western Railway Company, on account of the loss of their father and mother, who were killed by the railway accident at Straffan last autumn. This is the largest amount of damages ever had against any railway company in Ireland.

FRANCE.

(From our own Correspondent.)

PARIS, THURSDAY, JULY 20.

Well! The Emperor has given this time an unanswerable reply to his detractors. Their exclamation constantly was, in speaking of the tranquillity of France, and particularly of Paris, "Attendez, attendez—let him send the army for three days out of Paris, et nous verrons, but he dare not do it."

Well, he has sent the troops out of Paris, for even the duty at the Palace and elsewhere is now actually performed by the Municipal Guards, and what is the consequence? Paris, which in the pacific reign of Louis Philippe, was never a month without an emue or disturbance of some kind, is as tranquil and free from disorder as the quietest town in the British dominions. Without the least extravagant admiration of the present French government, it is impossible not to see that Napoleon has touched some chord in the heart of the nation which renders him popular, and enables him to set faction at defiance.

His late farewell proclamation to the army, which seems little noticed in England, produced an immense effect in Paris. Scarcely was it posted up on the walls of the capital, when groups formed around it, and the universal feeling it excited cannot be better described than by the following sentence which fell from a bearded workman, like most of his class in Paris an ex-militaire:—"Ce sergent s'est écrit en lettres d'or." The Emperor, in fact, is a man of few words; but when he does speak he makes everybody understand him. How devoutly you must wish his brevity had a few imitators "somewhere." If you ever attempt to wade through the columns of your Parliamentary debates. But, to come back to our "mutions," the mention of Austria, Blyan, Moscow, in the proclamation, is said to have given offence, not only in Austria and Prussia, but in England. Why, it would be difficult to say; but without any doubt, they were used deliberately and designedly, being intended to show Europe that he, at least, intended to make a stand-up fight, and no mistake. These words have a special significance, at a moment when there is further talk of renewed negotiations, and show that France will be no party to mystifications which were before suffered to last too long.

A young Russian nobleman, Count S—, who had the misfortune to remain behind his countryman in their late general emigration par ordre from Paris, was unlucky enough to lose, a few nights ago, nearly 100,000 francs at the gaming table. The affair is making some noise, as unfair play is suspected. Gambling, indeed, is known to be carried on in Paris to a frightful extent in private circles, and the police reports to the government are stated to show, that larger sums are actually lost in this city at present, than when the gaming-houses were publicly open. The presence of police agents in any case of unfair play was then, at least, a security that, if a man or woman (for many of the gentler sex were constant visitors at Frascati) was ruined, it was all en règle; but at present, as the playing is carried on in secret, there is no protection save in the honour of the players, which just now stands rather low.

The late terrible thunderstorm, in addition to the damage it caused in other parts of Paris, is found to have inflicted considerable injury on the edifice in progress for the exhibition next year, in the Champs Elysées. The displacement of the stones was at first set down as the effect of the violence of the wind, but it is now ascertained to have been occasioned by the electric fluid, attracted by the immense quantity of iron, which forms so large a share in the roof of the building. The damage will not, however, delay the period of opening, though it will cost a few thousands to repair; an obstacle of little consequence in this country, where, luckily for the improvements of Paris, we have no Joseph Humes, nor Williams's to overhaud the estimates every year. It may not be very palatable in England to say so, but the truth is, despotism has done more for the improvement and splendour of Paris, in a couple of years under Napoleon, than any French constitutional government would have dared to do in a century.

The proprietors of the Variétés, Mr. B., has appealed against the decision of the Tribunal de Commerce, which condemned him to pay the debts contracted by M. Carpiet, and two or three other directors, to whom he had previously let the theatre. These debts amount to upwards of £30,000, but what the final decision will be there is, of course, yet no knowing. But, it will cause some surprise if the Superior Court reverses the judgment, though all the world are unanimous in pronouncing it flagrantly unjust. A writer in the Figaro says on this subject:—"Some of our tender-hearted contemporaries are deeply touched with the ruin of Mr. B." He re-assured, good Scriberius—don't take on so. Un vrai gentilhomme Anglais is not so easily ruined. Mr. B. is master of a fortune of between twenty and thirty thousand pounds sterling a-year, and his stud of racers would purchase all the theatres in Paris. His famous "West Australian" won the two greatest races known on the English turf, and besides the honour of carrying off the blue-ribbon of the sportsman, the Great Derby put somewhere about a million of francs (£10,000) into his masters' pocket. So you see, good Scriberius, the Variétés will never sell this unfortunate gentleman to Clely, nor even keep him awake for an additional half hour. I (Figaro) indeed know what might be done in his case; but I will not give him even a hint of my secret, under at least £10,000, and very cheap too!" So much for Figaro. The gentleman in question was, however, really unfortunate in falling into the hands of such barbarians as his directors, for the trash these individuals have accepted is, for the most part, positively indescribable for dullness and stupidity. They are now producing them at the rate of three or four a-week. Most of them, however, are luckily "stranded in life's path" by the discerning public; and thus this difficulty, the incubus on the theatre, is rapidly disappearing.

The cholera, you will be pleased to learn, is beginning to diminish, but has this week, unfortunately, made fatal havoc among the higher classes, whom it had hitherto somewhat respected. On Friday night, at St. Cloud, Colonel Lebrun was carried off, after an illness of only two hours. Deceased was the only son of the well-known member of the Directory, and one of the three consuls appointed when Napoleon became First Consul. The deceased was a man of respectability and great wealth. His age was upwards of seventy. Another well-known name has also fallen, M. de Las Cazes, son of the man, one of the few.

who attended Napoleon in his exile, and in his last hours at St. Helena. M. de Las Cazes also expired very suddenly. Another death, from the same dire pestilence, is that of M. de Serrol. A young member of the Senate has also fallen beneath the typhus typhus, barely a week after his marriage with the daughter of Prince Murat. The papers have received from the police a "recommandation" not to touch on the subject; and, in the absence of authentic information, the most exaggerated reports are circulated on the subject. The mortality, also, caused by typhus fever and chest diseases, owing to the most unreasonable weather during the last few weeks, has been more than usually fatal.

Accounts from the provinces state that a taste for horse racing is becoming very prevalent in the South. The other day a meeting took place at Rodez, in Languedoc, where, three or four years ago, the idea would have been scouted as preposterous. The business was of no importance, neither were the horses or their owners known on the 3rd; but from the spirit with which the whole affair was got up, the "Sunny South" gives just hopes to all lovers of the sport.

FOREIGN MISCELLANY.

REMOVER ANNEXATION OF THE SANDWICH ISLANDS.—A despatch has been received from Mr. Gregg, our Commissioner at the Sandwich Islands, that the native Government throws itself into the hands of the American party for protection from French, English, and other foreign settlers. The Commissioner has been empowered to accept the island for the United States, and assure the native Government of American protection.—New York Courier and Enquirer.

DEATH.—M. Emanuel Las Cazes, the son of the celebrated companion of Napoleon during his captivity at St. Helena, died in Paris on Friday week of cholera. The porter of his house died the same day also of that complaint. M. Las Cazes was a member of the Senate.

EMIGRATION FROM PLYMOUTH.—PLYMOUTH, July 10.—The fine new ship Lord Raglan, 923 tons register, Captain Planagan, for Adelaide, and the Appoline, of 600 tons, for Melbourne, having embarked their respective complements of emigrants from the Government depot here, sailed on Sunday. The Lord Raglan belongs to Messrs. W. Nicholson and Sons, of Sunderland, and has been fitted up on a most excellent plan, the result of the experience of Captain Lean, R.N., the Government emigration officer in London. Among other advantages, one-third of each bed can be turned up from the sides of the ship, so as to admit of a free passage two feet wide all round her, and thus secure an effectual means of cleansing and ventilating the vessel every day. Her emigrants, numbering 360 souls, were under the charge of Surgeon Superintendent W. Brett. The Appoline is the property of Messrs. Thomson, Hankey, and Co., and is commanded by Captain Tomlins, who has made some very successful passages. While lying in the Sound these ships were visited by Sir Frederick Rogers, Bart., one of the commissioners, who was accompanied by his wife. A large proportion of the emigrants in each of these ships was selected by Mr. J. B. Wilcocks, the agent for her Majesty's Emigration Commissioners. The Isle of Thanet and the Pomona, also under charter, are expected here to embark emigrants from the depot this week. They will be followed by the Patriote, for Sydney; the Duchess of Northumberland, for Hobart Town; the Clara, for Portland Bay; and the Lady Kennaway, for Sydney; and the private passenger ships Orient, for Melbourne; the Vimeira, for Melbourne and Sydney; the Anglesey, for Melbourne; the Waterloo, for Sydney; the Derwentwater, for Van Diemen's Land; the Royal Stuart, for New Zealand; and the Statesman, for Melbourne.

MEETINGS OF LODGES, &c.

TUESDAY, 25th July.—Board of Gen. Purposes, at 3 o'clock—No. 210, Swan Tavern, Hungerford-market.

WEDNESDAY, 26th.—Lodge of Benevolence, at 7—No. 745, Clayton Arms, Kennington Oval, Lambeth—Chap. No. 13, Woolwich.

THURSDAY, 27th.—Gen. Com. Fom. School, Freemasons' Tavern, at 12—Chap. No. 248, Globe Tavern, Royal Hill, Greenwich.

AN INTERESTING MASONIC BIBLE.—A correspondent thus writes to us:—"It may not be known to you that the Freemasons of the 46th Regiment, now stationed in Windsor, have in their possession the original Bible belonging to Lodge 227 of the Irish Constitution, once in existence in that corps, upon which George Washington, afterwards Commander-in-Chief of the army in the United States, was initiated into the rites of freemasonry. This book was twice taken in battle; once in 1777, during the American war, and once by the French, at Dominica, in 1805, and each time honourably restored to the lodge of the 46th, with a military escort as a guard of honour. Each case of restoration was a scene of moral beauty—a triumphant vindication of the purity of masonic principles. The surprise and feelings of both officers and men may be imagined when they perceived the flag of truce that announced this elegant compliment from their gallant opponents, but still nobler brethren, who offered, by the act, the acknowledgment and homage of an enlightened nation to the purity, value, and utility of masonry. I am sure Brother Tyffe (Major), to whose charge this 'jewel' is entrusted, will allow his fellow-craft to view this, to them, most interesting relic of days gone by, especially as it is again about to brave the dangers of active service. May God speed these gallant fellows wherever they go!"—From the Windsor and Eton Express, 15th July, 1854.

HORTICULTURE.

OXFORD AMATEUR ROSE SOCIETY.—The members of the above society, held their annual show on Tuesday, in a field near Holywell Church, Oxford. Spacious marquees were erected, where this fine old English flower was shown in all its beautiful varieties. The blooms owing to the blight and scarcity of sunshine, were not so good as on former occasions. After the prizes were awarded, the members and friends to the number of fifty partook of an excellent dinner, under a large tent erected for the occasion. The band of the Oxfordshire Militia enlivened the company during the afternoon with well selected pieces of music. The following was the award of the judges, viz:—18 varieties, Messrs. E. Furley, 1st, W. Thurland 2nd, H. A. Colecutt 3rd, and T. Joy 4th. 12 Varieties, Messrs. G. Furrant, 1st, T. Walker 2nd, Paley 3rd, and J. Wells 4th. 9 varieties, Messrs. F. Cripps 1st, R. P. Blake 2nd, J. Loekey 3rd, Alderman Towle 4th, and 11. Gammon 5th. 6 varieties, Messrs. Dodd 1st, G. Stevens 2nd, F. Greenwood 3rd, and J. Haines 4th.

EXTRAORDINARY STRAWBERRIES.—Mr. John Linton, Arno's-vale, Brislington, has grown this season some very extraordinary fine strawberries, many of them measuring nine inches in circumference, and weighing two-and-a-half ounces.

SUBSTITUTE FOR POTATOES.—For the last four years considerable attention has been paid by the Paris Museum of Natural History to the cultivation of a plant coming from China, and known under the name of the Dioscorea Japonica. The plant, says the writer of a paper sent to the Agricultural Society, may, by its size, weight, and hardy character, become exceedingly valuable in France, as it will serve as a substitute for the potato. Its tubercles, like those of the Jerusalem artichoke, resist in the open air the severest winter without sustaining any injury. The flavour of this vegetable is more delicate than that of the potato.

SCOTLAND.

JURY TRIAL (SCOTLAND) BILL.—A bill just brought in by Mr. Dunlop, proposes to provide that, if the jury in a civil cause in the Court of Sessions are unable to agree after six hours' deliberation, the judge is to have power to give them leave to be furnished with necessary refreshment.

University and Clerical.

OPEN AIR PREACHING.—Several of the clergy of Birmingham, among whom are the Rev. J. C. Miller, rector of the old parish church, Rev. Messrs. Cockin, J. C. Barrett, J. B. Marsden, and J. Eagles, have announced their intention of trying this agency, and some have actually commenced, with much encouragement. The clergymen above named have each of them large and densely-peopled districts.

MR. BENNETT AND THE POPE.—The following anecdote has been related to us by an admirer of the vicar of Frome:—While Mr. Bennett was in Rome his Holiness, who had been informed of the rev. gentleman's visit, caused it to be intimated to him that he would be a welcome guest at the Vatican, which honour, however, Mr. Bennett declined. On this the Pope, who took a warm interest in Mr. Bennett's conversion, wrote to him, expressing his willingness to remove any doubts he might entertain, and his desire to welcome him into the fold of Rome, whereupon the Anglican clergyman returned for answer that he (Mr. Bennett) entertained no doubts as to his religion; but that if the Pope had any as to his own, he should be very happy to discuss the matter with him. Pio Nino declined to put the matter on this footing, and the interview, we believe, never took place.—Bristol Mirror.

NEW YORK, July 8.—Several disturbances have occurred in various parts of the country, originating in the growing ill-feeling between the native Americans and the Irish. At Manchester, New Hampshire, a severe fight took place, with injury to both sides. A Roman Catholic chapel was very much damaged. At Dorchester, Massachusetts, the Roman Catholic chapel had been blown up with gunpowder. Some persons attributed the destruction of the chapel to the native Americans; others asserted that the Roman Catholics had deposited arms and gunpowder there for the protection of the chapel.

At Bath, Maine, an itinerant preacher, known by the sobriquet of the "Angel Gabriel," lectured against Popery, and so excited the mob that several hundreds proceeded to the Roman Catholic church, broke in the doors and windows, rang the bell, and finally set fire to the building, utterly destroying it. The mob afterwards paraded the streets, manifesting their gratification at this achievement in the most boisterous manner.

Medical.

ENGLISH MEDICAL STAFF FOR THE TURKISH ARMY.—As we announced some time since, the formation of this staff is entrusted to the Director-General of the Army and Ordnance Medical Departments. In reply to numerous correspondents, we may state that a considerable number of surgeons and assistant-surgeons will be appointed, a diploma from a British college of surgeons, or a degree from a British university being essential; and that preference is given to gentlemen of a certain age and experience in practice. It is understood, that when the Director-General is satisfied with the diploma or degree, no formal examination will be required. Full particulars may be obtained by writing to the office in St. James's place.—Medical Times and Gazette.

A CHOLERA DINNER.—The Standard News says that one of the persons who died from cholera, during the recent visitation at Trimdon, had previously eaten eighteen fresh herrings at one meal.

DURHAM.—Several cases of cholera have occurred within the last few days at Durham, some of which have proved fatal.

LIVERPOOL.—Two deaths have occurred among the patients sent to the workhouse hospital from the Dreggs since the 13th.

THE METROPOLIS.

THE CLOCK AND WATCH MAKERS' ASYLUM, FOR AGED AND DECAYED MEMBERS IN EVERY BRANCH OF THE TRADE.

It will be remembered that not long since a meeting of the Superintending Committee, with the Committee of Management, was held at the London Coffee House, Ludgate Hill. Present:—T. S. Duncombe, Esq., M.P., Thomas Challis, Esq., Ald., M.P., Valentine Knight, Esq., J. Lund, Esq., Chas. Frodsham, Esq., James Pascall, Esq., J. Grant, Esq., Messrs. Connell, G. Carley, Cragg, Blundell, Davis, Holliday, King, G. Moore, Josiah Moore, Meredith, Overan, Wm. Rowlands, S. Smith, Shepherd, and David Taylor. At this meeting Mr. W. Rowlands was unanimously called to the chair. That gentleman stated that the object of calling the present meeting was, in the first place, to put the members of the Superintending Committee in possession of what had already been done; and next, to ask their sanction to the nomination of gentlemen to fill certain offices, as it must be evident, that without the existence of those officers an appeal could be made to the trade or the public, nor could the ordinary business of the institution be carried on. The Secretary had prepared a report, which, with the permission of the meeting, he would call upon him to read. The Secretary then read the following report:—

"It must be gratifying to the present meeting to learn, that the endeavours taken to ascertain the feeling of the trade as to the propriety and possibility of erecting an asylum for the aged and decayed members of the trade, have met with the warmest success; and it is with much pleasure the gentlemen who formed themselves into a provisional committee, and undertook to canvass the trade, now meet to report the result of their labours, communicate the ideas they have formed upon the subject, and seek the advice of the present meeting as a guide for their future operations.

"In the first place, the committee have to express their acknowledgments to those gentlemen they have called upon for the very courteous reception given them. The task of canvassing is in a great degree an onerous one, requiring much forbearance, and often accompanied by circumstances of unpleasantness. The present duty has been rendered one of extreme pressure by the complimentary reception uniformly given. Upwards of 200 gentlemen have been waited upon, and the kindness of each was as sincere as it was graceful. And if it were possible that the present efforts could prove abortive, the remembrance of the good feeling displayed, the sympathies expressed, and the civilities mutually exchanged, would amply repay for all the labour undergone. But the committee of management have on such gloomy apprehension as a failure. The good-fellowship exhibited by all is a sure prognostic of success; and the work thus commenced in unity and good understanding must be the sure precursor of the efficient aid that will follow, and conduct it to a triumphant issue.

"There is one circumstance to which the committee must allude in justice to their own feelings and respect to the memory of him who has very recently passed from this to another state of existence. The first gentleman waited upon was the late Mr. Vulliamy. The interview was of the most pleasing description. He paid the most earnest attention to our application, and signified his intention to aid us to the best of his ability; and on a subsequent occasion, when waited upon to solicit his name as one of your superintending committee, though bowed down with—as it proved to be—a mortal attack, he readily assented to our request, and expressed a hope that he might be spared to witness the consummation of our endeavours. That was not granted. In about 48 hours after that interview life had passed away; but he has left behind the remembrance of fervid hopes, which we trust may prove the happy prestige of our ultimate success.

"The task of canvassing being thus far so extremely satisfactory, and the superintending committee composed of names the most prominent that could be desired, another duty presented itself to your committee of management, which was to make a selection of names to fill the ordinary duties of government, and submit them to this meeting previous to their being nominated for election at the general meeting. Though they may not term this a difficult task, yet it was not without much consideration they determined upon the names which are now submitted to you. It would have been a great difficulty if the compliment of office had been expected in return for zeal and talents displayed in the undertaking; but the feeling has been, 'In honour preferring one another.' And in presenting the following names they trust they have east disparagement upon no one. It is, however, satisfactory to know, that the whole question of offices is open to review by this meeting. It was the duty of the committee of management to recommend certain names; it is in the province of the present meeting to make such modifications as they may deem essential, and none will submit themselves more cheerfully to your decision than the gentlemen whose names are before you.

"The committee of management feel reluctant to place names on the list of vice-presidents, which for obvious reasons may with more propriety be introduced at the general meeting; but Mr. Duncombe and Mr. Alderman Challis (the members for the borough of Finsbury) have given their valuable assistance and their judicious advice on every occasion when waited upon, that the committee take the earliest opportunity of expressing the acknowledgment of their services by placing their names as vice-presidents, and will leave to the general meeting the grateful task of adding to the list the names of gentlemen, without whose countenance and concurrence this attempt to erect an asylum, might have proved a matter of uncertainty if not of impossibility.

"Many questions have been put, and much anxiety exhibited, as to the benefits to be conferred by this institution when established. Your committee have given much consideration to the subject, but it is manifest that to a certain extent the benefit must depend upon the resources obtained. The amount of relief contemplated is—residence, fuel, light, with an allowance of not less than £20 per annum. The intention is to make this asylum, as far as such a design can be made practicable, an efficient home for the aged and decayed recipient—a retreat for the days of old age and infirmities, and a medium for the enjoyment of calm and quietness at the period when the frame is no longer fitted for toil, and the mind asks a while for reflection before falling itself to its last repose. Our existing institutions fail to do this. The small amount they bestow, though no doubt highly acceptable to those whose faculties are not entirely prostrate, and who can add to the amount by their slight exertion, is comparatively nothing to such as have no other means of subsistence than the supply of their wants by the precarious charity of others. At the time too when sinking nature requires more than usual support and additional comforts, it is a doubtful charity that would limit the supply to the lowest point the frame can bear. And while care and judgment should be exercised to prevent the idle and imposing from taking advantage of the benefits, the impecunious and stricken should find a sufficient shelter in the time of their decay.

"The means for supporting the institution will be made as universal as its benefits. It will be called 'The Clock and Watch Makers' Asylum,' and from the various branches of the clock and watch trade the main support must depend. Large extraneous assistance will be required at the outset; but when the building is completed, the revenue for the support of its objects will no doubt be easily gathered from the members of the trade. It is proposed that an annual subscription of five shillings shall give one vote. 120 votes will support a recipient. Very little calculation will prove, that if all the trade were to subscribe, elections would not be required; every deserving case would find immediate relief, and the unseemliness of age and sickness, pining in sorrow and neglect, would be almost unknown to your trade. These, however, with the minor details, must be the subject for a future meeting. In the interim a code of regulations will be drawn out, and you will be again called together to revise and sanction them.

"The next object of your committee will be to call a public meeting, and obtain an efficient chairman. Many names have been suggested; but, to the present time, no direct application has been made, and they beg to close their first report by asking the opinions of this meeting as to the most desirable person that may honour us by presiding at our first public meeting, and begging their assistance and influence in obtaining the object of your selection."

The secretary then read the following names:—

VICE-PRESIDENTS.—T. S. Duncombe, Esq., M.P.; Thomas Challis, Esq., Alderman, M.P.

TRUSTEES.—Thomas Challis, Esq., Alderman, M.P.; William Connell, Esq.; Charles Frodsham, Esq.; Thomas Porthouse, Esq.

TREASURER.—William Rowlands, Esq.

AUDITORS.—G. Carley, Esq.; J. Cragg, Esq.; G. Moore, Esq.; David Taylor, Esq.

SECRETARY.—Mr. William Blackburn, Clarendon-chambers, Hand-court, Bedford-row.

It was moved by Charles Frodsham, Esq., seconded by J. Lund, Esq., and carried unanimously—

"That the report now read, with the list of officers recommended, be received and adopted, and entered on the minutes of transactions."

Thomas Slingsby Duncombe, Esq., M.P., said, the report having been carried, it was now for him to express his acknowledgments to this meeting for the high honour they had conferred upon him, by naming him as their first vice-president. He could assure the meeting that if he had done anything that called forth their approbation, he had only performed that which he was at all times most anxious to do—give his best attention and assistance to such noble objects as that for which they had now assembled. It would not be possible for him to attend all their committee meetings; his parliamentary duties would hinder him from that pleasure, nor did he presume to suppose his presence could add to the zeal and efficiency which he saw displayed among the members of the committee, but nevertheless he promised them his cordial co-operation. On occasions of a public meeting, or where his services would be considered necessary, he would feel obliged by the secretary giving him as long a notice as he possibly could, that he might make every arrangement to place himself at their service.

Alderman Challis, M.P., must congratulate the meeting on the very rapid and satisfactory progress that had been made since he had the last interview with some of the members whom he saw present. That part of the report which alluded to the working portion of the trade contributing so materially to its support, he considered to be highly satisfactory; indeed, he thought it would prove the greatest strength of the institution. Large amounts might be obtained on extraordinary occasions, but its permanent success would depend upon the working men feeling it was something belonging to them, and which it was as much their interest as their duty to nourish and protect. He thanked them very sincerely for the honour they had done him, and the remark of his honourable colleague he must apply to himself; the committee had only to point out in what manner he could be useful to them, and they might rely upon his services.

J. Lund, Esq., quite agreed with the observations which fell from Alderman Challis, respecting the support to be obtained from the working portion of the trade; but there was another portion of the report to which he would beg to call attention, which asked large assistance from the wealthy before the asylum could be established. The working portion were not in a position to purchase land and erect an asylum, and it was with the view to assist them in those endeavours that he had attended the present meeting. The support which the labouring class would give to the undertaking would no doubt be highly creditable to their economy and forethought; but that did not relieve the more wealthy from doing their best to encourage and promote the desired object. To do unto others as you would be done unto, was the great law of Christian duty; and that would be motive enough to assist and relieve the industrious, but decayed poor of our trade, as we should certainly desire the same assistance if we were in their stead. But in the present instance we were called upon to do more. To the labour and toil of the workman the manufacturers were much indebted. It was right to acknowledge their claims, and assist them to raise a building as a home, into which they might quietly and comfortably retire when their energies were exhausted, and their skill paralyzed by the intense application of some branches of the trade. He had the greatest confidence in the gentlemen who formed the committee of management; he thought to the present time they had conducted the business most admirably. He would conclude by moving:—"That it be referred back to the committee of management to continue their operations in the manner they may deem expedient for carrying out the intentions contained in the report, and also to make a further report when they shall be prepared so to do."

Valentine Knight, Esq., seconded the proposition; which was put from the chair, and carried unanimously.

Valentine Knight, Esq., then proposed a vote of thanks to the chairman, upon whom he passed a very high eulogium, and said, the fact of Mr. W. Rowland's taking so prominent a part in the matter was an earnest of its ultimate success.

Mr. E. J. Thompson seconded the proposition, which was carried by acclamation.

The chairman returned thanks, and the meeting adjourned.

In regard to this praiseworthy "Clock and Watch Makers' Asylum," we have the pleasure to subjoin the following circular, which has only yet been privately circulated:—

SECRETARY.—Mr. William Blackburn, Clarendon-chambers, Hand-court, Bedford-row.

In presenting the first list of donations to the asylum fund, the committee have to express their acknowledgments to those gentlemen who have generously responded to their appeal, and to claim the forbearance of such members of the trade as have not yet been waited upon. If the exertions of the committee could keep pace with their desires, every member of the trade would have had an opportunity given him to record his name and munificence; but it must be well known to every man in business, that in matters like this much time is occupied in detail; arrangements have to be made and carried out, in which much depends upon gentlemen whose daily avocations will grant them but a limited time. The members of the committee, therefore, have a double boon to ask of the trade—first, to excuse any apparent delay or neglect in not having been waited upon earlier; and next—which will assist them very materially—to forward their names (either by post or otherwise) to a member of the committee, whose names and addresses are here appended, with such amount as they may be pleased to bestow themselves, or can induce their friends to give, in support of an object which has the sanction of the trade, and recommends itself to the sympathies of all who acknowledge the duty of affording succour and support to infirmity, age, and adversity.

After much consideration the committee have arrived at the conclusion, that they will require the sum of £4,000 or £5,000 to carry out in an efficient manner the object contemplated—viz., The purchase of freshhold land, and erecting 20 houses. This may appear a large outlay for such a purpose, but reflection will prove it is not so. If the aggregate annual amount paid as rent for lodgings by twenty pensioners belonging to your institution be considered, it will be found to equal the common interest of the above sum if invested. If so, then your institutions, out of the annuities granted to your pensioners, are now paying the interest of so much money for crowded, ill-ventilated, and consequently unhealthy lodgings. By erecting the asylum, the trade will be in possession of freshhold land, which is at all times valuable; and they will have the satisfaction of feeling that those of their pensioners who otherwise would be compelled to spend the greater portion of their slender means in paying the rent of an inconmodious lodging, have been provided with wholesome, airy, and cheerful dwellings, without any drain upon those resources which should be left them to provide such comforts as their age and infirmities demand. This institution therefore is deserving of your serious consideration on the ground of comfort and economy.

It will be perceived by the annexed list, that the amount already obtained falls very much short of the sum required. A great deal remains to be done, and the committee most strenuously urge upon the members of the trade, that they make exertion to place themselves in the position which is due to them. Let them reflect, that an opportunity is now given to consummate the object which has been so long desired. If they allow the present attempt to fail through lack of energy on their part, or the niggardliness of the means required for its support, years must elapse before a similar effort can be made. And what person, who is now in the enjoyment of all that heart can wish, dare assure himself that he may not at a future time be glad to claim the shelter which this asylum is intended to afford? If so, then the knowledge of having contributed towards it in the day of prosperity, will soften the pang of adversity; and should he never require its aid, then the contributions he has bestowed will still remain the offerings of a grateful heart, for "where much has been given, much will be required."

The clock and watch trade has many claims upon the public sympathy. The manufacturer and the merchant deposit their wealth with confidence in the holds of a ship, and consign it to the mariner, who cheerfully quits the shore, and embarks with it on the world of waters, trusting to the faithful mechanism of his chronometer to guide him to the desired haven. The artisan who is engaged in manufacturing the chronometer is reduced to premature decay by the intense strain upon the vision and the delicate manipulation his occupation requires. With no greater amount of remuneration than is awarded to the operative in most other trades, he is earlier rendered incapable of earning his daily bread; and he has therefore claims upon the merchant, manufacturer, mariner, for whose benefit his faculties have been exerted and eventually impaired.

The invention of the regulator, or, as it is sometimes designated, the astronomical clock, has been of essential service to the science of astronomy; and what engagement made either in business or the every day concerns of life could be kept, if it were not for those truthful recorders of time—the clock and watch? Competition is as keen in this as in any other trade; and the operative clock or watch maker toiling in secluded manly is suddenly arrested by corporeal inability, and driven to seek support for the remainder of his days either to the Union of his parish, or by a scanty supply from the alms of others. It is on behalf of such objects the public are called upon to afford assistance. The trade are endeavouring to raise a fund to erect an asylum, which will do much to mitigate the privations of indigence and decay; but the resources of the trade are not sufficient for the outlay, and they have confidence that this appeal to the benevolence of the public will not be made in vain. [Here follows the names of subscribers, for which we have not present space—ED.]

RACKETS.

BELVIDERE TAVERN, PENTONVILLE.—On Thursday last a match for two silver snuff boxes was played between George Erwood and a Gentleman Amateur, against Bull and an amateur of first-rate eminence. The playing on both sides was exceedingly good, but the extraordinary skill and activity of Bull and his partner prevailed, and they carried off the prizes, winning four out of the five games played in the rubber. The match for the silver tankards, which was to have come off on Monday last between Morris and Pitman against The London Amateur and another Amateur was unavoidably postponed, in consequence of the temporary lameness of one of the gentlemen interested. In lieu thereof, a spirited match was got up between Pitman and The London Amateur against Bull and a first-rate player. The good fortune which has attended Bull and his partners during the present season (Bull seeming to have perfected his racket education by the terms he has kept at the University of Oxford) did not desert him on this occasion; but, notwithstanding the extraordinary good condition of Bull, the result achieved in the match—the beating of such players as Pitman and The London Amateur—could not have been achieved without the powerful assistance of Bull's talented partner. By their combined activity and skill they carried off the honours in seven out of nine games played; the last, to the surprise of everybody, being a "love game" lost by Pitman and The London Amateur. To-morrow afternoon, the greatest master of talent of the season will take place for Erwood's benefit, when the court will be occupied, among other first-rate players, by Pitman, Morris, Frank Erwood, Bull, The London Amateur, Sowden, Caplin, and the Veteran Samuel Young, who defeated Lord Eglinton's marker, Patrick Divett, in the North British Stakes for £800.

BELVIDERE TAVERN, PENTONVILLE.—George Erwood, the Racket Master to the Belvidere Court, will take his benefit on Monday next, July 24. On which day professionals and amateurs of the greatest talent in England will take part in the sports. Among the distinguished players, who have signified their intention of being present, and supporting George Erwood, are:—T. Morris, M. Pittman, Frank Erwood (from Birmingham), The London Amateur, C. Bull (from Oxford), John Sowden, and John Caplin. The play will commence at three o'clock. It has been arranged that tickets, one shilling each, may be had at the bar of the Belvidere Tavern at any hour of the day of the benefit, July 24.

COPPEE AND EATING-HOUSE KEEPERS' ASSOCIATION.—On Monday night the 35th half-yearly meeting of the members of this association was held at the Freemasons' Tavern, Mr. R. Staines in the chair. The report stated that the expenditure for the last six months had been less than the income by 179l. 12s. 11d. The total income for the half-year, including a balance of 87l. 13s. 3d. from the last audit, amounted to 288l. 0s. 5d., and the expenditure to 60l. 3s., leaving in hand a balance of 227l. 17s. 5d., of which a sum of 214l. has been added to the capital stock of the association, which now amounts to 3,061l. The report was unanimously adopted. The governing officers for the ensuing year were next elected; and, some routine business having been disposed of, the proceedings terminated with a vote of thanks to the chairman.

WHITE BEAR, KENNINGTON ROAD.—On Monday, the Union Racket Club contended for a pair of beautiful rackets, when a very interesting struggle ensued, resulting in the victory of the manager of the club and his partner, Mr. R.—. The players were handicapped by the marker of the court, and the accuracy of his judgment was proved by the closeness with which each set was contested. On Tuesday, eight players assembled to contend for prizes given by the Union Racket Club. They were arranged by the committee, and the balance of power so evenly distributed, that each party felt confident of success. The last set between previous victors was won by G. E. Greatwood and J. Hales, beating the veterans Black and H. Hales. The three first games were very well contested, and, but for an accident to the old man, who strained a tendon in his right leg, might have had a very different result; but though the set was played out, the activity of Hales, who put on extra steam, was not sufficient to compensate for the crippled condition of his partner. Great forbearance was shown by the losers, who all did their best, and the committee were very happy in being able to present each of them with a small sum as a consolation for their defeat. On Monday, July 31st, E. Greatwood, the marker, takes his annual benefit, when he has secured the services of the best players in and near London; and there is little doubt that he will have a bumper, which he fully deserves for his invariably good conduct and civility.

THE CRYSTAL PALACE.

MONDAY.—SHILLING DAY.—Number of Season tickets sold to this date, 20,370; admission at the doors, 16,763; admission by season tickets, 838.—Total, 17,601.

TUESDAY.—SHILLING DAY.—16,559 paid the admission fee, and 1,151 season ticket holders were admitted.

Hits and Spurs.

THE SUCCESSFUL BARRISTER.—According to the Paris correspondent of the Atlas, a young English barrister had succeeded in marrying Mlle R—, the wealthiest heiress in Paris, and connected with one of the highest families. The young lady was known to possess an undistinguished weakness for a well-dressed man, and by loudly expressing this opinion had been of more service to the tailors of Paris within the last year than Count d'Orsay in double the space of time. The barrister had many rivals, but the most formidable was a gentleman acknowledged to be the most approved dandy in Paris. The lady selected these two to decide from, and invited them both to her chateau. The Frenchman declared to his friends that he meant to cut the matter short at once by so outshining the Englishman by his dress that the latter would retire from the field crushed to atoms by the superior skill he was determined to manifest on the occasion. The Englishman said nothing, made no boast, but accepted the invitation, and, together by the same train, the two rivals left Paris for the seat of war. It so happened that the French dandy had furnished himself with a regular trousseau for the occasion at the great English tailor's in the Rue du Helder, and the English tailor, out of sheer compatriotism, had told Mr. R— of what it was composed. A sudden idea flashed across the brain of the barrister. His servant, one of the sanctified hypocritical roué valets for whom London was always famous, is something about the height and size of the French pretendu. Mr. R— immediately ordered for this ally the exact counterpart of every suit already ordered by the Marquis de B—-. The first day, at dinner, the poor young marquis was rather disconcerted, when, upon entering the dining room, his glance alighted upon the very counterpart of himself, standing stiff and self-centred behind the Englishman's chair; and he looked angrily at his rival to see if any insult was intended, but the Englishman was too intent upon making himself agreeable to the lady to notice his ruffled temper. The second day the same scene was enacted, although our hero had completely changed even the style of his whole tenure; and again was the same ill-humour displayed during the whole of dinner, while Mr. R— was profiting by the silence of his witty rival. The third and fourth repetitions were too ridiculous. The young marquis, too clever, and too much the man of the world not to feel the absurdity of his position, prudently withdrew.

A HINT TO THE LADIES.—A lady moving in the higher circles of society thus writes to us:—"It appears to me astonishing that at present, when the heroism of the Turks is a theme awakening the universal, the highest admiration, their national head dress 'the turban,' once so great a favourite with ladies in their fashionable assemblies, should not again be resumed by them. No coiffure can be more becoming, and no grunter, more deserved, or more acceptable compliment could be paid to the Turkish armies than to see their gallantry thus recognised by the fair sex of Great Britain."

OUR STATUTE BOOK.—At the close of last year our statute-book, commencing our enumeration from the 9th Henry III., contained 16,579 public general acts, 9,285 local and personal acts, and 14,268 private acts. The public general acts have been thus classified:—

Acts repealed	2,726
—virtually repealed	2,667
—obsolete	436

—of a merely local or personal application	2,173
—relating exclusively to Scotland	430

—relating exclusively to the Colonies	403
—relating, some to the United Kingdom generally, others exclusively to England, others to Great Britain, and some few to England and Ireland	2,509

TO MY SEGAR.

BY BARRY BRYKE.

Within my "wrapper," brown and swart,
Dusky roll of latent joy,
There is peace without alloy;
Peace thou sendest to my heart,
Worn with fretting, care, and toil;
And thy sweet breath makes me glad,
And tranquil like a spell of art.

Like the soft and plaintive moan
Of music's clearest minor tone;
Like the grace which clothes the farm
Of some statue, growing warm;
Like the spiritual gaze
Of seraf eyes, down through the haze—
The rich haze that lingers longest,
With light of mingled gray and gold,
Where that "spell of art" is strongest,
In the galleries faneled and old.

Sad thine aspect is, and grave—
No gay colours make thee brave,
Little promise gavest thou,

When I took thee from the case,
Of the wondrous balm which now
Flings a glory o'er the place.

Sweetly modest is thy form,
But thy fragrance—oh, how warm,
How deftly winsome, how—but vain—
Feeble is the loftiest strain,
Thy beneficence to tell:
Dear Segar! I love thee well.

Not in tones from sage's pen;
Not in "lives" of greatest men;
Not in histories old and rare;
Not in essays formal, square,
Have found such wisdom pure,
As thou teachest—for be sure,
Their best teachings are like thine,

Shown through smoke of allegory,
The true way, since lips divine
Spoke in parables, thy story.

Dear Segar! how much I owe thee,
Since a boy I learned to know thee;
Though thou play'd'st me then a trick,
Left me "most comely sick;"
Yet I will not much complain,
As thou canst not do't again.
Many a head-ache hast thou cured;
Many a grief with me endured;
Many a struggling fear hast banished,
Care before thy glow hath vanished;
Thou hast solved me many a doubt—
Stop—ah, poor Segar! 'tis out.

Law Intelligence.

INSOLVENT DEBTORS' COURT.

(Before Mr. Commissioner Murphy.)

IN RE ANN SYROCA.—This insolvent, a domestic servant in Eaton-place, applied under the Protection Act. Mr. Sargood, who supported the insolvent, said it was a lamentable case, and he did not wonder she was unprotected. In 1845 some person induced her to take two shares in the Wheal Sophia Lead and Copper Mining Company, and she had paid out of her wages £29 12s. without any advantage. There were further calls to £9 10s., and some person for machinery had sued her as a shareholder for £35 10s. Mr. Miller, of Gray's-inn-place, who represented the company, was the solicitor who had sued the unfortunate young woman. An offer of £6 was made, all she had, and refused, and she was compelled to petition under the Protection Act. The learned counsel made some strong remarks on the case. Mr. Commissioner Murphy said it was a case for protection. He concurred with the learned counsel. The 8th of November was appointed for the final order.

MORE PIRACIES IN THE MEDITERRANEAN.

Under date 20th June, a letter to the Portofoglio, from the Dardanelles, says:—

"On the 23rd inst., the captain of a French transport, from Marseilles, loaded with provisions for the army, deposed as follows, in the consulate:—In the Archipelago he had been assailed by pirates. These bandits, 25 to 30 in number, boarded her, pistols in hand and their swords in their mouths, and robbed her of as much provisions as their boat would contain.

"Not satisfied with this booty, they robbed the captain and crew of their property, not leaving more than the clothes they wore, and stripping the captain of all the money he had.

"Other French captains add that the Greeks scour the seas even to the waters of Alexandria, and have even been seen in the Arabian Gulf.

"Other letters of the 4th, from Tunis yesterday, report the following:—

"Captain Lisano, of the Maltese barque Helen, that reached from Malta, reports to the consul that between Capo Bon and Kerkennah he found a Greek pirate threatening the Sardinian brig Antionetta, and his boat was launched to board. Captain Lisano, whose vessel is large, resorted to a stratagem to intimidate the pirates. He hoisted a pennant, and ran out 'Quakers,' placing his men as if to man them, and then turned his head towards the suspected vessel, which immediately hoisted in her boat and made off. The pirate seemed to be full of men, having about 100 on board.

"On the strength of this report, the French steamer Sontello, on station here, got up her fires and went in search of the pirate, but returned to port shortly after, without having succeeded in the object of her search."—Malta Mail, July 7.

SINGULAR LAUNCH.—A small iron screw-steamer was launched from Mr. William Pitcher's ship-building yard, at Northfleet, on Saturday last. She was fully rigged and equipped preparatory to launching, and not only had her engines fitted, but the steam up, so that within five minutes from the time of her leaving the ways, she was enabled to start off upon her trial trip. She is intended for Australia, and having been launched in a somewhat novel manner, without elabors or fixtures of any kind upon her bottom, she will not require to be taken into dry dock, but will be ready to take her departure for the colonies in the course of the present week, as she has nothing but her cargo and sea stores to take on board. She is the property of three gentlemen, and is called "Les Trois Amis." She is represented to be the smallest steam-vessel that will ever yet have attempted a voyage to the Antipodes.

WATER POISONED

BY LEADEN
PIPES.

"The above engraving represents accurately a section of a leaden pipe, which was employed for a short time in conveying water from a well on the grounds of Mr. Dick, of Donchurch, Isle of Wight. The original section of pipe is 2 1/2 in. long, 2 1/2 in. diameter, and 5-16 in. thick. A great part of the internal surface is corroded by the action of the water; but, as shown in the drawing, four deep excavations have been made, and another is shaded out of view by the manner in which the section of the pipe has been cut. The water has cut three deep pits almost through the pipe, and not only upon the portion which we have illustrated, but has formed similar chasms throughout the entire length."—Expositor.

N.B.—The corrosive water of the Isle of Wight has no effect on Gutta Percha Tubing. See Testimonial
below:—

DURABILITY OF GUTTA PERCHA TUBING.

Many inquiries having been made as to the durability of Gutta Percha Tubing, the Gutta Percha Company have pleasure in giving publicity to the following letter from SIR RAYMOND JARVIS, Ventnor, Isle of Wight.

(Second Testimonial.)

March 10th, 1852.

"In reply to your letter received this morning, respecting the Gutta Percha Tubing for pump service, I can state, with much satisfaction, it answers perfectly. Many builders and other persons have lately examined it, and there is not the least apparent difference since the first laying down, now several years; and I am informed that it is to be adopted generally in the houses that are being erected here."

CAUTION.

MESSRS. ALLSOPP and SONS find it necessary to caution the Public, and especially Shippers of their Ales to the Colonies, against Frauds committed by parties in selling spurious Ales for those of Messrs. Allsopp and Sons.

Messrs. ALLSOPP and SONS have felt compelled by the extent to which this dishonest practice has been carried, to proceed in several cases by obtaining injunctions from the Court of Chancery, and have ultimately been driven to prosecute civilly for the commission of this offence. They beg to call attention to the Case of THE QUEEN v. GRAY and GOSLIN, in which LORD CAMPBELL, sentenced the parties charged to "Twelve Months' Imprisonment, with Hard Labour."—"Vide 'Times' and 'Morning Advertiser' of the 18th May.

TO PROFESSOR HOLLOWAY.

Sir,—I suffered for a considerable period from a severe attack of Erysipelas, which at length settled in my leg, and resisted all medical treatment. My sufferings were very great, and I quite despaired of any permanent amendment, when I was advised to have recourse to your Ointment and Pills. I did so without delay, and am happy to say the result was eminently successful, for they effected a radical cure of my leg, and restored me to the enjoyment of health. I shall ever speak with the utmost confidence of your medicines, and have recommended them to others in this neighbourhood similarly afflicted, who derived equal benefit.

I am, Sir, your obliged and faithful Servant,
(Signed) ELIZABETH YATES.

THE FIELD OF WAR.

OUR WOODEN WALLS.

THE BALTIC FLEET.

A JACK TAR IN ACTION.

(From the Boston and Louth Guardian and Lincolnshire Advertiser.)

We have been favoured with permission to publish the following letter, addressed by one of our seamen now serving in the Baltic fleet, to his wife, who is resident in this neighbourhood:

H.M.S.

HANGO ROADS, May 22, 1854.

My dear wife,—Having just come safe out of action for the first time, I cannot better relieve my mind than by writing to you, for whilst I thank God for all His mercies, I seem to want some nearer friend than those around me (who are full of merriment and high spirits) to open my mind to. On the morning of the — May, whilst cruising about the mouth of the Gulf of Finland, we signalled a fishing-smack, which at first tried to get away from us, but our captain sent a boat's crew to bring her to, which they speedily did. There were only two men in her, and the captain had them some time on the quarter-deck, and it was quickly reported that these men were to pilot us up their own river. Sure enough we soon tacked about, and steered up a narrow creek, a boat's crew being a-head, sounding every yard, for fear of getting aground. We were accompanied by the —, of — guns. At night, just as we were about to let go the anchor, and the boat's crew had been called on board, the enemy opened fire from a thick wood and some sand banks, which were close to the water's edge. Several in the boat were wounded, and they put back to the ships. Still we could not see our enemies, nor the exact strength of their position, so we sent a regular shower of shot and shell amongst the brushwood, and we heard nothing more that night.

Next morning early we weighed anchor. We expected a salute from the enemy every moment, as we could perceive on the banks mounds had been thrown up and masked batteries, as if our visit had been expected. At about five o'clock a.m., a battery opened fire on us, and when the smoke cleared away we could see the enemy; there appeared to be some hundreds of them on the hill close to the batteries. We sent a broadside of shot and shell amongst them, and kept on our course. They stood to their guns well, though no doubt we did great execution. The firing was kept up briskly, and rifle balls dropped amongst us or whistled past us like hail. It was really wonderful so little damage was done. The bullets cut the rigging, and went clean through the ship's side, but God Almighty had our lives in His keeping. I don't think there was a man aboard that knew what fear was. Two of our men were killed, and a few wounded; of course they were soon cleared away below. We still kept up the river and were followed on the banks by sharpshooters, who gave us a volley from the woods every now and then, and we scattered shells amongst them whenever we had a chance of doing execution. By-and-by we touched the ground, and it was then time to think of Hango Roads again. One of the batteries at that time again opened fire on us, but we soon silenced it, and having cut out and taken in tow a Russian barque, we steamed away with her. In going down the river a small battery again opened fire, and wounded one of our men, whereupon the captain ordered out a boat's crew to go ashore and take the guns. Every man on board volunteered, so the captain picked a crew, and I was sent ashore with the marines. There were regular troops on the bank who fired on us as we pulled to land, but the broadsides of the —, what with the shell and what with the smoke, covered our landing. We dispersed at a few hundred yards distance from the beach to keep the coast clear whilst the boat's crew made prizes of the guns. The enemy had the advantage of the wood, and also knowing the country well, and a troop of them showed in advance. We were ordered to fire. I took steady aim, and fired on my man at about 60 yards. He fell like a stone. At the same time a broadside from the — went in amongst the trees, and the enemy disappeared, we could scarce tell how. I felt as though I must go up to him, to see whether he was dead or alive. He lay quite still, and I was more afraid of him lying so than when he stood facing me a few minutes before. It's a strange feeling to come over you all at once that you have killed a man. He had unbuttoned his jacket, and was pressing his hand over the front of his chest where the wound was. He breathed hard, and the blood poured from the wound and also from his mouth every breath he took. His face was white as death, and his eyes looked so big and bright as he turned them and stared at me—I shall never forget it. He was a fine young fellow, not more than five and twenty. I went down on my knees beside him, and my breast was so full, as though my own heart would burst. He had a real English face, and did not look like an enemy. What I felt I never can tell, but if my life would have saved his, I believe I should have given it. I laid his head on my knee, and he grasped hold of my hand and tried to speak, but his voice was gone. I could not tell a word he said, and every time he tried to speak the blood poured out on, I knew it would soon be over. I am not ashamed to say that I was worse than he, for he never shed a tear, and I couldn't help it. His eyes were closing when a gun was fired from the — to order us aboard, and that roused him. He pointed to the beach, where the boat was just pushing off with the guns which we had taken, and where our marines were waiting to man the second boat, and then he pointed to the wood where the enemy was concealed—poor fellow, he little thought how I had shot him down. I was wondering how I could leave him to die and no one near him, when he had a something like a convulsion for a moment, and then his face rolled over, and without a sigh he was gone. I trust the Almighty has received his soul. I laid his head gently down on the grass and left him. It seemed so strange when I looked at him for the last time. I somehow thought of everything I had heard about the Turks and the Russians, and the rest of them,—but all that seemed so far off, and the dead man so near! When we rejoined the ship, we saw eight or ten of the artillery troop come out of the wood and carry the body away, with several others lying on the bank. . . . I hope you will write to me as soon as you get this, if you have not written before. Don't think that I am at all discouraged from this letter. I am as determined as ever, with God's help, to stand by my Queen and country,—for this I know is my duty. Please let — see this letter, as I have not time to write to him by this mail according to promise.—Your affectionate husband.

A Sheffield youth engaged in the Baltic fleet writes:—"We are lying in the mouth of the harbour of Cronstadt. I think the Russian shipping and fortifications are superior to ours, but they are not game; they dare not come out. If we had water enough, we would soon show them what Britons are made of. I belong to the 'saucy Arrogant,' and we are not afraid of meeting the largest line-of-battle ship the Russians can bring out, from a 74 to 120-gun ship. We have only 47 guns, and our captain is as daring as he is brave, and we know it; and he has got the same opinion of our ship's company."—Sheffield Examiner.

SOLDIERS' WIVES AND FAMILIES.

CENTRAL ASSOCIATION IN AID OF THE WIVES AND FAMILIES, WIDOWS AND ORPHANS, OF SOLDIERS ORDERED TO THE EAST.—14th July, 1854.—To the Editor of "THE FIELD." Sir,—May I request that you will be kind enough to insert the following letter from the officer commanding the depot of the sixth or Enniskilling Dragoons—Your most obedient servant,

H. C. POWYS,
Major 60th Royal Rifles, Hon. secretary.

CANTERBURY BARRACKS, July 13th, 1854.

Sir,—I have the honour to acknowledge, with many thanks, the receipt of your memorandum, detailing the amount of the donations granted by the Association, of which you are the Honorary Secretary, to the widows and orphans of the five non-commissioned officers and men of the Enniskilling Dragoons who were lost in the "Europa" transport.

The ready and liberal aid thus sent to their relief, will, I trust, be effectual to alleviate in some degree their distress; and it marks, too, in a way for which I am most grateful, the deeply the committee of your admirable association appreciate the bravery and noble conduct of those who stood by the colonel to the last.

Sure I am, from private accounts which I have received, that had all on board done their duty as manfully as those who perished, there would not have been a life lost in the "Europa."

I have not failed to communicate to the officers commanding the regiment in Turkey the liberality with which the association have met my application for assistance to the surviving families by a grant of £415.

I am glad, too, to express my sense of the admirable arrangements of the society, by which the distribution of this sum has been entrusted to the persons best able to judge of the most judicious means of administering in each individual case to the permanent relief of the sufferers.—I have the honour to be, Sir, your obedient servant,

F. W. FITZ-GRAM, Captain,

Commanding Depot Enniskilling Dragoons.

Major Hon. H. L. Powys, Hon. Sec.
The wives and families of the soldiers belonging to the 46th Regiment, to the number of more than 200, have been sent from Windsor, preparatory to the marching of the service companies for the seat of war in the East. The day for the departure of the 46th has not yet been fixed.

MALTA.—The total amount of men and horses of the British and French armies that touched at Malta to Saturday, the 8th inst., from the 24th of March, are—

English Troops—31,473. Horses, 4,028. French Troops—46,272. Horses, 7,426. Forming a total of allied troops of 77,745 men.

68th LIGHT INFANTRY.—Malta, July 12.—The 68th Light Infantry, now quartered at Malta, have received orders to proceed to Gallipoli, to relieve the 4th Regt., which proceeds to Varna.

THE WAR IN EUROPE.

Marsal St. Arnaud arrived at Giurgevo on the 10th. The French, who fought at that place a day or two before, were commanded, it is said, by General Canrobert.

The Russian loss at Giurgevo, on the 7th and 8th, was 900 killed and 2,100 wounded.

Twelve thousand Turks were at Olenitz on the 9th, and commanded the road from that town to Giurgevo. Omar Pasha left the latter place for Olenitz on the 10th.

On the 10th instant, 3,000 Turkish troops crossed the Danube at the embouchure of the river Bede, and took the road to Babel, near Bucharest. They were the avant garde of a larger force.

At Turnu, on the 9th, Halam Pasha and Said Pasha effected a junction with Iskender Bey, and attacked the Russians under Generals Pagoff and Bebutoff, and defeated them with great loss. Both the Russian generals were wounded, Goeral Pagoff seriously, in the breast. The Russian regiment Krementshuk got between the cross-fire of two Russian batteries, and was nearly annihilated.

Kerim Pasha had defeated 12,000 Russians at Ardaghian. He captured six guns, and made 400 prisoners.

NAPOLEON I. WORSHIPPED IN A CHINESE TEMPLE.—SKETCHED BY AN EYE-WITNESS.

Thanks to a Missioary, we are enabled to present our readers with an illustration of the above extraordinary fact. A bust of the great Napoleon had by some means got into the possession of the Chinese, probably through a merchant Captain who had so extolled the invincibility of the Emperor that he was endowed by the Chinese with supernatural favours, and often being "gilded with refined gold," for so the bust appeared, became deified.

THE EMPEROR NAPOLEON ON BOARD H.M.S. HANNIBAL, AT CALAIS.

The Emperor's yacht was perceived to be coming out of harbour on the Friday, and so must-head flags were hoisted, there being too much wind for "dressing ship." Some little delay took place getting out of the harbour, in consequence of the great length of the yacht and the narrowness of the pier-entrance, which was literally choked with steam-vessels waiting to receive their living freights. Nearly an hour was lost, and, doubtless, very annoying to his Majesty. The difficulty was at length overcome, and at 2.18 p.m. the yacht was in the midst of the squadron, whereupon, at the first gun fired from the flag ship, the rest of the line-of-battle ships fired forth their thunders. The effect was very imposing. The yacht passed ahead of the commodore's ship, and the Emperor got into the barge. Unfortunately the wind rose considerably at this time, and it was conjectured that the barge could not pull up against wind and tide. For some 20 minutes the crew struggled manfully, but nature was against them, and human strength was no match for the roadside of Calais. The Emperor's barge dropt gradually to leeward and down upon the Fire Queen. Now was considerable excitement visible, for it was clear that the barge must be taken in tow; and the Fire Queen and the French corvette screw-steamer Corse contended for the honour. The Emperor himself hailed the Fire Queen with "Stop, stop," and General Baragney d'Almeida waved his hand to come alongside. Every preparation, therefore, was made to lower the gangway-ladder, and to land two ropes; however, to prevent any disappointment to the French corvette, the Fire Queen, Master Commander F. W. Paul, courteously gave way, and the Corse took the Emperor's barge in tow, being now at the least three-quarters of a mile to leeward. Great care was required to prevent the barge from being swamped; for a very heavy sea was on, and three ships' gigs were drifting away to the eastward, being utterly spent. At length the barge got abreast of H.M.S. Hannibal, and the barge was cast off and alongside, but many minutes elapsed before a favourable lull enabled the Emperor to leap from the barge to the gangway-ladder. This was accomplished with agility, and it evidently afforded his Majesty some amusement. Not so to his War Minister, the Marshal Vaillant, who was not equally nimble or up to the method of jumping at the fortunate moment. The Marshal missed his footing, and stepped upon old Neptune instead of the gangway ladder, and was immersed nearly to his middle. He received immediate assistance, and although very heavy, he was quickly hauled out of his perilous position. The remainder of the suite now got on board, and the Marshal, in his wet clothes, accompanied his Sovereign on board, as though nothing had happened.

ROYAL LONDON YACHT CLUB.

In consequence of the attractions offered by the Lowestoft and Harwich Regattas, there was a thin muster of the members of this Club at the meeting, held on Monday last, when, in the absence of the Commodore, the chair was taken by Mr. Crockerford. The minutes having been read and confirmed, 16 new members were elected, amongst whom are H. C. Okeover, Esq., yacht Talsman, 96 tons; T. C. Gash, Esq., yacht Spilster, 17 tons; and Geo. Cammell, Esq., yacht Nidgo, 10 tons. The accounts, as audited for the past half-year were read, which showed a balance in hand of £122 9s. 1d., besides £100 Consols. Several communications from the different yacht clubs were laid before the members, and some new candidates placed on the list for ballot at the August meeting.

THE PRINCE OF WALES YACHT CLUB, SQUADRON OF EVOLUTION.

The arrangements for this novel aquatic fête are now complete, and it is fixed to take place off Erith, on Friday, the 28th inst. The proceedings will be commenced at 1 o'clock p.m. by a sailing match, over a course nearly the whole of which will be in sight of the beautiful gardens of the Pier Hotel, which have been specially engaged for the occasion. There will be two prizes for the 1st and 2nd yacht. Then we shall have a review of the yachts in front of the gardens. The vessels will manoeuvre by signal from the flag-boat, which will be the Vixen, lent by Commodore Robinson, M.Y.C., for the occasion.

Prizes will be given to the 1st and 2nd yachts most smart in the evolutions. The crews are to be amateurs only.

The admission to the gardens will be 2s. 6d. for members and their friends only.

A dinner at five o'clock, including dessert and tea, and coffee afterwards, will be provided by Mr. Maciure, the proprietor, at 2s. 6d. each.

A military band is engaged, and dancing ad fresco will follow. The whole to conclude with a grand pyrotechnic display, the names of the winning yachts appearing in the fireworks.

The North Kent trains leave London-bridge for Erith at 12.10, 2.0, 3.40, 4.20, 4.50, 5.50.

The last trains up from Erith at 10 o'clock. Day tickets 3s. 1st class; 2s. 3d., second. If a large number of members assemble, a special train will be engaged to return at a later hour.

GRAND REGATTA AT LOWESTOFT ON TUESDAY LAST.

Despite the Russian war, "the gentlemen of England, who stay at home at ease," seem determined not to neglect yachting. And on Tuesday last, a point on the coast of Suffolk presented scenes, both ashore and afloat, that ought to make the heart of every loyal Briton leap for joy. The good town and harbour of Lowestoft were on that day an aspect of life and bustle far exceeding any of the former triumphs which grace their history. Yes, on Tuesday, the 18th day of July instant, the élite of the neighbouring counties, supported by thousands of the middle and lower classes, donned their best attire, turned their faces seaward, and rapidly advanced upon Lowestoft like an invading army, taking full possession of the place, and swarming in hot haste through the streets, down to the beach and piers, whence hundreds of the more adventurous chartered boats of all sizes and descriptions, and gaily attired as they were, valiantly courted the usual chivesteering with which Father Neptune is wont to favour landmen who, in a breeze, trust themselves on his heaving domain. And what, says the general reader, was the cause of all this excitement? why this gathering on the shores of the German Ocean? Was there a fleet of salt-laden Moscovite prizes approaching? Certainly not, but the annual "Lowestoft Grand Marine Regatta" was about to be commenced under the patronage of the Earl of Yarmouth, Lord Londesborough, Lord Alfred Paget, M.P., Sir Edward Gough, Bart., M.P., Sir Thomas M. Wilson, Bart., Sir P. Kelly, M.P., S. M. Peto, Esq., M.P., Robert Stephenson, Esq., M.P., D. Waddington, Esq., M.P., John C. Cobbold, Esq., M.P., and a large body of the several yacht clubs. That was the cause of the gathering, so let us subjoin the programme of the sports, with the entries for the various prizes, and the names of the winning yachts, in larger type than their rivals. "Honour to whom honour is due."

Such was the programme, the most attractive feature of which was, of course, the schooner-race, a contest in which the six vessels engaged were of 53, 103, 109, 114, 150, and 180 tons. This match alone well repaid the five hours journey from London, by train, and never, indeed, were the trains better patronised than on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. Cambridge, Norwich, and Yarmouth, and other celebrated places seemed bent on a holiday, and in witnessing Lowestoft regatta, they certainly had one to their heart's content. Eighteen hundred people paid a shilling each for entrance to the Pier. Here as on former occasions, the most fashionable of the company were assembled, elegantly-attired ladies forming a goodly proportion, who appeared exceedingly to enjoy the promenade, for which the pier is so well adapted, the refreshing sea breezes being a great relief from the heat of the sun, which would otherwise have been most oppressive. Suffolk may well be proud of the beauty she displayed on Tuesday. There are few places in England where improvement has made such rapid marches as in the town and harbour of Lowestoft, which but a few years since was but a mere fishing station, and rarely resorted to except under stress of weather, or some urgent necessity. Through the enterprise and unflinching perseverance of M. Peto, Esq., M.P., whose exertions have been ably seconded by other gentlemen of the neighbourhood, and the outlay of large sums of money, a new town, consisting of first-rate residences, with a very excellent hotel, "The Royal," under the management of Mr. S. Howett, has sprung into existence, and the harbour has been so far enlarged and deepened that vessels can seek refuge in it at all periods of the tide, and but for its existence great and melancholy would have been the loss of life on the eastern coast by shipwreck and storms, for some time past. If the commercial prospects of the place have been so rapidly advanced, not less so have been the aquatic amusements provided for the visitors to this interesting locality. From year to year the amount of prizes to be contended for has been increased so as to ensure the attendance of vessels of the first-class, without any restrictions as to a particular club, and perfectly free from embarrassing conditions. By Monday evening the following yachts had reached Lowestoft:—Schooners: Acorn, Aquiline, Novice, Beatrix, Georgiana, Mayfly, Fancy, Titania, and Shark, nine in all. Cutters: Maud, Kitten, Frolic, Phantom, Amazon, Mischief, Avalon, Ino, Vampire, Thought, Vixen, Will o' the Wisp, Waverley, and a large number of smaller craft, of lateen and other rigs. In the roads, at some distance below the port, lay H.M.S. Hornet, 16, bound to the Baltic, and waiting for a North Sea Pilot, while many merchant vessels were continually passing, arriving, or departing; and here and there a steamer, among which the Aquila was pre-eminent, added variety to the scene. Mr. Peto arrived at the Royal Hotel, by the ten o'clock train, and entertained at supper Commodore Goodson, R.L.Y.C., Mr. Ballantyne, Mr. Thomas, Mr. T. G. Dutton, Mr. T. H. Wilson, and Mr. William Knight (of "The Field"). After supper the party was enlarged by the arrival of Vice-Commodore Aredeckne, R.H.Y.C., Captain Thelluson, Mr. Waddington, M.P., Mr. Bidder, Mr. Monk, and Mr. Yongg. The Royal Hotel stands second to none on the coast; its cuisine is unexceptionable, and the proprietor is celebrated for good wine which needs no bush. Every bed in every hotel and inn in the place was engaged (many beds at "The Royal" are already taken for the regatta of 1855) and we heard that some individuals, with a spirit that would do honour to "Bashi Bazouks," bivouacked on the common with the green turf for their only pillow and a furze bush or two, "convenient," for certain. So that as it may, all difficulties were borne with good humour, the night of Monday passed away, and at dawn on Tuesday, an expected gale having failed to blow home, a steady whole-sail breeze at S. R. set in, there was a glorious sunrise, and nearly the whole of the town was up with the lark, and gigs, carts, fays, and carriages of all descriptions dashed into the place as if Lowestoft were about to undergo a contested election.

From an early hour yachts, hitherto snugly ensconced in the harbour, were seen passing out between the piers, some of them in tow of a most indefatigable tug, that seemed to move here, there, and everywhere, by magic, whenever wanted. By and by the six schooners—the observed of all observers—were descried anchored in line abreast near the schooner-yacht Novice, Vice-Commodore Aredeckne, which had been kindly placed at the disposal of the committee by her liberal owner, and now dressed in all her signal-flags, rainbow fashion, was to be both starting-point and goal.

We never saw racing vessels placed in so true a line as were the schooners at Lowestoft on Tuesday. Their names have already been given in the programme above. The Acorn, 103, Mr. A. D. Wigsell, was entered, but did not complete the course, which was from moorings laid down abreast of the south pier to the northward, passing up to and through the Stanford Gat, thence to a station-vessel [bearing S. E.], about 15 miles at sea (the longest 15 miles we ever sailed), leaving her on the port side, and returning to the starting place by the Pakefield Gat, passing between the station vessel Novice, and the pier. Mr. Peto was the donor of the cup, a most superb prize, and he watched the contest from the deck of the Aquila, a new steamer, about to ply between Harwich and Rotterdam, and built by Henderson of Renfrew. In coming round from Glasgow she beat everything she fell in with, and on Tuesday when the log was hoisted she was going 13 knots.

We were favoured with an invitation on board the Aquila, whence the sketches of the match, which will appear in "The Field" next week, were taken by Messrs. T. G. Dutton and Mr. T. H. Wilson. The Aquila came out of harbour just as the schooners started, at 12h. 5m. Their stations in the line were Titania, Acorn, Shark, Georgiana, Mayfly, and Aquiline, the last being the farthest to seaward. No canvas was allowed to be hoisted till the starting gun was fired, and as soon as this was heard the sails seemed to ascend the masts as rapidly as the smoke from Novice's two-pounders. For an instant or two, none had a perceptible advantage, but at last Titania set an immensa flying-jib, and took the lead, followed by Shark, Mayfly next, and the Georgiana. The fine sailing of the Aquiline against vessels double her size astonished everybody. From the wind being at S. E., and the tug being moored in the wind's eye, the schooners had to beat out and run home,* and we may as well mention here that some of them stood rather too far on one tack, evidently expecting the wind to draw more easterly, which it would not, and consequently, having brought the mark vessel about the beam, they lost a little ground that others gained. Tack and tack, the gallant schooners stood seaward and it was soon seen that the time had come to spread. The difference in tonnage began to tell. The headmost yacht (Titania) was on the port tack, carrying no foretopsail, the second yacht (Shark) was under the same sail and on the same tack; the Mayfly tacked and passed under her stern, but the other yachts still kept their port-tacks aboard. In add to the scene, the Margaret joined the fleet, to try her rate of sailing, and to show how a cutter holds a better wind than a schooner.

* The beating began on passing the Stanford.

It would be tedious to record every tack, but the positions of the schooners every now and then furnished a fine subject for the painter. Now we had the Shark and the Aquiline, both on the port tack, and keeping close order, and more distant was the Acorn, all three heading towards the shore, while the Georgiana was standing off on the opposite tack. Then the steamer paddled away, and passed close to the Acorn (we cannot agree with the Morning Herald that she did not start); she had no foretop-sail, yet carried a swinging flying jib. And now we observed Titania, on port tack, cross the bows of Georgiana on starboard tack, and for some instants—as seen from the steamer—a collision was expected, and every one looked out for the Titania to give way, according to club law, but she passed clear and “all’s well that ends well.” The Shark, on the port tack, began to look like a winner, while Aquiline, Mayfly, and Titania on the starboard tack, were for some time making a nice little match of their own, Aquiline however having the best of the day; but Shark now took the second position, Titania and Aquiline having held the first and second honours up to this moment. The steamer had been judiciously kept somewhat distant from the racing yachts, but now as they seemed settling into their places, and could make longer boards with advantage, the steamer closed them, passing astern of the group, while all were on the starboard tack, and thus placed:—Shark and Aquiline had the lead and were abreast of each other, Mayfly came next to Aquiline, and in her wake, and astern of Mayfly were Georgiana, with Acorn last, these four formed in line a-head, while Titania was a-breast of Mayfly, as Aquiline was of Shark. The two forming one line, and four the other, and all close-hauled, presented a very pretty picture. The Aquiline, we repeat, achieved a grand success in maintaining her position against craft so much exceeding her in size. Shark ultimately took a decided lead, with Titania just to leeward of her, the Aquiline still making a good third. All were now carrying both topsails except Shark. By and by, Shark still leading, Titania held her ground admirably as second, and Georgiana became third, and Mayfly fourth. At 1.10 m., the log was hove on board the steamer and she was found to be going thirteen knots. And now at some distance from the schooners, the fifth in the order of sailing was seen to tack, a movement followed in a few minutes by the first and second. We here spoke the Imperial, the tug sent out to be anchored as a distance-boat, round which the schooners were to pass. Having seen the tug in her proper berth, and left all required instructions, Capt. Andrews, whose management of the regatta reflects the highest credit on his skill, and whose courtesy increases the claim he has on all yachting men, turned the steamer’s head towards the land, and again we closed the racing craft. Midway between the tug they had to round, and the racing craft themselves, we were no longer in doubt as to how the race was going. Shark still had the lead at 1.35 m., Titania being second, and Mayfly third, all on the port tack, and still under topsails. Soon the steamer passed Titania, almost within hail, her crew crouching under the weather bulwarks, and they returned the cheers with which the company in the Aquila greeted them. Shark and Mayfly were also cheered as we passed. And next we spoke H. M. screw-sloop Hornet, 16 guns, bound to the Baltic, and, as we have said above, waiting for a pilot. A jolly-boat was lowered from her stern-davits, and a young mid and two hands pulled alongside us to communicate with Capt. Andrews. Bound to join “Old Charley,” we could not but cheer the Hornet, and right lustily were our cheers responded to.

We quitted H. M. ship about three o’clock, just as the Shark was seen running down to her on her way in, and under a cloud of canvas, most admirably cut as well as set. Her enormous squaresail and topsail would have formed a fitting theme for a Murryat or a Cooper. To us, Titania seemed under-canvassed. The subject is the time they had rounded the tug in the offing. We also add the time at the goal, as more convenient here than giving it lower down.

The steamer now stood in for the shore through Pakefield Gut, followed by the schooners, which progressed most merrily, and here the scene ashore was one of the most extraordinary we ever witnessed. The beach and the piers were thronged by thousands upon thousands of people in holiday costume, and the brilliant sunshine falling upon whole battalions of parasols, produced a sparkling effect that was very droll. If a jack tar could have dropped upon such a scene at the instant of the anchor being let go, on his return from a foreign station, such a goodly array of the fair sex would have fairly turned his brain. The Isle of Wight was never honoured with such a crowd of visitors as Lowestoft rejoiced in on Tuesday. And the new villas that line the shore gave a finish to Lowestoft that is wanting at many of our leading watering places, while the red roofs of the old fashioned houses, and a few scattered steeples produce a contrast that makes the whole view very striking. The other matches were proceeding as the steamer ran in, and, mirabile dictu, Thought was seen to be beating Phantom. But of this in another place. On came the schooners, cheered by every crew and avoy crowd, and passing along the line of beach, now a living mosaic of fashion and beauty, they neared the goal where Novice’s guns duly announced their arrival.

The gunner on board that craft has no sincere. Go to what regatta you will, Novice always adds to its success by showing plenty of bunting and burning plenty of powder, while regatta-committees can speak of divers other operations carried on below, which would make a London alderman envious were we to enter into further detail. The Shark shortened sail immediately on rounding Novice, Titania began to take in her canvas before reaching the goal, an example followed by Mayfly. And so ended the schooner-match at Lowestoft, without any protest or disagreement—the cup given by Mr. Peto was fairly prized, fairly sailed for, and fairly won. Satisfaction beamed in the eye of everybody; the losers bowed to the fortune of war with equanimity, and if Lowestoft can but, year by year, offer such an attractive bill of fare as that of Tuesday last, our good friends at the Wight must, in sober earnest, look to their laurels, for “a match round the island” will find many a formidable though friendly rival in the course offered by the Stanford, Newcombe, Holme, and Pakefield. We cannot close these few notes of the schooner-match without a tribute to Captain Green, who so ably carried out the instructions of the committee, both in the rowing and sailing matches. Lowestoft is, indeed, fortunate in having such men within her walls as himself and Captain Andrews.

A PRIZE OF THIRTY SOVS. for yaws. Half a minute per foot allowed for difference of length. The following vessels started:—

Names.	Lengths.	Owner.
Queen Victoria	63	R. M. Bradbeer.
Eclipse	54	W. Hobbert.
Young Prince	48	S. Cupps
Mosquito	45	N. Kilwick.
Reeswing	64	G. Tallop.
Royal Victoria	61

The course for this race was from the moorings laid down abreast of the new north pier head, round the Nowcombe, leaving all the buoys and light ship of that sand on the port side, thence to the starting place, passing between the pier and the schooner yacht Novice, anchored abreast of the south pier; three times round. They started at 1 o’clock, and a very good race took place between them. The following is the time:—

Names.	Time.
Royal Victoria	4 m. 31 s.
Queen Victoria	4 m. 35 s.

A PRIZE OF PLATE value 30 sovs. for yachts over 15 and not exceeding 45 tons. Three to start, or no race. Half a minute a ton allowed for difference of tonnage. The following vessels were started at 1.15 m. 45 sec.:—

Yachts.	Tons.	Owners.
Thought	28	R. Cooper, Esq.
Phantom	25	S. Lane, Esq.
Avator	35	Com. Goudson.
Maad	25	Capt. Andrews.

An exciting race ensued between the Thought and Phantom, but terminated in favour of the former, she reaching the termination of the course at 5 h. 33 m. 4 sec. We must mention that the Phantom started under the disadvantage of the leewardmost station; that she had a local hand or two on board, to whom was entrusted the hoisting and setting of her topsail, which certainly was not sent up in the smart style for which Phantom is distinguished. Down came the topsail again, for its gear had got foul of the gaff-end, and the peak-purchase was improperly let go. All this gave the Thought a chance. Fortune smiled upon her, and frowned on the Phantom, one of whose hands also fell overboard from the whisker, went right under the vessel, and received a blow from the rudder when rising to the surface. The Sea Nymph fortunately picked the hand up, while the Phantom was rounding to, to do so; her owner, as all yachtsmen know, being the last man to delay an instant in cases of emergency, and the first to forget self in regard to the benefit of others. We cannot but mention that the men of the Sea Nymph were promptly rewarded by Mr. Lane. Phantom was also bothered by some yachts enquiring about too near her during the match. In the first round, Phantom was 4½ minutes astern of Thought, 3½ minutes in the second round, and 4 minutes in the third. We hope that two bouts, so well matched as Thought and Phantom, have yet to meet again on many a regatta course (Grimsby for instance), and “May we be there to see.”

Thought also had an accident. Her main-halliards parted. Is the Secret to be lengthened to meet Phantom and Thought?

A PRIZE OF PLATE of the value of 20 sovs. for yachts not exceeding 15 tons. Half a minute per mile allowed for difference of tonnage. The following were entered:—

Yachts.	Tons.	Owners.
Kitten	10	Mr. Harvey
Vampire	15	Mr. Wheeler
Sea Nymph	10	Mr. Solty
Waverley	15	Mr. Luens

The prize was gained by the Vampire.

In the evening the regatta dinner took place at the Royal Hotel at which Mr. Peto, M.P., took the chair, supported by the Earl of Albemarle, Mr. R. Stephenson, M.P., Mr. D. Waddington, M.P., and a large body of gentlemen.

At ten o’clock a grand display of fireworks took place on the esplanade in front of the Hotel. We shall refer at greater length to this excellent regatta, in our Sunday Edition.

BURNHAM REGATTA.

The revival of this regatta, which at one time formed a prominent feature amongst the Essex aquatics, took place on Wednesday, under the auspices of the members for the borough and a committee of eleven gentlemen. The weather in the early part of the day was showery, but towards the afternoon it cleared up, and caused a large attendance of visitors from Colchester, Cheltenham, and other places, to do honour to the revival. A very large number of boats were out upon the river, and the banks were well lined with spectators. The whole of the sport, under the able management of Mr. Brookings, the secretary, passed off in first rate style.

The following is a programme of the sport. It commenced with a match open to cutter-rigged boats, not exceeding twenty tons. First prize, ten guineas; second to receive a new suit of colours. The following were the entries:—

Vessels.	Tons.	Owner.
William and Hannah	18	Smith.
Vision	16	S. Martin.
Ada Jane	15	W. Lewis
Alpha	17	J. Sweeting.

The course selected was down the river as far as the Ness, returning round the station at Cricksea-ferry and back to the winning post. The vessels at the signal being given were all got under weigh and appeared pretty evenly matched as to speed, except the Alpha, whose chance was out at a very early period of the contest. The following is the time and order in which they came in:—

Vessel.	Time.
William and Hannah	2h. 55m. 0s.
Ada Jane	3h. 2m. 3s.
Vision	3h. 3m. 0s.

The William and Hannah took first prize; but on account of the Ada Jane fouling some flag-boats, the Vision was awarded the second.

The next race was for a silver cup, and a suit of colours for the second. The following entered:—

Vessel.	Tons.	Owners.
Lady Mildmay	13	W. Hawkins
Cocquette	14	J. Wheman
Ellen	12	F. Patmore
Tyro	13	P. Richmond

The vessels got under weigh, the Ellen taking the lead closely followed by the Cocquette and Tyro. A very close and spirited contest between the Ellen and Cocquette took place, which ended by the former winning by only 20 seconds. The following is the order and time in which they came in:—

Vessel.	Time.
Ellen	2h. 58m.
Cocquette	2h. 59m. 20s.
Tyro	3h. 55m.

The Lady Mildmay was not timed, her chance being out almost from the commencement.

The third race was also for a silver cup, the second to receive a new suit of colours. Five entries took place for this race. A very interesting contest took place for this cup, the principal competitors being the Crouch and the Hero. The Rambler was distanced by a considerable length of time, and its chance completely out. The following is the order and time of coming in.

Vessel.	Tons.	Time.
Crouch	13	3h. 38m.
Hero	12	5h. 55m.
Agnes	12	1h. 1m. 15s.
Eliza	10	4h. 8m.
Rambler	9	0h. 0m.

The fourth race was between six skiffs, sailing and rowing for a subscription purse which was won by Mr. Patmore.

In the rowing-matches the winners were Peter Richmond, four-oared boat; Kingsbury, two-oared boat; and W. Kemp, scullers boat.

A duck-hunt in which Candy of Burnham, obtained the reward of £1, he having managed to elude his pursuers during the specified 20 minutes, wound-up the aquatic portion of the sports.

A dinner was afterwards provided at the White Hart Inn, and about one hundred ladies and gentlemen sat down. Sir W. B. Smyth, Bart., M.P., took the chair. The usual loyal toasts having been disposed of, “Success to Burnham Regatta” was given and responded to by Mr. Hawkins, after which followed the healths of the Members for the Borough, Mr. Richardson, the vice-chairman, and “The Ladies.” A grand display of fireworks and a ball, wound up a day’s amusement, which seemed to have been highly enjoyed by all, and which we trust will be as successful in future years as it has been this.

DUBLIN BAY REGATTA.

DUBLIN, Wednesday.—The regatta commenced at Kings-town yesterday. The weather was very rough—not too much so for the larger craft. Several of the race flags engaged were upset trying to pull the course prescribed for them.

The first sailing-match was for a piece of plate, presented by the Royal St. George Yacht Club, open to all yachts belonging to members of Royal Yacht Clubs—a time race Entrance, £2.

The following yachts started:—

Bonita, 20 tons, Thomas Barnes, R.N.V.C. Flag.
Wild Fire, 30 tons, E. I. Thynne, R.N.V.C.
Cymba, 55 tons, J. M. Rowan, R.N.V.C.
Cynthia, 50 tons, H. Rowe, Jun., R.N.V.C.

The Cynthia and Wild Fire both met with accidents, and gave up the race, leaving the contest to be carried on between the Bonita and Cymba, which, after a splendid run, came in as under:—

Yachts.	h.	m.	s.
Cymba	3	38	7
Bonita	4	55

The Cymba was accordingly declared the winner of the race.

The next race was for a Purse of Forty Sovereigns, presented by the Dublin and Kingstown Railway Company, open to all yachts belonging to members of the Royal Yacht Clubs, of 35 tons and under. A time race. Entrance £2.

The following vessels started at twelve o’clock:—

Coralie, 35 tons, A. E. Byrne, R.N.V.C.
Meteor, 33 tons, J. Kennedy, R.N.V.C.
Plingal, 17 tons, F. Gowen, R.N.V.C.
Syren, 19 tons, W. Verrier, R.N.V.C.
Champion, 30 tons, R. D. Kane, R.N.V.C.

The following are the places of the first three yachts:—

Yachts.	h.	m.	s.
Coralie	3	40	62
Meteor	4	1	40
Champion	4	16	28

The third and last sailing match was for a prize of £10, presented by the Dublin and Kingstown Railway Company.

The following boats started:—

Sybil, 8 tons, F. Walker Rodgers.
Torment, 5 tons, John Toddhunter.
Triant, 3½ tons, J. A. Clarke.

This race was won by the Sybil after a lively run, the Torment taking the second place.

ROWING MATCHES.

The first match was for a purse of 25 sovereigns, for four-oared gigs, to be pulled and steered by gentlemen; a time race; entrance £1 5s. The following boats were entered for this race:—

Una..... Fitzwilliam Club	Flag, Union Jack
Uda..... University Club.....	Tricolour, red, white and blue
Stella..... Brunswick Club.....	Chrysom white centre
Wasp..... Dublin Rowing Club.....	Blue Peter
Pomona..... University Club.....

This race, which was waited for with considerable interest, was not as well contested as it might have been.

FIRST TIE.—The Wasp at once took the lead, and never gave her rivals a chance up the close, when she won by several lengths. The Pomona, soon after passing the first flag boat, capsized, and had to be towed home.

SECOND TIE.—Between the Uda (University Club) and Stella (Brunswick Club). Stella had it all her own way, and was declared the winner.

THIRD TIE.—The deciding tie, which lay between the Wasp and Stella, took place at a late hour of the evening, the gentlemen on both sides being unwilling to encounter the risk of a ducking, which was rendered highly probable by the roughness of the weather. The upshot of the matter was that the Wasp (Dublin Rowing Club) started alone, and was capsized at the mouth of the harbour, her crew being rewarded by a capital douche, but bappily nothing worse, for their ventures experienced. The final tie of this race will be decided today.

YACHT “SUSAN.”—The Earl of Hardwicke left town for Dover, to embark on board his lordship’s yacht the Susan, at anchor in the Downs, to witness the embarkation of the French troops for the Baltic.

BERLIN, July 12.—Lord Euston arrived here, and passed a couple of days, having left his yacht at Stettin. His Lordship, with Lord Lichfield, has been close to Cronstadt, and has been usefully employed in visiting the shallows on the east coast.

DUBLIN BAY.—The Glitana schooner yacht, 180 tons, the property of Mr. Ward Jackson, of Hartlepool, has arrived at Kingstown, direct from Copenhagen, after a lengthened cruise in the Baltic.

ECCENTRIC-SHEAVEN HOLDFAST.—Sir,—A good deal of attention has been lately directed in the nautical world, to the use of an “eccentric-sheaved” holdfast, as a substitute for the cleat used for the running rigging of sailing boats. I believe that a Mr. Saxby has patented the plan; but to show that the idea is by no means new, I beg to refer your readers to the idea in the “Mechanic’s Magazine” for October 3, 1846, No. 1208 of the “Mechanic’s Magazine” where a full description of the eccentric cleat will be found with a drawing annexed.—Your obedient servant, J. M.

PASSAGE OF THE FRENCH ALLIED TROOPS THROUGH A SWOLLEN AND RAPID STREAM IN THE DOBRUDSCHA BY MEANS OF A STRONG ROPE, AND THE MEN PROCEEDING ARM IN ARM. ONLY TWO MEN WERE LOST.

ROYAL HARWICH YACHT CLUB REGATTA.

On Saturday the 15th instant, the annual Regatta of the Royal Harwich Yacht Club was held in and off the harbour of Harwich. The Commodore of the Club, Sir Charles Ibbetson, Bart., is unfortunately at the present moment without a yacht, having some time since parted with the Anacanda, 100 tons; but the Novice, 82 tons, Vice-Commodore Arcedekne, R.N.Y.C., and the Aquiline, Rear-Commodore Cardinall, R.N.Y.C., were both in port during the contest, and indeed for several days prior to the Regatta coming off; and the Novice became on Saturday, through the courteous attention of the Vice-Commodore, "head-quarters" during the match, where the Committee assembled, and where, as on former occasions, they were received with the most unbounded liberality. The tradesmen ashore scarcely liked Saturday as a Regatta Day; but the inhabitants of the neighbourhood poured into Harwich by thousands, and crowded steamers ran down from Ipswich, and the metropolitan train from Shoreditch added to the general muster. The celebrated hostelry "The Three Cups," was crammed during the breakfast, lunch, dinner, and supper hours, and Mr. Bull, the landlord, again gave that satisfaction which "the house" has given for a century past, and in our opinion will yet give. We advise any of our readers who may visit Harwich to go to "the Cups," and we guarantee their meeting with everything to their satisfaction.

The regatta was altogether most successful; it must not be measured by the mere races, now following, but by the enthusiastic promises of yachtsmen, made at the dinners as well as at the regatta, which now bind them to support the "lion rampant;" and seeing that the Harwich men so ardently desire to advance the aquatic interests of "The Eastern Coast," we are glad to know that, at last, London, Yarmouth, and Lowestoft will stand by Harwich. Amongst the yachts present were, we repeat, the Novice, Vice-Commodore Arcedekne; the Margaret, Mayfly, Osprey, Acorn, Aquiline, Georgiana, Violet, Kitten, Phantom, Mando, Thought, Vampire, Avalon, Enette, Little Duchess, Vixen, Fawn, Mischief, Sapphire, Sea Nymph, Will o' the Wisp, and Amazon. The various yacht matches excited the greatest interest, and in addition there were several rowing matches, with, as in former years, land sports in abundance.

The various officers of the Club exerted themselves to the utmost, and gave the greatest satisfaction. We may, at once, state that this is one of the best regattas that has taken place at this port, and that the members of the Club will be present in their yachts, at Lowestoft Regatta, on Tuesday next.

In the evening, the members dined together at the Cups Tavern, the Vice-commodore in the chair, when after the usual loyal and constitutional toasts had been duly honoured, the chairman gave, to the Royal Harwich Yacht Club, and in doing so, said he trusted that it would go on and continue to prosper, and he had no doubt, that it would ere long take its stand with the first yacht clubs of the kingdom.

Amongst those present on board the Novice, we observed, C. Wheeler, Esq., G. Hobson, Esq., G. C. Craigie, Esq., G. Halfhide, Esq., A. Barlow, Esq., W. S. Foster, Esq., C. Smart, Esq., P. Van De Wall, Esq., A. Cobbold, Esq., R. Stevens, Esq., and Colonel Adair; and the Officers of the East Suffolk Artillery.

LIVERPOOL YACHT CLUB.

The second club sailing match of the Liverpool Yacht Club took place on Wednesday, the course being from the flag-ship at Birkenhead, round the North Magazine, thence round Anker's Buoy, which is half-way between the Rock Light and the Crosby Ship, at 12 o'clock. The following yachts were at their station:—

1. Truant	sloop	4 tons	Commodore.
2. Liron	cutter	8 "	H. C. Tomlinson, Esq.
3. Kelpie	sloop	4 "	Vice-Commodore.
4. Priestess	cutter	13 "	Rear-Commodore.
5. Challenge	sloop	8 "	A. Bower, Esq.
6. Electric	cutter	8 "	Thos. Wilkinson, Esq.
7. Spirit	sloop	4 "	Thos. Wilkinson, Esq.

The signal gun being given they all got well away with the exception of the Truant, which was unfortunately capsized owing to the centre board being raised instead of lowered in its place; she was quickly righted, but not in sufficient time to admit her taking her place in the race. The Challenge took the lead to the magazine, which she rounded first, closely followed by the others; from this point they had to beat to the buoy, and the breeze having freshened told well on the larger craft. Challenge and Electric fought hard for first place, but Priestess being more powerful in the sea-way headed them both, and was the first round for the run home, followed by the Challenge and Electric. Passing the Rock-light, the wind having died away, the Challenge again took the first place, which she held to the finish, gaining over minute on her competitor until the flag-ship was reached, the Yachts rounding as follows:—

	h.	m.	s.
Challenge	4	35	39
Electric	4	39	40
Priestess	4	45	0
Spirit	5	1	0
Kelpie	5	1	55

The Sirocco having carried away the jaws of her gaff had to give up the race early in the day. After the match, the prize, a silver tankard value £20, manufactured by Mr. Hunsburgh, was presented by the Commodore to Mr. Bower, who was congratulated by the members present on the success of his prettily little vessel.

IMPROVEMENTS IN SHIPS AND BOATS.

The experimental schooner yacht, "Incline Plane," 75 tons, constructed upon Lipscombe's new principle, was launched on the 15th inst., from Mr. Cunningham's yard, Southampton. Great expectations have been formed with regard to this schooner. She will be fitted out as rapidly as possible, and it is expected that in about three weeks she will be publicly tried at Southampton. A jolly-boat 13 feet long by 3½ feet wide, lately built upon the same principle, has astonished every one by the excellent qualities exhibited by her; as a row boat, she is remarkably stiff and buoyant, and when propelled by canvass alone, sails twice as fast as any other of her own size, and she easily out-sailed an 8-ton yacht, hitherto considered fast, that was tried against her. Mr. Lipscombe's models may be seen in London, a few doors west of Temple Bar, on the south side of the Strand.

WYVENHOE, ESSEX.—A Hartlepool Regatta, on Monday, the 11th, 10 tons, belonging to Mr. T. Harvey, shipbuilder, of this place, carried off the first prize of £20 with great clat. The distance sailed was nine miles. The Marmoset, 6½ tons, a new yacht, built for this regatta, unfortunately could not compete, having carried away her mast just before.

MILFORD HAVEN.—Regatta is fixed for Tuesday, August 1st.

DARTMOUTH.—The Dartmouth Annual Regatta is fixed for Tuesday, August 8th, when some first-rate sport is anticipated.

TORQUAY.—The Admiralty yacht, Vice Admiral Sir Thomas Cochrane, K.C.B., left on Tuesday for Portsmouth. The schooner Sylph arrived here on Sunday. The schooner Fancy, B. Hartopp, Esq., on a cruise to the Isle of Wight; The schooner Resolution, Duke of Rutland, arrived from Cowes. The Beatrice, L. Palk, Esq., M.P., is expected here on the 15th or 16th. The Eclipse, H. Pearson, Esq., arrived here on Wednesday evening. The Torbay Regatta will be held on Friday the 4th August.

ROYAL YACHT SQUADRON.—At the general meeting of the members, on Friday, a quorum could not be formed. The election of new members was, therefore, obliged to be adjourned.

STAINES REGATTA is fixed for Thursday, August 10th.

PRESTON REGATTA will be held August 10th and 11th.

MANCHESTER REGATTA will take place August 14th, 15th and 16th.

paid to the second boat in the race; but so far as this money is concerned, the yachts of the New York Yacht Club will not be placed. The committee will use their discretion as to the starting on the appointed day, but if once started to be a race, provided the distance is performed in eight hours. ILEX CLUB—PAIR OAR MATCH.

This race came off on Monday the 17th at half-past seven, when five boats started to row from Putney to Bammersmith, and came in thus:—

Butterfield and Turner (Club colours)	1
Woodcock and Thomas (Yellow)	2
Dobace and Iles (Red and Green)	3
Catts and Revel (Green)	4
Pearson and Adams (Blue)	5

Green took a decided lead, closely followed by blue and yellow and at the Star and Garter had their length clear, but opposite Messrs. Searle's the club colours overhaunched the leading boats, and the race was never after that in doubt. They held their position, and though yellow, who rowed pluckily and well, off the Crabtree seemed to shorten the distance between them, half-a-dozen strokes took the leaders awry, and they passed under Hammer-smith Bridge three lengths a-head. Red and green, who had been fouled accidentally twice, pulled a remarkably good third, considering the disparity of weight. The match was accompanied by the Club eight carrying the umpire, a Wandlo four, and many others, and for old-fashioned wherries was very fast. It is probable a randam will be rowed very shortly by this club, and such a match would be novel and exciting.

Two Greeks were shot on the 26th inst. for firing at some soldiers and officers walking in the vicinity of the camps. Another suffered a similar fate on the 27th; and on the 28th inst. six more Greeks were taken for firing on our artillery, and will be shot this morning. It appears that the Greeks lie in ambush and wait their opportunity. Two artillerymen and one woman who went to enjoy a walk have not been heard of these last three days.—Plymouth Mail.

The Bishop of London, Lord Carleton, and Lord Brougham followed in the same strain, after which the matter dropped.

Lord Lyttelton moved for certain papers connected with New Zealand, and expressed his opinion on the government of Sir George Grey.

The Duke of Newcastle defended the policy of Sir George Grey.

The returns were then ordered.

Some other business was despatched, and their Lordships adjourned.

COMMONS.—The House, in committee, resumed the consideration of the Bribery, &c. Bill, beginning at the 17th clause, which prescribes the mode in which the election officer, to be called "Auditor of Election Expenses," shall be appointed.

After this had been under discussion for five hours, the Committee agreed to an amendment, moved by Lord J. Russell, that the returning officer should, of his own authority, once in every year, appoint a fit and proper person to act as election officer.

The clause, thus amended (which was the first of a series containing a machinery adopted from Sir E. Kelly's bill), was carried, upon a division, by 153 to 71.

In the 21st clause, declaring the payment of any money for election expenses, except by or through the election officer, illegal, the avoidance of the election, as the consequence, was negatived, and the words were struck out.

After this clause had been carried on a division, the Chairman reported progress.

The Report of the Committee on the Stamp Acts was brought up and agreed to.

The Poor Law Commission Continuance (Ireland) Bill passed through committee.

The Metropolitan Sewers Bill was read a second time.

Several bills were read a third time and passed, and others were forwarded a stage.

Sir C. Wood obtained leave to bring in a bill to provide for an uniform form for Indian appointments, and for the exercise of certain powers by the Governor-General of India; and Mr. J. Fitzgerald, a bill for assimilating the taxation of the mines in Ireland with that of England.

The House adjourned until Monday.

LIVERPOOL JULY MEETING.

CONCLUSION OF THURSDAY'S RACES.—ADDITIONAL PARTICULARS.

THE CUR.
3 to 1 agst Hungerford
9 to 2 — Dr. O'Toole
9 to 2 — Type
5 to 1 — The Early Bird
5 to 1 — Kingstown
7 to 1 — Talford
30 to 1 — Ammonia

All got well off at the first signal. Ireland's Eye immediately took up the running, and on passing the stand Dr. O'Toole was second, Hungerford third, Talford fourth, early third fifth, well up—Ammonia, Jujube, Type, and Kingtown following in the order named. After rounding the top turn, Dr. O'Toole slipped away with a strong lead, Talford, Hungerford and Early Bird in hot pursuit in his wake—Jujube and Ammonia the next two. In going over the canal side of the course, Type and Kingtown were seen to improve their respective positions. Talford meanwhile began to fall to his effort, and soon after making the bottom turn, both he and Hungerford were manifestly out of the race. From this point Ammonia gained on Dr. O'Toole, and at the distance she caught him and deprived him of the lead. Type now came up; and, followed by Kingtown and the Doctor, she went vigorously to work to catch Ammonia, but, to the amazing joy of the holders, the almost friendless outsider achieved the victory easily by two lengths. Type winning the second money from Kingtown by three lengths, and the third beating the fourth by a head. Jujube and the Early Bird, close together, were fifth and sixth. Hungerford and Talford, beaten off, were the next two. Ireland's Eye pulled up a long way from home, and walked in.

RACING.

"On the green, green turf."

MR. EDITOR.—Liverpool has had its three days. The sport, on the whole, scarcely up to the mark, and the fields, us to numbers, decidedly shy. The great betting race of the meeting, the Cup, was carried off by an extreme outsider, upon whose chance no calculation had been made, and her name almost unheard in the ring; but whom, on her success, we may now style, as euphony is so much the fashion, the Aintree Ammonia. Such a windfall the betters round have not had for a long while; there being hardly a little bookmaker who has not netted his £100 on the race. As to the staunch backers of the favourites, hartshorn and sulks could scarcely recover them from the stupor of amazement into which they were thrown. My choice with a start was Heapy, but John Scott had another most efficient representative in his stable, and Heapy was reserved to do good service on some future day. Writing a week before the races came off renders the attempt to select the winners no easy task; but, as I promised to let you have my notions of Newton, Stamford, and Nottingham, let me at once proceed, without unnecessary verbiage. When wrong, I am not ashamed to own it; when right, I sing no psalm.

Newton stands first on the list.

For the TRIAL HANDICAP, should he start, my choice would be Indor, but as that is very problematical, I will stand on Patience and the General.

The other rich sweepstake of 200 sovs will, I fancy, be placed to the credit of the Duke of Bedford by the aid of his Alcyon.

For the 100 sovs SWEEPSTAKE over the new mile, the rude Boer may renew his Ascot contest with "Gentleman" Pelham, and probably with the same result.

On the Wednesday, another Sweepstakes of 50 sovs would seem to hold out encouragement to Naïvement.

For the STAMFORD ST. LEGEN, my choice is Weathercock. The GOLD CUP to the representative of Lord Exeter's stable.

For the KETTON STAKES, mile and three quarters, for three year olds, I confide in Phacou.

Nottingham Meeting commences on Thursday. In the RONIN HOOD STAKES, Sylvia, Lady Alicia, and the Epirus Filly, may chance to pay their respects to the judge, in the order I have named them.

For the NOTTINGHAMSHIRE HANDICAP, with its 25 acceptances, Jacqueline shall be my selection, with Cleveland for her attendant. For the off-chance Whalebone should not be overlooked.

SHENWOOD HANDICAP. Freedom or the Surveyor.

CHESTERFIELD HANDICAP. Knight of St. George.

THE CASTLE HANDICAP. Domino.

And for the BUNNEY PARK STAKES Katerfelto ought to be first and Ethelwald second. Yours, TONY PEEPS.

Lowther, Lord Maidstone, General Peel, and W. Wigram. The accounts for the past year were presented and passed. Ulster was sold on Thursday last, and has left Robert's for Wilkins's stables at Aintree.

PROVINCIAL.

DONCASTER.—At the Wentbridge petty sessions, held on Monday, Mr. George Greaves, of Elmsall-hall, presiding, William Stone, gamekeeper in the service of the Rev. T. Cator, of Skelbrooke-hall, was charged, at the instance of the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, with having wantonly tortured a cat. From the evidence it appeared that game-preserving was so rigorously carried on over the Skelbrooke estate, that it had become almost impossible to keep a cat on any of the farms in the neighbourhood. No sooner did an animal of this class wander a few yards from her master's homestead than she was ruthlessly shot down by the guns of Mr. Cator's keepers. This had been going on for some months past, and the felino race promised to become well nigh extinct in the district, when, on the evening of the 6th ultimo, Mr. Kitchen, a respectable farmer, while walking within a few yards of his own house, was startled by the report of a gun a few yards in advance of him. Looking over an adjoining fence, he saw his own cat wounded and crawling towards the hedge, the defendant standing near her and reloading his gun. Mr. Kitchen picked up the animal, and was in the act of conveying it home, when the defendant followed, and with menaces and by force took the cat from him. The defendant then whirled it round over his head, and, after striking it against his foot several times, threw it on the ground and trod upon it, exclaiming, at the same time, that he was prepared to serve in the same manner every other cat that wandered from its own doordstead. Mr. Forster, who appeared for the prosecution, informed the bench that the cat, when shot, was almost in a public road, and at least half a mile from the nearest game preserve. He hoped the bench would bear in mind the circumstances under which the cruelty took place, and the fact that with a person of less mild disposition than the owner of the cat had proved, the most dreadful consequences might have followed the keeper's conduct. In defence, Stone urged that he considered a cat a wild animal, and that having been once attacked by such a creature, he felt himself justified in destroying it. After a few minutes' consultation, the bench said they were unanimous in considering the charge of cruelty made out, and as the case presented some very bad features, the highest penalty under the act, viz., £5 and costs, would be inflicted, with two months' imprisonment in default of payment. An application by Mr. W. E. Smith, solicitor, of Doncaster, on behalf of the owner of the cat, for compensation, under the 4th section of the Act, was granted, and the defendant was ordered to pay £2 in addition to the penalty. The Rev. Mr. Cator, who is a magistrate of the district, occupied a seat on the bench during the hearing of the case, and more than once interrupted Mr. Forster in his opening observations. The reverend gentleman declared his intention of paying the fine and costs for the delinquent.

DUBLIN.—The final meeting of the ironmasters of this district for the current quarter was held here on Saturday afternoon, when there was a general disposition to concur in the prices already declared.

POULTRY.

The progress of the incubation of the chicken in the natural way, is a subject curious and interesting. The hen has scarcely set on the egg twelve hours before some liniment of the head and body of the chicken appear. The heart may be seen to beat at the end of the second day; it has, at that time, somewhat the form of a horse-shoe, but no blood yet appears.

At the end of two days, two vesicles of blood are to be distinguished, the pulsation of which is very visible; one of them is the left ventricle, and the other the great artery.

At the fiftieth hour, the navel of the heart appears, resembling a nose folded down upon itself. The beating of the heart is first observed in the navel, and afterwards in the ventricle.

At the end of seventy hours the wings are distinguishable; and on the head two hubbles are seen for the brain, one for the bill, and two others for the fore and hind part of the head.

Towards the end of the fourth day, the two auricles, already visible, draw nearer to the heart than before. The liver appears towards the fifth day.

At the end of a hundred and twenty-one hours, the first voluntary motion is observed.

At the end of seven hours more, the lungs and stomach become visible; and four hours after this the intestines, the loins, and the upper jaw.

At the hundred and forty-fourth hour, two ventricles are visible, and two drops of blood instead of the single one which was seen before.

The seventeenth day the brain begins to have some consistency.

At the hundred and ninetieth hour of incubation, the bill opens, and the flesh appears on the breast; in four hours more the breast bone is seen; and in six hours after this, the ribs appear forming from the back, and the bill is very visible, as well as the gall-bladder. The bill becomes green at the end of the two hundred and thirty-six hours; and if the chicken be taken out of its covering, it evidently moves itself. The feathers begin to shoot out towards the two hundred and fortieth hour, and the skull becomes gritty.

At the two hundred and sixty-fourth hour the eyes appear.

At the two hundred and eighty-eighth, the ribs are perfect.

At the three hundred and thirty-first, the spleen draws over the stomach and the lungs to the chest.

At the end of three hundred and fifty-five hours, the bill frequently opens and shuts; and at the end of the eighteenth day, the first cry of the chicken is heard. It afterwards gets more strength and grows continually, till at length it is enabled to set itself free from its confinement.

In the whole of this process, we must remark that every part appears exactly at its proper time: if, for example, the liver is formed on the fifth day, it is founded on the preceding situation of the chicken, and on the changes that were to follow. No part of the body could possibly appear sooner or later, without the whole embryo suffering; and each of the limbs become visible at the fit moment. How astonishing must it appear to an observing mind, that in the substance of the egg there should be all the vital principle of an animated being; that all the parts of an animal's body should be concealed to it, and require nothing but heat to unfold and quicken them; that the whole formation of a chicken should be so constant and regular; that exactly at the same time, the same changes will take place in the generality of eggs; and that the chicken, the moment it is hatched, is heavier than the egg was before.

AGRICULTURE.

ROYAL AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY'S MEETING AT LINCOLN.

The annual meeting of the Royal Agricultural Society of England commenced on Thursday week at Lincoln, with the trial of implements. The following was the programme of the week's proceedings:—

FRIDAY 14, SATURDAY 15, MONDAY 17, TUESDAY 18.—Trial-yard open at nine o'clock in the forenoon; the public to be admitted on each day at ten shillings for each person, to view the trials of the Steam Engines, Barn Works, and other Agricultural Implements, and machinery generally.

WEDNESDAY, 19.—The Implement Yard open to the public from seven in the morning till six in the evening; admission 2s. 6d. each person. The Judges to inspect the Live Stock and award the prizes. At one o'clock the public to be admitted into the Cattle Yard, on the payment of 10s. each person, at the special entrance. Members of Council and Governors of the Society being admitted by tickets to be purchased at the Finance Department of the Society at the Show Yard. At eight o'clock in the evening the yard to be closed. The dinner of the society in the Pavilion adjoining the Show Yard, at four o'clock: open at three. The Judges' awards of prizes for Live Stock will be read.

THURSDAY, 20.—The Cattle and Implement Yards open to the public from six o'clock in the morning, till six in the evening; admission 2s. 6d. each person.

FRIDAY, 21.—The Cattle and Implement Yards open to the public from six o'clock in the morning, till six in the evening; admission 1s. each person. General meeting of the members in the Guildhall, at ten o'clock, in the forenoon.

The endorsed show-ground and buildings on the South Common display methodical arrangement and completeness. The whole enclosure is 800 feet long by 600 wide; the special entrance being on the west side, where there were two revolving gates with indexes attached, to note the number of visitors who entered the yard. The Implement Yard is a spacious compartment fitted up with bug sheds, and resembling somewhat the appearance of a large canvas town, the sheds being all covered with canvas to prevent the rain or sun from injuring the implements. In this yard there are 19 sheds, each 252 feet long, and 20 feet wide, for the reception of all kinds of agricultural implements; while placed along the entire west side, is a comfortable shed for the display of seeds. The Trial Yard is placed on the south side of the one for implements, and divided from it by a wooden partition similar in height to the outer enclosure. This yard which is 350 feet long and 220 feet wide, is for the purpose of trying the different engines in the presence of the judges. A new feature this year in the arrangements of the society is, the opening of the trial-yard to the public while the engines are at work, it having been closed on former years while the judges were inspecting the working of the various machines. The Cattle Yard is situated on the east side of the enclosure, and contains 17 sheds, each 252 feet long and 20 feet wide, for the accommodation of cattle, horses, pigs, &c. Along the entire side of it, running north and south, is a shed fitted up with 304 commodious cages, for the reception of poultry, with an iron rail in front to prevent visitors from approaching too near to disturb the birds. The cattle sheds are also covered with canvas to protect the animals from the weather. There is a division between this yard and that for implements, which was taken down on the second day of exhibition, so as to throw the two compartments into one spacious whole. The Dining Pavilion is on the north side. It is 100 feet long and 60 feet wide, and constructed in time comfortably 800 persons. The interior is elegantly fitted up for a temporary building, and is lighted by two spacious windows, one at each end, covered with coloured transparencies to resemble stained glass, the centre pinnas having the initials of the society in beautiful ornamental letters. There is a raised dais at the north side for the chairman and distinguished visitors, and opposite on the south side is a smaller one for the vice-chairman and friends. Within the enclosure there are numerous offices for the transaction of the society's business, all neatly fitted up with every requisite for comfort and convenience. While the arrangements for the exhibition of stock, implements, &c., and the comfort of visitors were highly satisfactory, not less so were those for supplying the cattle with water. A reservoir had been constructed at the south-eastern corner of the Common, containing 20,000 gallons. It is supplied with pure and wholesome water from the spring on Canwick-hill-side, at the rate of ten gallons per minute continuously. The height of the reservoir above the level of the site of the show forces the water at once supply-valve of the pipe 18 feet high, and another 11. For the supply of the engines the water requires to be forced 26 feet high, and for this purpose a wooden cistern capable of holding 600 gallons had been placed upon a tall frame over the reservoir, and from the reservoir the cistern was filled by means of a pump. The water is conveyed to the show ground, a distance of several hundred yards, in leaden pipes, so that there is a continual supply. The resolution restricting the admission of the stock shown, was abandoned. This was agreed to at a general meeting of the members, held on the 22nd of May last. The report on this point says:—"The council had previously appointed a committee to report suggestions on the subject of that over-fed condition of animals, which in many instances at previous meetings had been inadvertently upon as being inconsistent with their value for breeding purposes. The arrangements, however, made by that committee have not attained the object in view. The disqualifications pronounced at Gloucester were not eventually confirmed in every case: animals apparently over-fed at the time having subsequently been proved to be breeding stock. The council have, however, reverted to the society's original rule of placing on the judges of the show the responsibility of awarding prizes to those animals which in their opinion are the best adapted for the purposes of breeding." And Earl Ducie's scheme, adopted last year at Gloucester, been persisted in, the shows of the society might probably have been irretrievably injured.

The city was devoted for the occasion in emulation of Exeter and Gloucester. Triumphant melodies were erected in various parts of the city. One was fitted up at the east end of Guildhall Street, another at the South Bar, and a third in Pelham Street, at St. Mary's Bridge, and a fourth near St. Mark's church. The Mayor's house was also decorated. The Stonebow illuminated, and the Corn Exchange had an ornamental front. Mr. Fisher, of the Durham Ox, and other luncheoners also "came out" stylishly.

NEW MATERIAL FOR PAPER.—We are glad to find that the inconvenience to which the newspaper and general press of the country has been of late seriously exposed, is likely soon to approach its termination. We have before us some observations upon this question from the pen of Mr. Sharp, an old occasional correspondent of this journal, in which the subject is briefly but intelligently treated. It appears that patents are secured for the process, and machinery necessary to convert the fibres of various plants, grown in our own colonial possessions within the tropics, into material calculated to supply the place of flax, hemp, and rags, for the use of textile manufacturers, ropemakers, and papermakers. It is strange that, with such materials in our own colonies, stated to exist in unbounded quantity, we should have been so long content to rely for important raw products upon foreign States, and especially upon that country with which we are now seriously embroiled, and which, we are told, has drawn from us, "within the present century, nearly £100,000,000 sterling for flax and hemp alone."—Mining Journal.

ON THE DISEASE OF HARICOTS, LETTUCES, AND MELONS.—It has been remarked for the last few days past that the leaves of the haricot bean, forward enough to have a few ripe pods, have been disfigured by patches of a yellowish colour, and that when the spots and leaves attacked have become tolerably numerous, the plants have begun to languish, and have become seriously out of health. No one has known to what to attribute this morbid affection. Seeing it daily increase I examined it with care, and soon found that the ravages were caused by a multitude of small jumping insects, which devoured the parenchyma of the upper surface of the leaves, and hid themselves under the lower surface, being entirely covered by their excretions. In order to arrive to a satisfactory conclusion, I put some of the insects in a glass tube, into which I also placed some pieces of perfectly healthy leaves, and I soon saw that the leaves were attacked and reduced to the same condition as those of the frames. The insect not only eats the parenchyma, but poisons the leaf, and renders it unfit for the performance of its respiratory functions; the plant then suffers, and, without, no doubt, ultimately die, in consequence of the active influence of a forced vegetation, new leaves did not incessantly replace those attacked. The green haricots of 1854 are in ill health, and that is due, as is clear, to the ravages of an insect, as far as has been at present ascertained. The insect, unknown of present, is herolotrous and monophagous, nearly allied to the bugs of the sub-genus Meris. Since the leaves of new lettuces and melons just appearing above ground were spotted in a similar manner, as, indeed, was seen in the case of melons and gourds last year, I turned my attention to them, and found these leaves also infested by the same insect. It may be remembered that, two years ago, MM. Charles and Stephane Bazin discovered, on the leaves of diseased potatoes, insects of the genus Podura, which hid themselves in the day-time, and only ran about at night, and which seemed to be, by their ravages, the proximate cause of the well known disease. The malady from which the leaves of the haricot are suffering, is apparently so like that which affects the vineyards, that there seems to be some reason to suppose that those observers are right who attribute the vine disease also to the devastations of insects. Cryptes Rendus.—M. BAZIN.

A NEW POTATO.—The Gardener's Chronicle points to the introduction of a new solanum, called verrucosum, suggested by the Havre Horticole as most likely to settle the potato question after all artificial manures, pickles, and steeps, with a view to prevent disease in the solanum tuberosum, have failed. Potato-like plants, producing tubers, exist in the west of Mexico, approaching very near to the cultivated species. The solanum verrucosum produces very small tubers, not exceeding 1½ inch in length, and, although hitherto regarded as of no value in cultivation, even in the year 1847 it exhibited no traces of disease. The French, however, have been developing its capabilities. M. Parguor, of Vesoul (Haute-Saône), in May, 1853, received from the Horticultural Society of Ann a dozen tubers of the size of walnuts, perfectly sound, with a clear rose-coloured skin, modified by a slight yellowness appearing through it, mild and pleasant in quality, and indeed, as good as the best varieties of the common potato; being the result of three years culture in the neighbourhood of Ann, in rich, well-worked land, where they had, however, undergone no material alteration in size. But M. Parguor, planting his tubers early in May, in common garden soil, twice cleared during the season, on the 6th of September took up the produce of ten of these tubers, and found that they had each yielded from 23 to 25 ounces, whilst some of the new potatoes weighed as much as 6 ounces, although others were not larger than walnuts. Thus, though the rich, well-worked soil of Ann grew potatoes too small in size to be of any use, they assumed a fair size in the common garden soil of Vesoul, justifying the expectation that, by raising this potato from seeds, the size might be gradually increased. The plants of solanum verrucosum, moreover, were completely free from disease, although common potatoes planted by their side were attacked as early as the end of July. Professor Decaisne, of the Jardin des Plantes, at Paris, also testifies to the some power of resisting disease. Messrs. Silmorin, the well known seedsmen of Paris, could provide sets for development of this new branch of culture in England, which we trust may make rapid progress.

THVERTON.—SEVENTEEN SHEEP KILLED BY LIGHTNING.—During a heavy thunderstorm which raged on Saturday last, Mr. Searles, at Buddle Farm, Chilton Fitzpaine, had 17 sheep struck by the electric fluid and killed on the spot.

THURBARK.—Mr. Henry Dawson, Hayton, Maryport, has a stalk of rhubarb, the breadth of the leaf of which is four feet.

HOP INTELLIGENCE.

LONDON, July 20.—Appearances are much the same as last week in our market. The change of weather the last few days forced the duty on yesterday to 65,000*l*. and 70,000*l*.; but the opinion of those best qualified to judge being that so much ground is irretrievably blighted the duty receded to 60,000*l*. and thence to 55,000*l*. this morning.—R. & T. COLLIS, 241, Borough.

MAIDSTONE.—There is no improvement to report in the plantations of this district, though in some grounds, where the bine is tolerably strong, the plants are putting forth fresh hoots, which, should the weather prove favourable, may yield a short crop.

TESTON, WATERINGBURY, AND NETTLESTEAD.—The strong bine grows and improves; that which is struck hard by the blight gets worse, and the weak bine also.

MEREWORTH.—Where the bine has vigour, the "niggers" are very busy, but the weakly bines appear to be quite hopeless.

YALDING AND HUNTON.—Our hops get on as before, without any improvement.

MALLING.—Some grounds have gone back, and others slightly improved.

GODHURST.—During the past week the hops have thrown out fresh shoots, which, however, are very weakly, and as soon as the young leaf expands, it is attacked with a fresh supply of vermin.

CRANBROOK.—During the past week the bine has slightly improved in appearance, but on an inspection it is found almost as foul as ever.

MARKETS.

MONEY MARKET.

MONDAY.—Consols began at the price of 93½, from which they advanced to 94.—Before the close of business, consols declined to 93½, and eventually left off at 92½ to 93 for the opening ex-dividend. 3 per Cent. Reduced Stock closed 93 to 94; the 3½ per Cent., 94½ to 95; India Stock, 226½; India Bonds, 2s. prem.; Exchequer-bills par to 3s. prem.; Exchequer-bonds (scrip), ½ to ¾ prem. The after-hours' price of consols was 92½ precisely.

TUESDAY.—Consols opened this morning at a decline of nearly one per cent. The first transactions to-day were at 91½ to 92. Consols advanced to 91½ to 92, and, after some fluctuations, the quotations at the close of regular business were 91½ for money, and 91½ to 92 for the 17th of August. At a later hour, in consequence of lower prices from Paris, there was a new decline of ½.

WEDNESDAY.—This was settling day in the English Funds, and they have experienced considerable fluctuations. Consols for money, which closed on Tuesday evening at 91½, were first quoted 91½ to 92, but a decline took place to 91½. A purchase of 200,000*l*. Consols for the account then improved the tone of the market, and a revival took place to 92 to 93 for money, and 92½ to 93 for the 17th of August, these being the final prices. Bank stock left off at 209 to 211; Reduced, 92½ to 93; Three-and-a-Quarter per Cent., 92½ to 93; Long Annuities, 4½; India Stock, 224 to 226; India Bonds, 1s. to 5s.; Exchequer-bills, par to 3s.; and Exchequer-bonds, ½ to ¾ premium.

THURSDAY.—The English funds opened with firmness this morning, but the market became dull towards the termination of business, and the final prices were on aught below those of Wednesday. Consols for money were first quoted 92½, and subsequently touched 92½. The last transactions, however, were at 91½ to 92 for money, and 92 to 93 for the account. There was a diminished demand for money in the Stock-Exchange, and generally a more quiet tendency than for some days past. Bank stock left off at 209 to 211; Reduced, 92 to 93; Three-and-a-Quarter per Cent., 92½ to 93; Long Annuities, 4½; India Stock, 224 to 227; India Bonds, 1s. to 5s.; Exchequer-bills, par to 3s.; and Exchequer-bonds, ½ to ¾ premium.

FRIDAY.—Consols opened this morning at 92½ to 93; and of twelve o'clock they were 92½ to 93 for account, and 92½ to 93 for money.

SMITHFIELD.

MONDAY, JULY 17.—The arrival of cattle and sheep from the Continent into the port of London during the past week has been moderate. The Custom-house return gives an entry of 317 oxen, 310 cows, 433 calves, 103 pigs, and 922 sheep, making a total of 2,095 head. The supply of foreign beasts of Smithfield market today was, on the contrary, large. Trade proved to be generally very dull for everything, and prices were from 2d. to 4d. per stone lower for all kinds of meat. There were nearly 4,000 head of beasts on offer, which commanded a sluggish inquiry, at a fall of 2d. per stone, on previous rates. Scots felled 4s. 10d. in general. Of sheep also there was an abundant supply, and the trade ruled very dull and flat. Southdowns and prime half-bred sheep made about 4s. 10d., and polled sheep from 4s. Lamb, although the weather is favourable for this description of meat, sold slowly, and at lower prices. Veal and pork were very little altered in value, but they both met with a dull inquiry. Statement of prices, and supply at market, this day July 17, 1854. Beef, 4s. 6d. 4s. 10d.; Mutton, 4s. 6d. 4s. 10d.; Veal, 1s. 5s.; Pork, 3s. 10d. 4s. 6d.; Lamb, 4s. 6d. 5s. 6d.; Boasts, 4,500; Sheep and Lambs, 28,500; Calves, 550; Pigs, 422.

COUNTRY CATTLE.

DERBY, July 18.—There was a better supply of fat beasts today with a slight improvement in the quality. The attendance of buyers was large. The demand for the best things was good, realising high prices. There was a plentiful supply of Sheep, which sold well. The number of Lambs was not so large as on some preceding markets, fully maintaining past quotations; the demand was somewhat improved. Fat and Store Calves plentiful, and a heavy sale. Pigs, in large supply. Beef made 6*l*. to 7*l*.; Mutton, 6*l*. to 7*l*.; Lamb, 7*l*.; veal, 6*l*. per lb.; Pigs, 9s. 6d. to 10s. per score; rough fat, 6s. per stone, commencing July 12; hides, young, 9*l*. and above, 3*l*. per lb.; ditto, young, under 9*l*. 3*l*.; old cows, all weights, 3*l*.; cut hides, 2*l*.; calf skins, 10*l*. and under, 4*l*.; above 10 and under 16, 4*l*.; above 16, 3*l*.; all cut calf skins ½ less.

MARK LANE.

MONDAY, July 17.—English Wheat met a slow sale, although not so pressing offered; yet, had it been forced, 1s. to 2s. per qr. reduction must have been accepted. The attendance of country buyers was fair and a limited extent of business was transacted in Foreign Wheat; the better qualities from the Baltic commanded most attention, but prices were 1s. to 2s. per qr. under those of last Monday.

COUNTRY GRAIN.

IPSWICH, July 18.—The dull reports of Mark Lane yesterday, and the extremely fine weather we are just now having, caused the market to be perfectly stagnant; only a very small amount of business could be transacted, as no one appeared inclined to look over of Wheat; and 3s. to 4s. per qr. abatement took place on sales. Spring corn dearer, and the Beans and Peas are reported as seriously injured by the lice. Red Wheat, 6*l*. to 6*l*. 7s.; White ditto, 6*l*. to 7*l*. 2s.; Barley, 3*l*. to 3*l*. 7s.; Beans, 4*l*. to 5*l*.; Peas, 4*l*. to 4*l*. 7s. Averages for week ending 18th July—Wheat, 480 qrs. at 7*l*. 1*l*.; Barley, 88*l*. qrs. at 3*l*. 1*l*.

SUNDERLAND, July 15.—The market this day was well supplied with grain; millers bought very shyly, consequently but little business was done; and where sales were forced, 1s. to 2s. per quarter less money had to be taken than last week. Flour remains steady, with a fair demand. The weather remaining fine, the farmers are busy making hay while the sun shines.

PROVISIONS.

LONDON, April 18.—Irish Butter has been operated in with increased freedom, and advanced rates are obtained; finer kinds meeting with most demand. Sales of Carlow, Clomel, and Kilkenny of first quality made 94s. to 96s.; Waterford, 90s. to 94s.; Limerick, 87s. to 90s.; and Cork, 94s. to 96s. per cwt. Imports were for the past week 5,600 firkins, and stock exceeds that of the previous year. Foreign is more abundant, and prices have ruled less firm during the last few days. There has, however, been a large demand—fine Friesland of 93*l*. to 100*l*.; surplus and seconds, 78*l*. to 94*l*.; fine Holland, 80*l*. to 82*l*.; Kemdena and Zwolle, 94*l*. to 96*l*.; Bosc, 66*l*. to 68*l*.; Groningen, 72*l*. to 74*l*.; Emhden and Leer, 76*l*. to 80*l*.; and Holslein and Kiel, 96*l*. to 100*l*.; and French, 72*l*. to 76*l*. Imports were 10,900 casks for the past week, and large parcels of French are still to arrive. English in good demand, and fine weekly Dorset can easily be obtained at 100*l*. to 102*l*.; middling, 84*l*. to 94*l*.; fine Devon, 90*l*. to 94*l*.; and fresh, 10*l*. to 12*l*. per dozen pounds. Bacon is less wanted, and a decline has taken place, although supply is not more plentiful—Irish small meat has been selling at 68s. to 74s.; heavy, 65s. to 72s.; Hambro', 64s. to 72s.; Dutch, 58s. to 64s.; and American, 50s. to 55s. Of all sorts, 1,200 hales and 300 boxes were imported last week. In Irish Middles, limited operations; at 50s. to 60s.; but large parcels of American have been sold at 43s. to 50s. Lard is not much wanted, and a desire is evinced to sell bladdered Irish at 64s. to 70s.; keg and firkin, 50s. to 62s.; and American ditto at 48s. to 50s. Hams have been in good request, and there is a firm market—Irish realised 68s. to 76s.; and English, 68s. to 84s. Pickled Middles are wanted at 61s. to 62s. The firmness in the market for ships' provisions continue, and many purchases have been made—prime Irish Beef at 7*l*. 15s. to 13*l*. per ton; Mess, 120s. to 125s.; inferior, 75s. to 110s.; prime Irish Pork, 8*l*. to 8*l*. 5s.; Mess, 92s. 6d. to 95s. per barrel; and Bacon ditto, 85s. to 90s. Cheese is cheaper, the supply now exceeding the demand—new grass Emden is, for red 50s. to 55s., and for pale 45s. to 50s.; new grass Gouda, 38s. to 42s.; new Milk, 35s. to 38s.; old Derby, 50s. to 54s.; new Milk, 42s. to 40s.; Kontor, 19s. to 20s.; and good to fine American, 55s. to 60s. per cwt.

"The chosen sport of a great and a free people."
OUR SAILOR KING.

GOODWOOD'S gigantic meeting absorbs the attention of all connected with the turf: nor is this to be wondered at, when we consider the number of large races, the sums invested on the issue, and the influence they must have on future events. With the Derby and Oaks in perspective, the encounter of so many two-year-olds from North and South would alone form an object of the greatest interest; but, when we add to that the several handicaps on various courses, each stable anxious to obtain a line from the other as a guidance to forthcoming contests, and with the entry for the Cesarewitch and Cambridgeshire so near at hand, the Goodwood gathering may well be deemed one of the most important, as it has long been the most delightful features of the year. Dirk Hattenlek has redeemed the fame he lost at Liverpool. Starting at greater odds than offered against any one of his five opponents, he made a clever win of it for the Ham Stakes. The position of Miss Whip Billy in the race would infer something wrong in the Antree running. We were prepared to see an improvement in the son of Blue Bonnet, but scarcely expected to find such change in the brief space of a fortnight. The 40 to 1 laid against him at Liverpool for the Derby was quickly reduced; and 25 to 1 was booked in a manner that gave sure sign of an upward tendency. On his subsequent defeat of the Moonbeam colt for the 200 sovs sweepstakes on Thursday 1,000 to 60 was taken. He is likely to train on, and should he winter well, the Tarian jacket has once more a fair chance of catching the judge's eye in the great Epsom struggle. Surprise was the last winner of the Ham Stakes who carried off Derby honours; Andover obtained but third place, though he afterwards made an easy win of it in the Molecomb. Cavalier, the favourite, who secured the same position on Wednesday, will hardly find many friends on the strength of the coincidence.

Lord of the Isles justified the confidence of his supporters for the Lavant Stakes. Some cavil has been raised at the closeness of the contest, but it is more than probable that the "heat" might have been converted into a length. Previous to the race he was freely backed for the Derby at 20 to 1. In his essay on the following day, with Alfred Day in the saddle, for the North and South of England Biennial, the victory was again achieved by a head. Such close shaving may not satisfy the most ardent of his admirers; but, when the extent and quality of the field, numbering no less than twenty, and including the names of Lord Alfred, and Elmdale Billy, with other winners, to say nothing of the 8lb extra, are taken into consideration, his friends can have no cause to regret their investments. So large a display of young ones has rarely been witnessed, and was indeed a splendid sight. This time the score was in favour of the south country stables, the first biennial having been carried off by Marsyas, with Scythian and King Tim second and third; the field of last year being nearly doubled on the present occasion. Clotilde's improvement was remarkable after her very indifferent exhibitions at Doncaster Spring and Salisbury.

The Stewards' Cup brought out the magnificent field of thirty-eight competitors, being a large increase on that of the previous season, and embodied the Duchess of Lorraine colt, long reserved for a good thing, to win his maiden victory. It was bold betting to take 5 to 1 about him in face of such a host; but he carried his backers safely through, though it was by a head only, and earned for himself a name—Pumicestone—which may be presumed to have some reference to his sire, Collierstone. Kennedy Hero's being so close to the winner, must have fortified the adherents of Diana for the coming Goodwood Stakes.

Bourdo's success in the Gratiwicke disproved the assertion, that he can only go for a mile. West Australian, as might have been expected, made a most ridiculous example of Cobnut for the 300 sovs. sweepstakes over the long Queen's Plate Course. The Goodwood Stakes—no unusual occurrence, by-the-by—fell to the lot of an outsider. Heavy, Tres, and Diana, had for some time engrossed the larger share of public attention. Many other horses, too, had their admirers and supporters, but the name of Dilly was rarely heard. The confederate stables of Dilly and Deveray had no less than half a dozen animals in the race; all had been speculated on in their turn, but the best was reserved for the last. They carried off the stake last year with Adine, who started at 15 to 1, and good odds might have been had against Bribery on the morning of the race. Though not exactly an Ammonia or St. Andrew to the book-makers, it suited the bettors' mood, and large sums must have been realised, the public being the losers. The winner's standing in the Hampshire Stakes, two miles and a distance, at 6st 7lb, where she beat Cleveland by a head, and from whom she received but 5lb for his two years in hand, gave evidence of her capability, but her chance was evidently overlooked amid the claims of the favourites.

The performance proves her to be a filly of a superior class; and she has the credit of winning the stakes at a higher weight than earned by any three-year old within the last twenty years.

Two young ones made a successful debut on Thursday; the Polydon colt by Colerstone in the Molecomb, and the filly by Carlisle out of Elapement in the Fourth Bantick Memorial. We shall hear more of both hereafter.

Virago frightened away all competition for the Cup. Had there not been 100l. for the second, and 50l. for the third, she would have inevitably been allowed to walk over. These crumbs of comfort were secured by Indian Warrior and Valeria. It is unnecessary to add that she won as she pleased.

Scythian's third struggle with Champagne, who conceded 6lb. to him, in the Racing Stakes, will not rally to him many friends for Doncaster.

Dervish started for the third Bantick Memorial Stakes, with the high odds of 10 to 1 on him. He wrested the victory from the brow of Arthur Wollesley with the greatest difficulty, Alfred Day landing him the winner by the shortest of heads. What will his enthusiastic friends say now to his chance for the St. Legor? At Liverpool Acrobat defeated this same Arthur in the easiest of contests. Is this another mistake?

The consequence was clear and immediate; 7 to 1 was at once offered against Dervish. Peck's filly, Midsummer, was introduced to the market, and the betting in all probability will soon take a more extensive range.

Radelite, Brighton, Durham, Newton Abbott, Deritend Pool, Woolford, Wedlock, and Andrie, hold meetings during the forthcoming week; with the prospect of fine weather and fair sport, there can be no doubt that all will be successful.

in correct taste, and something beyond a mere common piece of plate will become an ornament to the table or side-board of a nobleman or gentleman, of which neither he nor his descendants need be ashamed. The first of the "cups" of which we shall make mention has been manufactured at the establishment of Mr. Hancock, of New Bond-street. It is from a design by M. Lami, a French artist. The cup, which rises from a dish calculated to hold flowers, &c., is three feet high, and in the "Cinque Cents" style, elaborately executed in bright and frosted silver. Around the centre of the cup is a series of groups, representing the horse Bucephalus tamed by Alexander the Great. The whole is full of vigour and bold in outline. The handle is partly formed by the figure of a female, a marine deity, and on the summit is a statuette swan, with outspread wings. The whole is alike creditable to the artist and manufacturers.

Messrs. Hunt and Roskell, aided by the skill of Mr. H. H. Armstead, the designer and modeller, have produced the second cup.

In the well known story of "Apollo and Phœton," the poet described the god, reluctantly entrusting the guidance of the immortal coursers to his ambitious and unfortunate son; the paternal anxiety is beautifully expressed in the quotation,—

"Take this at least—this last advice my son;
Keep a stiff rein, and move but gently on;
The couriers of themselves will run too fast;
Your art must be to moderate their haste."

Mr. Armstead has wisely kept in view the purely classical character of his subject, and in accordance with its spirit, has in his masterly treatment of the horses, avoided the inconsistency of placing the English modern horse (beautiful though it be) in the hands of the Grecian Deity.

The refined purity of classical art has been conscientiously adhered to, and the presence of this element, by checking the freedom which in silver-work is in many cases admissible, (though frequently abused), has given that character to the work which at once identifies it with the mythology and poetry of Greece.

The group is in bright silver, and here we cannot but express regret at the absence of oxidation. Our intelligent neighbours, the French, know well the value, and embrace the legitimate advantages of this process; a process which would have been no small benefit to the work we have under consideration. The too common notion, that the precious metals should always dazzle and glitter, is the greatest obstacle and unfairness which patrons impose upon the artist. With him the very life-blood of his labour runs upon the various modulations of light and shade; and the limited amount of intelligence required to appreciate this, will easily understand how glitter and reflection silver the efforts of the artist, even though his powers be of the highest possible order. We hope that the diseased appetite for mere glitter will in future, if it must exist, concentrate itself upon those silvered glass balls, &c. which have been so favoured of late; but with which a work of art should not, in the smallest degree, bear any relation whatever.

Next week we shall notice, and give an illustration of the third cup, which is manufactured by Mr. Garrard, from the design and model of Mr. Cotterill. The subject is an Arab horseman in the desert, receiving a pitcher of water from a woman at a well. It is quite equal in beauty to the other cups.

GOODWOOD RACES—TUESDAY.

The magnificent meeting at Goodwood was inaugurated to-day under the most favourable auspices. The weather was most propitious; a brilliant unclouded sun diffused its radiance over the surrounding scenery, and the genial atmosphere was replete of summer's richest fragrance. The attendance of aristocratic and other visitors certainly showed no diminution from that of former years, although the absence of several distinguished persons was noted. On the balcony of the Grand Stand, and on the embankment to the right of the enclosure, were many ladies, whose light and elegant dresses in beautiful variety gave a peculiarly graceful and picturesque effect to the highly animated scene.

An attack of the gout, we regret to state, confined the Duke of Richmond to the house during the early part of the afternoon, but, just before the race for the Stewards' Cup, he arrived on the course in a pony chaise. The principal members of his family assisted, as usual, at the meeting.

The yellow jacket and crimson cap, the colours of the noble proprietor of Goodwood Park, were not displayed during the day, and their total disappearance from the turf was the only cause of regret which the spectators experienced.

The arrangements for the accommodation of visitors were the same as in former years, except that, for the better provision of creature-comforts, under the efficient superintendence of Mr. Careless, a handsome and very commodious marquee was erected to the left of the stand, under the shadow of some embowering trees.

Although the fields were, with one exception, comparatively small, yet the racing was marked by incidents of interest and importance. The Stewards' Cup, which was brought forward from Wednesday, materially strengthened the attractions of the opening day. It brought out 38 competitors, and occasioned a most interesting encounter. The close company, which most of them kept from end to end, testified to the excellent judgment of the handicapper. Speculation raged somewhat did throughout the day.

The events were decided as follows:—

The order of running on Wednesday was not settled when our paper was despatched, but we believe that the first race will be at one o'clock.

WEDNESDAY.
The scorching heat of yesterday no longer prevailed; it was succeeded by a cold, low, dust-raising wind—the very wind which the weather-wise prognosticate generally "blows up rain."

Towards noon, heavy, lowering clouds gathered around, and the rumbling of distant thunder was at times distinctly heard. The signs of an impending storm were unmistakable, and many persons, ladies in particular, who had come unprepared for a pluvial visitation, hurried from the course before the proceedings were brought to termination. Just after the race for "The Goodwood Stakes" a smart shower fell, and umbrellas and macintoshes were in immediate requisition.

The attendance of general company throughout the day was unquestionably inferior in numerical strength to that on the previous day.

The appended return of the racing will sufficiently indicate the character of the sport. The most important feature in the list was "The Goodwood Stakes," which brought out 16 runners. The quotations given below will show that the betting underwent several changes at the close. Bribery, the winner, was backed at all sorts of prices, from 50 to 1 down to 12 to 1. Her success, however, was hailed with considerable satisfaction by the bookmakers.

The decisions were as follows:—
Sweepstakes of 300 sovs each, h ft. For three-yr-olds colts, 8st 7lb each. Certain winners extra. Craven Course, 4 subs.

Lord Derby's Bolardo, by Orlando, 8st 12lb, including 5lb extra A. Day 1

Certain penalties and allowances. The owner of the second horse to receive a sum equal to 10 per cent. on the whole stake, and the third a sum equal to 5 per cent. on the whole stake. 124 subs.

THE GOODWOOD RACE CUPS.

As the patronage of the turf becomes daily more general, so does the good taste of the stewards of the various race-courses become more improved in the selection of the prize cups, with which the owners of the winning horses are to be rewarded. This is as it should be. Two objects are secured: a better notion of what is desirable in the fine arts is generated, and the meritorious exertions of many good artists are encouraged and rewarded. The "cups," three in number, which were run for this week at Goodwood Races, fully prove the great advance which has been made Betting—7 to 2 on Turk Hatteralek, who made all the running, and won easily by two lengths; bad third.

TATTERSALL'S.—MONDAY.

Scarcely a dozen members were present, the majority having left town en route for Goodwood.

Not a bet was booked about either the Goodwood Cup or Stakes. The Stewards' Cup was talked about, but the amount of speculation on this event was a bet of 200 to 11 each against Brocket, Antiverta, Ephesus, Kennyside Hero, and Glenisrae.

BETTING AT MANCHESTER.—TUESDAY.

GOODWOOD STAKES.—A few of the members who remained at home met at the Room, but speculation was below par. A few trifling investments were made at the following prices:—

9 to 2 agst Tros (t)	12 to 1 agst Nuncy (t)
6 to 1 — Diann (t)	16 to 1 — Jovence (t)
6 to 1 — Heavy (t)	25 to 1 — Lorraine colt (t)

The Car.

2 to 1 on Virago (offered)

We did not see a bet laid on either the St. Leger or any other forthcoming event.

SPORTING MISCELLANEOUS.

CURIOUSITY.—On Tuesday last, Henry Blair, Esq., at Lunan House, shot a rabbit, which has the peculiarity of having its incisor or cutting teeth about two inches long, bending in opposite directions. How the animal could have subsisted with such teeth we are at a loss to comprehend; but we are sure, that when killed, it was as plump and fat as any of this kind which have ever filled the capacious belly of the kail pot. It has been sent to our museum, and we have no doubt it will be found a remarkable specimen of lusus nature.—Montrose Standard.

THE MOONS.—In ordinary seasons the Ayrshire moors afford fair shooting, but we regret to find that disease is extensively prevalent this season amongst the grouse. It seems to be of a different nature from the epidemic from which the birds suffered so much a few years ago, though the causes are perhaps the same. In those years the grouse suffered from what was called the tape-worm, by which their strength was utterly prostrated, and their frames emaciated. This year the disease has assumed the form of a liver complaint—that organ becoming very large and losing its powers, and the birds weak and powerless in consequence. They rise from the ground, but are unable to fly to any distance. The disease, unhappily, is prevalent, and the coveys will therefore be fewer in number, and the birds generally in such a condition as to afford less sport than usual. The cause, in all probability, was the uncommon wetness of the months of May and June. If we have sunshine for the next month, the birds may have greatly recovered before the 12th.

THE MOONS, &c.—Disease is still continuing among the grouse in this neighbourhood, having spread to the young birds, and it is feared that the sport this year will be inferior. Hares are, however, very plentiful in this quarter. In Perthshire the young broods of grouse are suffering so much from a disease which is supposed to be tapeworm, that in some districts there will be a total failure of young birds.—Greenock Advertiser.

PECULIARITIES OF GROUSE.—A correspondent in the neighbourhood of Carr-bridge says, he noticed the other day a remarkable instance of that wonderful instinct which, even in the most timid of the feathered race, is sometimes found to inspire a courage almost supernatural in defence of offspring. As S. W. Hurler, Esq., was crossing the hill between Carr-bridge and the Spey, on a fishing excursion, with some of his dogs following, one of them pointed, when a grey hen offered to do battle in defence of her brood, and flap, flapping her wings like fanners, gallina, with heroic bravery, actually beat her canine antagonist, and, to the no small wonder of the party, drove him crest-fallen away. Another instance of the singular force of the same natural instinct may be mentioned. Mr. Bass, M. P., and his friends, who have taken the shootings around Carr-bridge, are in the habit of giving presents to the herd-boys in the district, in order to engage them, bona fide, to preserve the nests, and, if possible, guard them against external violence. One of the keepers lately accosted one of the herd-boys, and in answer to several queries on the subject of nests, was told by the boy that in guarding the game from molestation, he had no difficulty except with one nest, which was situated in a place much frequented by the cattle, and which, he said, must have been destroyed unless by some means protected. "But," continued the boy, "I have built a little house of stones and turf about it, and that will prevent the cattle from getting at it." "But," replied the astonished keeper, "you will certainly scare away the bird." "O, no," rejoined the boy, "I have left a little door for the hen to get in and out at, and she sits on the eggs as usual." The keeper, on visiting the place, actually found this to be the case; and several persons, attracted by curiosity, have seen the same singular phenomenon, which seems inferior in interest only to that of the famous bird, lately referred to in the newspapers, that built its nest in the mast of a ship in harbour, and when the ship sailed, accompanied it on its voyage.

TURFIANA.

The races of the department of the Charente-Inférieure came off a few days ago at Rochefort. The Western Stakes of 1,300fr. in heats were won by M. Leclerc's Epervier, beating two horses; the Council General Stakes of 2,000fr. by the Marquis de Dampierre's Frivole, beating two horses; and the Haras Stakes of 1,000fr. by M. Leclerc's Epervier, beating Prince de Beauvais's Nancy.

NOTTINGHAM.—SHERWOOD HANDICAP.—The dispute has been decided in favour of Garforth.

ERSOM AUTUMN MEETING will take place on Thursday the 2nd of November.

READING RACES.—Massaroni should not have been amongst the acceptances for the Berkshire stakes.

STAMFORD, 1855.—Lord W. Pawlett and the Earl of Strathmore have accepted the stewardship of these races.

BEDFORD, 1855.—The Produce Stakes at this meeting is off by consent.

IRISH TURFIANA.

shire Stakes at the Maze races, after losing several lengths at the start. Mr. Bradshaw has named his two-year old colt, brother to Humboldt, "The Herald."

There are already many subscribers to the Downshire Stakes for next year, and to the Northern Produce Stakes for 1857, at the Down Royal Corporation Races.

The Ramore Strand Races take place on Monday next, when the Ramore plate of 20 sovs (hurdle race), the Railway plate of 20 sovs, the Corinthian Plate of 20 sovs, and the Strand Plate of 10 sovs, will be run for.

HEATH RACES.—This annual meeting is fixed to take place on Tuesday and Wednesday next, and is expected to be productive of first-rate sport. The programme consists of nine events, to which £325 will be added.

The stewards of the Kilcock Races, which come off on the 14th and 15th of next month, have increased the amount of their handicap to 40 sovs added money.

There are at present forty-two subscribers to the Houth Stakes, and over twenty to the Curraghmore Handicap, to be raced for at the next meeting in Baldoyle.

DOWN ROYAL CORPORATION.—Mr. Knaresborough, of Dublin, has been appointed, to the situation of Registrar to the Corporation, in the room of Mr. Bond, who resigned. Mr. Knaresborough, we understand, is a gentleman well competent to discharge the duties of his office, and we believe his appointment has given general satisfaction to the members of the corporation. He was proposed for the situation by the Marquis of Downshire, and seconded by Thomas Walkington, Esq., and the motion was carried unanimously.

The Inam Races have been arranged to come off, over the Currane Course, on Wednesday and Thursday, the 16th and 17th of August, under the stewardship of Sir Thomas J. Burke, Bart., M.P.; Captain Beller, M.P.; John J. Bodkin, J. S. Hancock, Cornelius J. O'Kelly, David Rutledge, Joseph Kelly, John Birmingham, and Charles Blake, jun., Esqrs. £140 of public money will be given away.

The Confy Castle Races, advertised for the 24th inst. (last Monday), did not, for some unknown cause, come off.

The Roscommon Races will take place over the Lenahene course on the 22nd and 23rd of August. The stewards have very wisely confined the meeting to two days instead of three.

THE GREAT SCHOONER MATCH AT LOWESTOFT.

R. Y. S. "Shark," 24th July, 1854.

Sir,—In your report of the Lowestoft Regatta, you state "Titania" took the lead at starting, and you again place her as headmost yacht, and farther on your report states—

"Shark" now took the second position, "Titania" and "Aquiline" having held the first and second honours up to this moment."

Allow me to correct the error you have fallen into. "Titania" was at no time during the race ahead of "Shark." The lead was taken by "Aquiline," followed by "May-fly," the former rounding the Stanford light vessel first, "May-fly" within her length of her, "Shark" was third, and in beating through the narrow channel, called Stanford Gat, the distance being one mile and a quarter, "Shark" passed "May-fly" and "Aquiline," and became leading vessel, which position she retained to the end of the race.

I trust you will, in fairness to the "Shark," insert this. I am, sir, yours, &c., W. CUNLING.

THE LILLEY CLUB.

This club, which meets at 8 p.m. every Wednesday, at the Noll Gwynne, close to the Adelphi Theatre, is supported by members of every yacht club in the kingdom. On Wednesday next there will be a ballot for new members. The founders amounted in number to sixty. Neither politics, nor theology, nor practical joking, nor drinking of healths is permitted. Singing, lectures, conversation on aquatic subjects are the attractions, in addition to the famous dish, "The Lilley," which dates its discovery in the time of Noll Gwynne. Candidates must attend four meetings before they can undergo the ballot, "in order that the members may have an opportunity of observing temper and demeanour, and guard against admitting quarrelsome or ungentlemanly candidates." Each candidate after election becomes honorary secretary for one night, vice-chairman for one night, and chairman for one night. At 10 p.m. the "standing dish" of the club, "The Lilley," is reported "ready," and hereupon all business ends and hilarity begins. The large table of the club is covered with the Union Jack as an emblem of concord, and each candidate on joining pledges himself, on honour, to obey the chairman of the night, and not to quarrel or dispute within the club walls. There is a rule (13) "That the main object of the club being to secure a weekly meeting of yachtsmen, to bring them into one focus, no matter to which of the twenty clubs they belong, that all may benefit by a friendly interchange of yachting news and ideas, and aid in promoting a solid fraternization of all the clubs in the kingdom, each member of the Lilley Club pledges himself especially to look to the interests of the whole yachting community and not to self-advantage, and moreover not to propose a candidate without some knowledge of his character and habits." Members may introduce two friends on any club-night, but no resident within the Metropolitan boroughs is admissible, as a visitor, more than four times in one year, whether on the introduction of any one member or of several in succession. The club is forming a naval library. Visitors may address the club, but not vote. The annual meeting takes place on May 26. No gentleman can become a candidate unless he be a member of some yacht club, and there are no honorary or complimentary members. Several flag-officers are now on the candidates' list. The subscription is but a few shillings per annum.

ROYAL WESTERN YACHT CLUB OF IRELAND.

SECOND DAY.—FRIDAY, JULY 21ST.

The Grand Corinthian Sailing Matches of 1854, under the auspices of this club, were continued to-day, in Dublin bay. The weather was most unfavourable; so much so, indeed, that several of the smaller craft for the first prize were prevented from starting, and the second race for yachts of 10 tons and under, had, for the same cause, to be postponed.

At eleven o'clock precisely, the start took place for the Corinthian Cup, value 50 guineas, presented by the Royal Western Yacht Club of Ireland, to be sailed for by yachts belonging to any Royal yacht club, under 25 tons, to be manned and steered by gentlemen, members of the Royal yacht clubs; the sailing master and one professional pilot to be allowed to each vessel. A time race; three quarters of a minute per ton to be allowed for difference of tonnage. The winner to pay £5 5s. towards the Corinthian fund for 1855. Donegal Course—about twenty-eight miles, for which the following yachts started:—

Viola	Cutter, 25 Tons—Solomon Dares, R.W.Y.C.
Undine	Yawl, 13 Tons—William Lewis, R.W.Y.C.
Priestess	Cutter, 13 Tons—Arthur Dunn, R.W.Y.C.
Comorant	" 19 Tons—J. Charley, R.W.Y.C.
Avenir	" 23 Tons—J. Little, R.W.Y.C.
Musk	" 22 Tons—J. C. Atkin, R.W.Y.C.
Syrén	" 19 Tons—W. Werner, R. St. G.Y.C.

The Imp, 10 tons, the Truant, 33 tons, and the Ranger, 12 tons, were also entered, but did not start.

The vessels all started in good order; but in the second round, the Undine and Priestess finding the wind too strong for them, dropped out of the race; and the remaining five were then seen to head off in beautiful order, nearly all being well together, the Musk, however, showing slightly a head. On reaching the Bailey the latter vessel had increased her head to 8½ minutes, but her good fortune deserted her at this point, as in attempting to come round quickly on the 'other tack, her gaff broke off short, the wind falling light towards evening it was with difficulty that she was enabled to make the harbour. Between the remaining yachts the race was well contested; they arrived in the following order:—

Viola	..	..	..	..	..	4 45 30
Syrén	..	..	..	..	..	4 47 0
Comorant	..	..	..	..	..	4 51 0

The others were not placed. Allowing, however, for time for tonnage the Syrén was the winner of the prize. She was manned by Messrs. Kenrick, R.W.Y.C.; Lyle, R. St. G.Y.C.; and Robinson, R.W.Y.C. The latter gentleman steered.

While the time yachts were out at sea, some well contested rowing matches took place, which afforded a good deal of amusement to those on board the Owen Glendower. The first race was between four-oared boats, and was won by the Rosalind, beating the Hamilton, the Emerald, and the Fairy, all being manned by yachts' crews. Next came a prize for fishermen, for which three boats started; and afterwards some punt-chases. But the most enlivening part of the sport was a couple of duck hunts, which caused much merriment to the spectators, from the manner in which the ducks managed for a considerable time to elude their pursuers, who, however, ultimately succeeded in capturing them, and bringing them prisoners to the Commodore.

SATURDAY, JULY 22.

On Saturday one of the most interesting events in connection with the aquatic sports of the week took place by a grand rendezvous and manœuvring of the noble fleet of yachts belonging to the Royal Western (of Ireland) Yacht Club. In the early part of the day the weather was extremely rough, the wind blowing a stiff sou'-wester, with a very heavy sea outside the harbour.

The Corinthian match for the Ten Guinea Cup, presented by the Royal Westerns, to be sailed for by yachts under ten tons, manned and steered for by gentlemen, and which was postponed on Friday last till eleven o'clock on Saturday morning, in consequence of the severity of the weather, had to be put off again from the same cause, the committee very properly deeming it more prudent not to send out small craft—some of the boats entered being as low as three tons—in such a heavy sea, as they rightly considered that even the possibility of an accident ought to be avoided, in order that no circumstance should occur that would in any manner mar the clat which has attended their efforts in establishing these interesting and novel matches. It is right, however, to say that the gentlemen crews were all at their places on both mornings, and most anxious to proceed to sea, but of course bowed to the decision of the committee. The race, however, will take place at eleven o'clock this morning, should the weather be at all moderate, and from the well-known sailing qualities of some of the craft, it is expected to be one of the best contested and most interesting of the Corinthians.

About one o'clock on Saturday the greatest activity was seen amongst the yachts preparing for the cruise, the yachts answering the signals from the commodore's vessel in the most seamanlike manner. Shortly before two o'clock, the signal gun having been fired, the commodore slipped his moorings, and stood out of the harbour, followed in beautiful style by the other yachts in the fleet, in the order of their tonnage—viz:

Name.	Tonn.	Class.	Owner.
Micellan	.. 35	yawl	R. Batt, Esq., Commodore.
Giliana	.. 170	schonner	— Jackson, Esq.
Cymba	.. 53	cutter	S. R. Rowan, Esq.
Snake	.. 40	schonner	— Barrett, Esq.
Julia	.. 40	cutter	— Nease, Esq.
Nimrod	.. 40	"	— Hridson, Esq.
Corallio	.. 35	"	— Hynde, Esq.
Pearl	.. 31	"	— Edward Fox, Esq.
Viola	.. 25	"	— Marcus, Esq.
Comorant	.. 19	"	J. Charley, Esq.
Undine	.. 13	"	William Lewis, Esq.

The weather at this time had moderated to a fine topsail breeze, which gave the yachts an opportunity of showing their sailing powers to perfection. The commodore stood out for some distance towards the Bailey, in order to enable the long line of vessels to get well clear of the harbour, when he went about, and stood close hauled on the starboard tack, towards the Poolbeg Light, each of the yachts on reaching the place where the commodore tacked going about in capital style, and standing after him in the same order as they left the harbour. Having nearly reached the Poolbeg Light, the fleet, on the signal from the commodore, again went about, and stood up towards the east pier, on the harbour tack, in which order they passed the harbour, and stood on towards Dalkey, when they again went about, and, after some further manœuvring, entered the harbour in the same order they left, the commodore being saluted by the guns of the revenue cruiser in the harbour, and dropped their anchors about six o'clock. From the time of starting the weather calmed down gently to a light breeze, the sun shining out most brilliantly, and the day altogether being one of the finest we have had this summer. The cruise was exceedingly pleasant, the appearance of the yachts and the manner in which they were handled, showing that it was on no light foundation this spirited club has acquired its yachting fame. The view from the yachts was magnificent, embracing as it did the entire bay of Dublin, with its splendid scenery—the shore from the Hook to Kingstown, Dalkey, and Killiney, having the most beautiful panoramic effect. Great numbers of persons, both on shore and in other yachts, witnessed the evolutions of the fleet. Each of the yacht owners had on board a large party of friends, who seemed to enjoy greatly the novelty of the scene in the rich treat thus afforded to them.

DINNER ON BOARD THE OWEN GLENDOWER.

The members of the Royal Western entertained a select number of their friends, including most of the principal yachtsmen in the harbour, at dinner, on board their floating club, the Owen Glendower, on Saturday evening. Covers were laid for about thirty guests, and the dinner, which was served in the most recherche style, was announced at half-past seven o'clock, the chair being filled by the commodore, Robert Batt, Esq., and the vice-chair by Edward Fox, Esq., treasurer of the club. The cloth having been removed, and the usual loyal toasts duly honoured, the chairman gave the "Army and Navy," "Success to Yachting Clubs," "The Successful" and the "Unsuccessful Candidates," all which having been duly responded to, the great business of the evening was proceeded with. This was the presenting to the successful competitors in the Corinthian matches the splendid prize awarded by the club. The first, which was won by Mr. Rowan, owner of the Cymba cutter, 53 tons, on Thursday, over a course of 44 miles, was the 100 guinea prize, and consisted of an exceedingly beautiful, massive chased silver and a claret jug of a very handsome and unique pattern. The silver, which was of a very handsome shape, and richly chased, bore an inscription commemorative of the event. The second or 50-guinea prize, which was won by Mr. Werner, of the Syrén cutter, 19 tons, on Friday, over the 28 mile course, consisted of an exceedingly handsome and very elaborately chased silver cup. The prizes having been presented by the Commodore in the name of the club, and thanks having been returned by the respective winners, Mr. Fox proposed the health of the Commodore, which was received and drunk with the usual honours, after which "Prosperity to the Royal Western," "The Vice Commodore," and the "Guests," having been proposed and duly responded to, the company separated shortly after eleven o'clock, exceedingly pleased with the sumptuous manner in which they had been entertained, and hoping that next year would witness a similar reunion, and that the Royal Western may continue, as heretofore, to progress in yachting reputation.

MONDAY, JULY 24TH.

The Corinthian Match for the Ten Guinea Cup, which had been postponed from Friday and Saturday in consequence of the severity of the weather, took place to-day. The course was round the two buoys of the Burford Bank, leaving them on the port hand, and into the harbour, leaving the flag-ship also on the port hand, and the conditions of the race were, that the yachts were to be bona fide the property of members of royal yacht clubs, to be manned and steered by gentlemen, also members of yacht clubs, a professional pilot being allowed. Seven yachts only came to the post, eight being the minimum number intended by the club. The committee, however, with the spirit that has distinguished their proceedings during the regatta, determined not to mar the sports of the day on that account, having reserved to themselves the right of altering any rule, and accordingly sent the seven yachts to sea, determined that no person should be disappointed during their regatta. The following is a list of the yachts that came to start, viz. :—

Con Oregan	... Mr. Ball,	... 8 tons.
Nautilus	... Mr. Walker,	... 7 "
Ariel	... Mr. Hill,	... 3 "
Sybil	... Mr. Hodgins,	... 8 "
Truant	... Mr. Clarke,	... 3 "
Flirt	... Mr. Burke,	... 4 "
Torment	... Mr. Todhunter	... 2 "

The day was remarkably fine, with a very gentle breeze from E.N.E. The start being effected precisely at forty-six minutes past twelve o'clock in a beautiful manner, the Flirt and Sybil led, with the Truant, which had drawn a leeward number, and which, from her peculiar sailing powers, being built on the model of the celebrated American yacht, was looked upon as certain to walk away from other competitors, far to leeward. The rest of the yachts all followed in a cloud close behind. Immediately on getting outside the mouth of the harbour, the Truant showed her sailing powers by taking the lead, which she maintained nearly the whole day. After getting clear of the harbour it became a dead calm and the yachts remained outside the harbour for nearly two hours, when a gentle breeze sprung up, which, from her position, gave the Truant a start of nearly a mile of her competitors. The wind, however, remained very light, and the yachts did not reach the harbour until about seven o'clock, a few moments after which the Truant arrived, being a long way ahead of the others. In coming into the harbour, however, it became almost a dead calm, and she drifted with the tide, which was rising at the time, to the starboard side of the flag ship, notwithstanding all the efforts of her crew to get her on the port side. Having remained in this position for about a quarter of an hour, the Nautilus came up, and, in consequence of being more to windward, was able to weather the flag ship, and was so declared the winner at 7h. 23m. 50s., the Ariel coming in second at 7h. 40m. 30s.

SOUTHAMPTON.—ROYAL SOUTHERN YACHT CLUB BALL.—This ball will take place on the 10th of August, at the Club House, under the most distinguished patronage.

PORTSMOUTH, Wednesday.—Royal George, yacht, was towed up to her moorings this morning by Echo, having undergone necessary repairs to her hull and copper.

DOVER REGATTA.—We understand that the two prizes, viz., £30 and £20, will be conceded for yachts not exceeding fourteen tons in the second class, and not exceeding forty in the first. Any vessel over fourteen tons will sail in the first class, and be allowed time for tonnage. In the second there will also be time for tonnage. The date fixed is August 29. Wm. Shoobridge, Esq., is the Hon. Secretary.

GRIMSBY REGATTA.—"All the world and his wife" seem bound to this reunion, the great attraction being the steam light between the fleet and the batteries, which is fixed for August 3.

VESTA.—The steam-yacht Vesta, Lord Newborough, on a cruise, arrived in Plymouth Sound on Tuesday. At noon on Monday, when coming round the Land's-end, wind E.S.E., a foreign brigantine bore up, until sufficiently near to make out the yacht, when she suddenly changed her course and was soon out of sight. She was a new vessel, with span new sails, rather deeply laden, and had a very large deck-house. There was no appearance of arms. On Saturday, at 3 p.m., a brig-of-war, supposed to be the Nautilus, was seen off the Lizard.

NOVICE OFF NAPLES.—At the recent Harwich and Lowestoft regattas, the yacht Novice, belonging to Vice-commander Aiccedekne, was particularly noticed. It is true she did not race, but being the head-quarters of the Committee on both occasions, her outline yet lives in the "mind's eye" of the thousands who attended the aquatic contests to which we have just referred. The best portrait of the Novice we have yet seen is now before us. Mr. T. G. Dutton is the artist. The schooner is seen off Naples, running under her squaresail, mainsail, and topsails, with the wind on her starboard quarter. The spectator is supposed to be to leeward of the vessel. A ship-of-war at anchor, some feluccas under sail, and a row-boat, with a view of part of the city and the castle fill up the picture. This portrait of the Novice adds yet again to Mr. T. G. Dutton's high reputation as a marine artist, and we congratulate him on his continuing success.

HEN MAJESTY'S NEW YACHT WINDSOR CASTLE.—The workmen have resumed their labours on the construction of the Queen's new steam-yacht, the Windsor Castle, now building at Pembroke. She is full half advanced, and had not the great demand for small vessels taken off the mechanics, she would have been nearly completed. She will now be fitted for paddle-wheel propulsion, the report of the commissioners being in its favour, in preference to the screw. Her engines are to be supplied by the firm of Penn and Co., and they are to be upon their oscillating principle, realizing from 26 to 28 revolutions, and this, it is calculated, will give a speed of 15 knots, or 17 to 18 statute miles per hour. The diameter of the wheels will be 30 feet, and the cylinder 84 inches, with a piston stroke of six feet. The nominal horse-power will be 600. Her estimated stock tonnage is nearly 2,530, and the following are the principal dimensions upon which she is built:—Length over all, 315 feet, ditto of keel, 300 feet, breadth of beam, 40 feet, depth of hold, 22 feet. In order to secure her rapid completion a large quantity of converted timber has been sent round from the eastern port.

ETRETAT.—[From the Daily News.]—Sir,—Your excellent paper is constantly turning out articles of great interest, and not amongst the least of them is that of Saturday last relating to the port of Etretat, on the coast of Normandy. The new road from Harre to Etretat will certainly be very much and very soon travelled over by Englishmen. Let any of our yachtsmen on the south coast should prepare to take a peep at the new watering place upon the description given by your voyager, I beg to inform you that he has fallen into a slight error in describing its position on the French coast as "exactly opposite Portsmouth." According to my maps, a line drawn north from it cuts Beachy Head in two, whilst Portsmouth stands nearly a degree and a quarter (100 miles) to the west. That the place has been ob-cure is owing to the want of a road to it—for neither is it mentioned in the "Edinburgh Gazetteer" nor in "Richard's Guide du Voyageur en France," but good maps have it. One hundred years ago the price of tonnage in Sussex was three-hundred pounds per pound, simply because it wanted roads (practicable roads). For the rest, seeing that Marie Antoinette (poor Queen!) would eat no other oysters than those from Etretat, and that at the date of your correspondent's arrival there was no other Englishman in the place, it is a real discovery worthy of the present age, and just the spot to visit and astonish the natives.

—AN OLD TRAVELLER IN FRANCE.

BARO SORD, BALNE, July 18th.—"You will scarcely believe what a sensation was created to-day by the arrival of a cutter yacht, the Sparrowhawk. We had been apprised of her having been sent from England, still we did not put much faith in it; however, here she is sure enough, and right welcome, too. My last informed you that cholera was on board. The owner, Mr. Galt, has shown himself to be a plucky fellow in coming out in her, and he was the more welcome for bringing out a good supply of that we were all in want of, namely, brandy. By Jove! you should have seen the rush that took place to board him. I counted no less than 20 pinnaces and cutters, which literally swallowed the vessel, all anxious to be served first; anything new was an object of interest, but this of all others was a great one. Even old Charley looked pleased when he heard of her arrival. The little yacht brought up astern of us just about the time we were firing a royal salute for the Emperor and Empress of the French, whose healths the Commander-in-Chief had proposed on board the French Admiral's ship, where a banquet was given by Admiral Par-senal Deschamps. Mr. Galt came on board of us, and was most kindly welcomed by Admiral Seymour, captain of the fleet. Of course, all of us were delighted to hear anything from our native country, and what was doing, of which we were as ignorant as sucking pigs. Several of the ship's company also received letters and parcels by this conveyance, and the Sparrowhawk is a great card. The Commander-in-Chief has ordered the barge to take him on board the cutter, and the old fellow has dived below. I dare say the owner has got something pretty good on board. We understand that Driver first fell in with the cutter off Hango Head, and was warned as standing in too close among the rocks; after which Basilisk fell in with her and piloted her up to the fleet."

IMPORTANT IMPROVEMENT IN SHORTENING SAIL.—In almost every department of our ships, latterly, great and serviceable improvements have been made. Every clipper now built is intended to sail a "little faster" than the one which preceded it, and every ship launched is built to excel, in strength and beauty, the one which went before. This being so, it is somewhat remarkable that the present inefficient and clumsy method of shortening sail and working the whole rigging of ships has been so long overlooked, only one really valuable improvement having been made during the past fifty years. This consists in the arrangement of the trusses, and chain top-sail sheets. Captain L. McKay, the well-known ship-builder of Boston, has now taken the matter in hand, and will doubtless make some important change in the whole management of the rigging of ships. He says that labour saving appliances may be adopted, which will not merely lessen the pulling and hauling, but will accomplish more rapidly and with greater certainty the operation of making and shortening sail. He thinks he has discovered a process by which the three top-sails of a ship of 1,000 tons can be reefed by a crew of 20 men, in ten minutes, and the same reefs shaken out and the sails set again, in less time, without sending a man above the rail. He thinks a ship fitted with sails after this plan can be cared for and sailed with one-third less seamen than under the present regime; yet so great a reduction in the crew would be undesirable, for various reasons, one of which is, that in heavy weather the furling of a ship's courses frequently requires the presence of an entire crew, and even then is accomplished only by severe labour. But in any event 25 per cent of the item of victualling and manning would be saved, and the ship sailed with less risk and more comfort to the crew under this deduction. A small model of the rigging he proposes to adopt is on exhibition at the Exchange Reading-rooms in Boston, U. S.

LOWESTOFT.—During the night preceding the regatta, on Tuesday week, the New Railluz Room, on the pier, was carpeted and partially finished. It is scarcely just to venture a decided opinion upon a building which is in an unfinished state, particularly as we understand a hand-on-awning is in preparation, which may probably materially affect its outward appearance; at the same time, we must confess that it is too low in comparison with its length, while the overhanging head feels to crush it by its superincumbent weight. Externally its walls are of rough stucco, in panels, and the windows long, narrow, and numerous; the wood work being of stone colour, ornamented by dark blue and maroon colours, the designs being somewhat out of the ordinary. Internally the arrangements are excellent. There is a very capital reading room for gentlemen, we hope a yacht club library and portraits of yachts will be collected there; another room for ladies; a third, which can be either used as a committee room, or form a portion of the general room, with other arrangements. The whole is lighted very handsomely with gas, and when complete, which will not probably be more than a few days, it will be a great convenience to visitors. The work has been done, in an exceedingly short time, by the Messrs. Lucas Brothers; the design is by Mr. J. Thomas, for the Harbour Company; and the cost, we believe, will be upwards of £2,000. Were a cheap train to be run down to Lowestoft every Saturday afternoon, with return tickets included for Monday, thousands would visit this rising watering place, who are now debarred from inhaling a pure sea breeze.

BANKSIDE REGATTA.

This annual event in the Thames—one of the most attractive of the season—took place on Monday, and was witnessed by a vast multitude of persons. The race was in three heats, with six scullers, the distance extending from Blackfriars Bridge to London Bridge, thrice repeated.

First Heat.
William Terry (White) 1
Charles Biggs (Pink) 2
Another started, but the above two were placed, after some good rowing, although it was ultimately won by five or six lengths.

Second Heat.
John Harris (Blue) 1
James Hardley (Red) 2
A third man started. The heat was very close throughout, and sharper than the first. All went away together, and kept capitally at work.

Final Heat.
James Hardley 1
Charles Biggs 2
John Harris 3

Biggs had a slight lead, but was hampered by a boat. Then Hardley went in advance; but the race was close to the end. The first prize was a new boat; next, £5; and other sums reduced in proportion throughout.

MURDER OF MR. BAGSHAW.—The coroner's jury, summoned in consequence of the late fatal poisoning affray, have brought in a verdict of "Wilful Murder" against two men, named Taylor and Milner, and others unknown. Taylor and Milner had been taken into custody at the close of the struggle in the water, and are now of course committed for trial. The Sheffield Times says of the deceased gentleman—"While at Cambridge he acquired fame as the best oarsman on the Cam, and won many prizes. He was strongly attached to field sports and other manly pastimes, in almost all of which he excelled. He was a gentleman of an ardent temperament, and of a frank and generous disposition. Few young men had made so many friends or possessed qualities better adapted to gain popularity without an effort. Nothing could evince more strongly the high degree in which he was respected than the universal sympathy which was manifested in every town and village on the road between his two estates."

ROYAL IRISH YACHT CLUB REGATTA.

In reference to the disputed boat-race at the above Regatta, on Tuesday, the 15th inst., the following letters have been addressed to the Editor of the Dublin Freeman's Journal :—

Dublin Rowing Club, Ringsend,
21st July, 1854.

Sir,—You will much oblige by giving publicity, through the medium of your paper, to the following statement regarding the four-oar gig race which took place at the Royal Irish Yacht Club Regatta, in Kingstown Harbour, on the 18th inst. Your so doing may probably prevent a repetition of similar cases of injustice, and I question if such an unfair decision as has been arrived at by the Royal Irish Yacht Club in reference to that race has on any previous occasion appeared before the public.

A prize of £25 was offered for four oared gigs, for which five boats entered—the Unda and Foam (University Club); Stella (Brunswick Club); Una (Fitwilliam Club, and the Wasp (Dublin Rowing Club). These were divided into two ties—the first between the Una, Foam, and Wasp, which was won by the Wasp (in this tie the Foam filled, capsized, and upset her crew). In the second tie between the Unda and Stella, the latter came in the winner, leaving the prize to be contested for between the Wasp and the Stella, and their start was fixed for five o'clock. The Wasp came to the starting post at the appointed hour, and after some delay (the Stella not having made an appearance) was started by the umpire for a "walk over," but when about half way round the course, owing to the increased roughness of the sea, she filled, sank, and broke in two, and could not of course come to the winning post.

On application to the club to ascertain the result of the race, we were informed that a committee would meet the following (Wednesday) morning to consider the matter. Now, Mr. Editor, what do you think was the decision of that committee? That the prize would not be given unless the Unda, Foam, and Una (all beaten in their respective ties) were allowed to be pulled for the prize as well as the Wasp and Stella.

This proceeding was objected to by the crews of the Stella and Wasp, who considered the other boats, having lost their ties, had no grounds to entitle them to the prize. The result was, the three beaten boats and the Mystery, a third University boat (brought in at the last moment to make up a tie), although she was on the previous day objected to by the other crews from the same club, not having been entered in time, started for and pulled the race.

I shall leave it to the public to judge if it was fair play or justice that the only two boats having any claim to the prize were not permitted to compete for it, and these crews even agreed to allow the Foam, who lost her chance in the first tie, to pull again for the prize. But such was the liberality and justice dealt out by the Royal Irish Yacht Club, that they allowed the three beaten boats, and the fourth brought in for the purpose, to row for the prize, and it was declared to be won by the Unda, which had already been beaten by the Stella in the second tie.—I am your obedient servant,

ONE OF THE CREW OF THE WASP,
DUBLIN ROWING CLUB.

University Rowing Club,
22nd July, 1884.

Sir,—With reference to a letter which appeared in your columns to-day, I am directed by the committee of the University Rowing Club, to communicate with you for the purpose of removing a misimpression, under which, no doubt, the writer of a letter subscribing himself "One of the Crew of the Wasp," laboured when he imputed injustice to the committee of the Royal Irish Yacht Club, in the adjudication of a prize contended for on the 19th instant. The prize, which had been pulled for on the first day of the regatta, not having been won by my boat, merged into the regatta fund, but the committee of the R.I.Y. Club were good enough to offer for competition on the following day a prize similar in amount, for which entries were received until two o'clock of the day of the race. The crew of the "Mystery," who had been late in entering for the prize of the preceding day, entered for the race, and the privilege, of which they availed themselves, was neglected by the crew of the "Wasp," although it afforded the latter an opportunity of substituting a boat for that which had been destroyed on the 18th inst.

Apologising for this trespass on your valuable space, I remain, sir, your obedient servant,

W. C. HOGAN, Hon. Sec.

[We have also received a letter signed "The Crew of the Unda," the purport of which is substantially the same as that signed by the secretary of the University Rowing Club, and which it is therefore necessary to publish.]

PISCATORIAL PROLUSIONS.

By THE HAMPSHIRE FLY-FISHER.
HAMPSHIRE RIVERS.—THE TEST.

PERHAPS there is no river in England—I had almost said, in the world—that has greater charms for the Fly-Fisher, whether as regards the beauty or quality of its trout, than the silvery Test. Certain I am that neither the Dove nor the Wandia require greater skill in the angler to lure these capricious Naiads from their translucent waters. They may not, indeed, arrive at the magnitude of the denizens of the Thames, but they are very far beyond the run of ordinary rivers. In some parts of these favoured waters it is forbidden to take them of less size than two pounds. Fish from three to four pounds are by no means uncommon, and now and then they arrive at five and six pounds weight; and I have heard of—though I never saw—fish of still greater magnitude. A valued friend of mine, and an admirable fisherman, told me that he once killed at Chilton eight brace, weighing forty-three pounds, with the Welshman's Button, during the May-fly season; and the still deeper of the King's Sombourne waters will yield, on an average, during the same season, from thirty-five to forty-five fish, running from two to five or six pounds. I think the finest fish I ever saw, for symmetry and brilliancy of colour, was one of these four-pounders, at whose capture, to use a French phrase, I once assisted; and, as for the table, they may proudly challenge a superiority over the Lochleven trout, to which, in colour and shape, they bear a strong resemblance, if they do not surpass the produce of the Aron, the Kennett, the Wandle, or even the Thames.

The river Test, properly so called, rises in the Chalk Down above Hurstbourne Tarrant on the borders of Hampshire and Berkshire, and runs by St. Mary Bourne, Hurstbourne Priory, and Hurstbourne Park, the seat of the Earl of Portsmouth, a little below Whitechurch, where it is joined by another important stream springing near to Ash Park and then running by Overton, Free Folk, to Whitechurch. Of this latter water I know nothing above Whitechurch, except having seen it when travelling that way. The greatest part of the fishing, however, on this stream above Whitechurch belongs, I believe, to Mr. Melville Portal, one of the Members of the Northern Division of the County. Immediately above the town of Whitechurch Mr. Rawlings claims some pretty considerable rights, and below the town Mr. Frere owns a considerable range. This at present is in the hands of a Club; but in turning over some old notes the other day I found the records of a very pleasant and successful day's sport, for which I was indebted to the kindness of that gentleman. The fish landed here, though very numerous, are not so large as they are further down. Indeed it may be observed, as a general rule, that the fish fall off in size the nearer they approach to the fountain head. The principal owners of the Hurstbourne fishery are the Earl of Portsmouth, the representatives of the late Col. Hawker, Mr. Coles, Mr. Bright, and Mr. Tremayne. At Testcombe Bridge the Test is further swollen by the junction of the Anton. This river, from which the town of Andover takes its name (Saxon, Andoulean, the ferry or passage of the river Aude), is formed by the junction of two minor streams, one rising near Amport, the other by King's Enham, and after flowing by the town and by the parishes of Goodworth Clatford and Wherwell joins the Test at Testcombe Bridge, and thence flows into the Southampton Water at Redbridge. From Andover in Testcombe Bridge the rights of fishing are in a variety of hands. The principal owners, however, in addition to the smaller landholders, are the representatives of the late John Rawlinson, Esq., Mr. John Lywood, The Rev. Thomas Best, the Vicar of Goodworth Clatford, Mr. Tremayne, Col. Stuart, and Sir W. Heathcote. I had omitted to state that previous to the junction of the Anton the Test is augmented by a fine stream running pretty nearly south-east and north-west, and which has its rise near Mitcheldever, and flows by Bullingdon and Barton Stacey. The best of the fishing here belongs, I believe, to Mrs. Henniker Wilson and Mr. Wickham. From Ashbridge to Testcombe Bridge the freeholders and copyholders of Chilton have right of fishing. As a general rule, I am extremely averse to the destruction of common rights in England. But I confess, however anxious I may be, and I hope I always shall be, to uphold the rights of our "brave peasantry," yet I never look at this beautiful range of water without a sigh for the havoc and devastation to which it is subject. Hoop-nets, shoe-nets, spears, night-lines, every sort of device that can be invented for the destruction of fish, are here in constant use. And yet, with all this, there is still a large stock of magnificent trout, as well as jack and eels. But the fisherman who hopes to "nibble" them ought to be somewhat of an amphibious native; he must neither fear bog nor water. Some day I may recount an adventure that befell me in these regions; but now I must beg my reader, who wishes to explore these waters, to push on with me by Longstock, Lechford, and Stockbridge, till we come to the famous Houghton water, beloved of the Stockbridge Club. Between Houghton and King Sombourne another tributary, rising to the north-west, above Wallop, runs by Broughton, and pours itself into the Test, which now, having become a river of considerable magnitude, runs by King Sombourne, Mottisfont, Kimbridge, Romsey, and so on to the sea. Below Stockbridge, the principal proprietors are Mr. Edwards, Sir John Barker Mills, Mr. Chamberlayne, Sir William Heathcote, Lord Palmerston, and Mrs. Sturges Bourne. Below Romsey trout are more scarce, but grayling are to be had, and very large dace, which rise well to the fly. Jack, too, are generally numerous, but every possible endeavour is made to destroy these fresh-water sharks. The last-mentioned lady, too, I am told, has been of late years most anxious to promote the salmon fishery, which still remains—all honour to her for the endeavour. If the whole-some provisions of the Legislature were put in force more generally, we might with reason hope that the rivers of Hampshire might again be stocked with the king of fishes as they were even in the memory of living man, and parents and guardians once more find it necessary to insert a clause in indentures of apprenticeship, that the young men of Winchester shall not be compelled to eat salmon more than three days a week.

For fishing quarters, the angler will do well to locate himself either at Andover, Whitechurch, the Andover-road Station, Stockbridge, or Romsey, accordingly as these several stations may be more or less convenient. Generally, I would not recommend him to trust himself to the village hostels, Sutton, Wherwell, and Overton will perhaps furnish him with tolerable entertainment. But since the days of railroads, we must turn to the romances of James, if we want to enjoy the delights of a village inn in imagination, and in imagination only; for the reality, with very few exceptions, is no more.

CURIOUS FISH.—On the night of Friday last, a curious fish, pronounced by our fishermen to be an Albacore, was caught while mackerel fishing, about twelve miles off Hastings, by William Evans, owner of the Bee. The fish weighed 45½ lbs., and is nearly four feet long from the tip of the snout to the end of the tail. It is not scaly, but more like a mackerel as to its outer skin, and has the singular peculiarity of being as hard as a deal board to the touch. The dorsal fin, which is large, when not in use fits closely into a deep groove (as is very much the case in the mackerel), so that at first sight one would conclude that it had no such fin. The smaller fins near the tail, above and beneath, are also hard and thick. The body is large, and tapers suddenly towards the tail. The capture of these fish in "these parts" is said to be of very rare occurrence; indeed, it is asserted that the oldest fishermen in Hastings do not recollect one having been previously caught here. The fish was bought by Messrs. Breach and Son, of the Fish-market, around whose window numbers have congregated to inspect so strange-looking and unusual a visitor. From this account we are disposed to believe this fish to be a bonito. A description given in Yarrell's "British Fishes" of a specimen obtained by Mr. Crouch on the Cornish coast closely tallies with that above rendered. There is also a similarity in the time and circumstances of the capture, the fish mentioned by Yarrell being "taken in a drift net in July, at which time the roe was abundant." Yarrell adds that "it rarely takes a bait, and is too wary to be often taken in a net," a statement which may account for our oldest fishermen never recollecting having seen one here before.—Hastings Chronicle.

WEYMOUTH.—On Saturday last an enormous fish was captured above the bridge by a lad named Muanders. It was of a rare species, and is known by the name of the "Monk" fish.

THE PRINCE OF "WHALES."—As a party of ladies were boating in Broderick Bay, a few days ago, a large whale suddenly rose within a few yards of the boat, and after regarding the boat with some curiosity, sank gently.

The Life and Adventures of Dick Diming. By C. J. COLLINS. Collins and Ponsford, London.

We have before had occasion to mention this truthful embodiment of turf life during its monthly issue, and in its completed form again recommend it to the notice of all lovers of the racecourse, who would wish to be initiated into the merits and demerits of the principal actors, both before and behind the scenes.

Tilbury Nogo; or, Passages in the Life of an Unsuccessful Man. By the Author of "Digby Grand." Chapman and Hall, London.

An admirably written sporting novel, which carries you from the first page to the last with unflagging spirit. It has the true blood in it, and shows that the author has a thorough knowledge of his subject. There is life and reality in every scene and every incident.

The Australian Emigrant. By G. H. HAYDON. Hall, Virtue, and Co., London.

This is an unvarnished tale of that aniferous land, to which so many thousands are yet wending their way in search of a better lot than home can give them. God speed them, say we. The dedication of this work, "To my Father and Mother," at once won our respect for the author, and disarmed criticism, even if inclined to be severe, which we are not. The first illustration, too, with its significant "From England, 10,000 miles," shows what Saxon energy can and will do by perseverance and industry. We consider this rambling story of hush life, of fact and fiction, especially interesting to all who interest themselves directly or indirectly in the success of this far-off colony, where pasture-fields are as productive as gold-fields, and truly the most substantial of Fortune's gifts.

The Ten Courts of the Crystal Palace. Routledge and Co., London.

A well-compiled guide, and its cheapness will no doubt ensure it a large sale. The several courts, fountains, terraces, &c., are carefully described.

Rosa; or, the Black Tulip. By ALEXANDRE DUMAS. Hodgson, London.

This oddly-titled book is founded on the tulip mania that raged in Holland during the time of William of Orange, and the envy and hatred engendered by a rival florist form the basis of the stirring forest and scenes so masterly evolved by the greatest of French novelists.

British Game Birds and Wild Fowl. (Parts V. and VI.) By BEVERLEY R. MORRIS. Groombridge and Sons, London.

This is an admirable work, and must, by its beautifully coloured illustrations and well written explanatory matter, command success.

Profitable Poultry. By W. B. TROETMEIER. Darton and Co., London.

A new and enlarged edition of one of the most understanding and useful little books that has yet appeared upon this all engrossing subject.

Farm Implements, their Construction and Use. By JOHN J. THOMAS. Sampson Low and Co., London.

We quite agree with the writer of Downing's Rural Essays, that no individual, connected with farming, should be without this simple and practical work on the science of agriculture. The present is a revised edition of "Agricultural Dynamics," first printed in the Transactions of the New York Agricultural Society for 1850, with nearly twice the amount of valuable matter and illustrations. When we read this intelligent and intelligible book, and think of the slow progress of improvement in many of the most fertile parts of England, we feel that ignorance and obscurity have a larger sway in these realms than is consistent with the nation's needed prosperity in this particular.

Sketches and Anecdotes of Animal Life. By the Rev. J. G. WOOD. Routledge and Co., London.

Illustrated by that master of his art, Harrison Wely, and written by a reverend M.A. fully competent to the task, we have here a most pleasant book for young and old. One that you will be loath to lay down and pleased to take up.

The Poetical Works of Gray, Parnell, Collins, Green, and Warton. Edited by the Rev. ROBERT ARIS WELLMOTT. Routledge and Co., London.

This is the choicest work that has as yet issued from the voluminous establishment of Messrs. Routledge and Co. A kindred spirit seems to breathe through the inspired verses of these hero associated poets, and we rise in happier mood from the perusal of their work. Well has the editor performed his share of this volume. The biographical notices teem with the soul of wit, yet clear, and the foot-notes are scholarly and to the purpose.

The Baths of France, Central Germany, and Switzerland. By EDWIN LEE. Churchill, London.

A most apropos publication at this health-seeking season of the year, very impartially written. The number of watering places resorted to by the English far exceed either our ideas or our wish, when we remember the many beautiful spots of the like kind in our own unapproachable island, which now must give way to those of fashion's foreign taste. Surely sulphur sulphur to Harrogate and Leamington, without a sickly journey to the Pyrenees, and we have Eaux Chaudes at Bath and Cheltenham. The waters of Roman Vichy, however, we know to be excellent in their effect, though we doubt, if home was not too homely to this foreign ridden nation, whether as good results might not be attained without the risk of malade de mer.

Master's Ready Reckoner. Edited by JOHN HEATON. Routledge and Co., London.

A perfect utility to every one paying or receiving money.

The Electric Telegraph of Fun. By ALFRED CROWQUILL. Routledge and Co., London.

Carrying out its title to the full, and illustrated as only the illustrious A. C. can illustrate.

The Cruise of the Steam-yacht North Star. By the Rev. John O. CHOULES, D.D., author of "The History of Missions," &c. London: James Blackwood.

Dr. Choules is already known in America as having recently published a narrative entitled "Young Americans Abroad, or Vacation in Europe." He was enabled, through the kindness of Mr. Vanderbilt, the New York merchant, who visited England in his steam-yacht in 1853, to pay another flying visit to the Old World, and now publishes his impressions of what must have been a very delightful cruise. The North Star left New York on the 10th of May, in last year, and arrived in Southampton Water in about ten days. The merchant prince and a party of friends, to the number of five or six-and-twenty, who accompanied him, visited the metropolis, the manufacturing towns, and principal places of interest. They were entertained by the Lord Mayor, at the Egyptian Hall, and, subsequently, at a dinner given by the inhabitants of Southampton. After spending a fortnight in England, the party re-assembled, and the North Star steamed away to the Baltic, and in a few days anchored under the ironclad fortress of Cronstadt. Having examined all that was to be seen of interest in St. Petersburg, the North Star again put to sea, and visited, in succession, France, Spain, Italy, Malta, Turkey, Madeira, &c. The excursion extended over four months, and on the 23rd of September the yacht made the light at Sandy Hook, having steamed 15,034 miles, at an average speed of 239 miles per diem. Dr. Choules gives a graphic description of the places he visited, and the people he met.

GOOD NEWS FOR WEST KENT SPORTSMEN.—We have much pleasure in acquainting our sporting friends in West Kent, that the past season appears to have been a genial one for the vulpine race. Vixens and their cubs have done well, and it is anticipated the forthcoming hunting season will be productive of much sport, there being no lack of foxes.

NOTICES TO CORRESPONDENTS.

RACING.

Quere, in his desire to avail with "THE FIELD," has fallen on a mare's nest. We shrewdly suspect that he is no such tyro in the ways of the Press, as to be unaware of the fact, that most of the hebdomadal newspapers post date their issue by a day. He has taken up our early edition; and, we must have anticipated the latest intelligence, had we given the return of Friday's races at Nottingham, when we went to press two hours before the bell was rung for the first saddling. The paper on which he writes to us, bears the stamp "Garick Club." Covent Garden was once the famous resort of the wits of the day, and we are glad to find, that their spirit still hovers over the neighbourhood; though the idea of "the old coaching days" may savour something of Pickford's heaviest of vans.

A Fleider Litterpool.—Vivago's sole appearance, as a two year old, was for the Astley House Stakes, Shrewsbury Autumn, where she ran fifth.

Canab.—Your double event looks well.

MISCELLANEOUS.

S.—The following is strongly recommended in cases of diarrhoea, which too frequently is but the precursor of cholera:—Receipt.—Take of spirits of ammonia, essence of peppermint, tincture of opium, 20 drops each; mix, and take in a small wine-glass of water when the diarrhoea begins, and repeat the dose, if necessary, after the interval of two or three hours. The above is the dose for adults; for children it must be diminished in proportion.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

THERE is still little news from the seat of war, but the war itself has been carried on at Westminster in a far more decided fashion than elsewhere. Lord John Russell has demanded three millions of money, and that the House, having granted the Government leave to use it (for it is raised already), should consign the rest of the business to the Cabinet until February next. Some demur was made to this, and some members said that though they had great confidence in the collective ministry, they had none in Lord Aberdeen, and would rather that the Government declared its intention to summon an Autumnal Parliament. When Lord JOHN RUSSELL came to state his demand formally, on Monday, he had, of course, all this in mind. So he made an excellent speech, in which he stated the only terms on which he would make peace with Russia. One of the things he said—we quote the words for a reason—was this: "There is another mode in which the position of Russia is menacing to the independence and integrity of Turkey. The establishment of a great fortress prepared with all the combinations of art and science, made as impregnable as it is possible for art and science to make it, and containing within its port a very large fleet of line-of-battle ships, ready at any moment to come down with a favourable wind to the Bosphorus—that I consider is a position so menacing to Turkey, that no treaty of peace could be considered safe which left the Emperor of Russia in that same menacing position with respect to Turkey." This declaration, which meant—if it meant anything at all—that Sebastopol was to be taken before peace was concluded, was received with tremendous cheering; and speeches after speeches complimented Lord John Russell upon the noble avowal which he had made, after which there could be no danger in leaving the war to the care of the Ministry. About five hours passed. Meantime, Lord Aberdeen had spoken upon the same subject in the House of Lords, but in so different and so cold a tone, that the Ministers felt that the two speeches could not be regarded as harmonising. What intimation may have been given to Lord John we do not pretend to say, but it is perfectly certain that he was compelled to "reconsider" his previous statement; and when Mr. Disraeli rose, and began in his keen and telling style, to recapitulate what Lord John Russell had said, and to allude to the promise that Sebastopol should be taken, Lord John astounded the House by rising and interrupting the Opposition leader with the following words:—"I may as well state that what I said was that I thought Russia could not be allowed to maintain the menacing attitude which she has lately done by keeping so large a fleet at Sebastopol."

We were in the house, and can certify that the effect was as if a shower of iced water had suddenly descended upon every head. It was so clear that interference had taken place, that everybody turned to his neighbour in disgust. Had a division been forced that night, the Ministry would not now be in office. Lord DUDLEY STUART gave notice that he should move an address to the Queen, asking that no prorogation might take place until further information as to the war was before the House. Lord JOHN assented to a virtual adjournment, the wisest thing he could do, and a showy speech from Lord PALMERSTON was not felt to have covered the Ministerial retreat. The next night the affair came on again, the ears of the Government were assailed by the plainest and most unpolitic truths upon the subject, and the House was restrained from inflicting a blow which would have crushed the Ministry, only by the consideration that, after such expression of feeling as had taken place, the Government would hardly dare to conduct the war in Aberdeen fashion; whereas, by a hostile vote, an undesirable spectacle would be offered to Europe. So the vote was finally agreed to.

Lord J. Russell and others professed belief that Austria would do her duty. But Lord Palmerston said what has often been said in "THE FIELD," and what is undoubtedly the feeling of the nation,—namely, that so long as England and France were united, he did not care who joined or who stood aloof.

Neither from the Danube nor the Baltic have we any news. The funeral of Captain Parker, who was killed in the apparently insignificant but really most important affair at the Suluch mouth of the Danube, has been solemnised at Constantinople with deserved honours, in which both the French and English took a part, while the coffin of the deceased was borne upon a Turkish gun.

The news from Spain is the only addition we have to make to our political column this week. The Queen, reduced to helplessness, has called upon Espartero to form a Ministry of progress, and this has given much satisfaction for the moment. Espartero's fault is indecision, but no one can doubt his honesty. We confess, however, to the belief that any such arrangement can be but temporary, that the Queen will not permanently sacrifice her amusements to her duty, and that the throne of Spain will ere long be open to competition. A Montemolin, a Montpensier, and a Saxe Cobourg, have all obtained their own consent to fill it, and that one who can get the trifling addition of the national assent will be King of Spain. We do not believe that either of the three can fulfil that condition.

The Bribery Bill has nearly passed through the Commons, but it has still difficulties to contend with, and in the meantime Bribery has won at Goodwood.

DEATH OF MRS. SOUTHEY.—Caroline Southey, widow of Robert Southey, the Poet Laureate, died on the 20th inst. at Buckland, near Lymington. She was a daughter of the Rev. Dr. Bowles, a canon of Salisbury Cathedral, and was highly graced with intellectual accomplishments. She was married to Dr. Southey in 1839, about a year and a half after the death of his first wife, Edith Fricker, to whom he was united on the day he left England for a six months' sojourn at Lisbon. The Rev. C. C. Southey, vicar of Ardsleigh, in his life declared that Lord John had spoken the sentiments of his country, and that they were united as to the mode of carrying on the war; and he OVERCROWDING OF STEAM-BOATS.—Many complaints having been made of the overcrowding of the steam-boats on the river, a committee of the aldermen met on Wednesday, and, with the sanction of the Board of Trade, appointed two inspectors, who will be actively employed in watching the different steam-vessels, and in all cases where the masters of vessels are discovered taking on board a larger number of passengers than the vessel is licensed to carry, the City Collector has been directed to institute proceedings to recover the penalties imposed by the act of parliament. It is hoped that this determination of the aldermen will have the effect of preventing a practice which is attended with so much inconvenience and danger to thousands of persons who are in the daily practice of travelling by steam-vessels on the River Thames.

BELVIDERE.—GRAND MATCHES FOR GEORGE ERWOOD'S BENEFIT.—On Monday last, the Belvidere "Derby day," for the Great Metropolitan Racket Gathering for the season, took place at this court. The extraordinary heat of the weather prevented that crowded attendance which there would otherwise have been upon an occasion most interesting to racket amateurs and players. With the thermometer at something like eighty degrees in the shade, it is not surprising that many, even of the ardent admirers of the game, should have debarred themselves the gratification of witnessing, what from the high reputation of the gentlemen whose names were advertised, they knew would be play of the highest order of talent, rather than endure the pain and lassitude which are the penalties of exposure to Sol's rays during the present smoking dog-days. It evinced no inconsiderable amount of public enthusiasm in favour of this manly game that nearly 600 gentlemen should have come together as spectators in such a fervid season, many of whom were compelled to purchase their enjoyment at the cost of sitting in the full blaze of a real old July sun, notwithstanding Mr. Rouse's skill and exertions in catering for the comfort of the public; he had brought together an amount of canvas, which gave to his grounds something like the pleasant appearance of the gardens of a wealthy Hebrew during the Feast of Tabernacles. But the scene at the Belvidere Court on Monday, proved another act, in a still more remarkable manner, and that is the strength of the passion of players for rackets, inducing in them a power of endurance absolutely Indian in its character.
 While the quiescent spectators, with no other exertion but that of drinking the wines and liquors, and smoking the fragrant cigars of the host of the Belvidere, were perspiring at every pore like so many well-basted porkers before a kitchen fire, these gentlemen players found a positive pleasure in subjecting themselves, in such a fiery atmosphere, not merely to the active exertion indispensable in a game of rackets in ordinary circumstances, but where there was the superadded stimulus of an ambition to view a "grand match." Among the company were several noblemen, officers of the Guards, and gentlemen of literary eminence, and also a large number of the most unpretending but sterling aristocracy from the north— "districts of London, whose successful enterprise, industry, and skill in manufactures and other businesses, enable them frequently to enjoy at the Belvidere and elsewhere, the otium cum dignitate. Conspicuous among the distinguished personages present, was the great patriarch and father of racket players, the elder Mr. Pitman, now in his 85th year, who came to witness the athletic and skilful feats of his own son Matthew, now in his 52nd year, as well as more juvenile players of the present generation, who, for age, might almost have been his own grandchildren; and who, however disposed he might be to give them a due meed of praise for their excellences, were still, in all probability, in his eyes, not what the crack players were in his younger days. It was pleasing to mark the interest which the venerable gentleman took in the games, and instructive to those who were within reach of his voice, to bear him point out, with the judgment and discrimination of a profound master of the science, the beauties and defects of the play of the several artists. With laudable pride he displayed a snuff-box testimonial of respect to himself, and another a trophy of the prowess of one of his three highly talented sons.

The proceedings of the day were opened by a match between Samuel Young and Frank Erwood, against George Erwood and John Sowden. The first game was won by the last-named players by 11 to 7, and the second and third by the two first-named by 11 to 5 and 11 to 10, the final game, up to the last moment, being anybody's. The heat of the sun, and the indisposition of George Erwood, occasioned materially by fatigue arising from his anxiety to arrange everything for the comfort of his friends and the public, rendered it advisable for him to desist awhile from his exertions. The second match was therefore arranged; The London Amateur and one of the finest amateur players in England were pitted against Bull and Young, two of the best professionals in the kingdom. The amateurs succeeded in winning every game, in the first by 11 to 6; in the second, an exceedingly hard game, by 11 to 10; and in the last by 11 to 8. The third match was single-handed, between the brothers George and Frank Erwood, Frank the younger carrying off the palm, in the one game by 11 to 3, and in the other by 11 to 5. The fourth match was also single-handed, between John Sowden and John Caplin, the former gentleman winning by 11 to 4. The players in the fifth match were Greatwood and John Sowden against Samuel Young and John Caplin. The first two games were won by Greatwood and Sowden, by 11 to 4 and 11 to 3; and the third by Young and Caplin by 11 to 7. The sixth match, which was decidedly the most interesting of the day, was between two of the oldest and most celebrated players in the country, Mr. Morris and Mr. Matthew Pitman, against two of the best amateurs, The London Amateur and the gentleman who was his partner in the second match of the day; the latter gentlemen being juniors to the former, in the one instance by 14 years, and in the other by about 25 years, a difference of age which, in the order of nature, when men get into the second half of a century of life, affects arms, legs, and eyes, and makes a great deterioration in running and striking powers; but, notwithstanding this apparently long odds against the seniors, their science and experience enabled them to win two out of the three games by 11 to 10, and 11 to 9, their opponents winning the third by 11 to 4. The final match was between Morris and Ball, against Frank Erwood and Young, the latter winning the rubber in two consecutive games, by 11 to 9 in each instance. Night now dropped its curtain upon a stage on which one of the finest days' play ever enjoyed by racket admirers was performed. The games lasted five hours; during the first three of which, the numerous company sat under the rays of an almost overpowering sun; yet scarcely one of them left until the players had retired from a scene which the spectators would fain have prolonged for hours. The proceedings of the day were concluded by a banquet, at which The London Amateur presided, and George Erwood acted as vice-president. The health of the latter gentleman was proposed by Henry William Johnson, Esq., and warmly responded to by the company, the proposer referring in the most eulogistic terms to the professional talent and private virtues of the Belvidere Racket Master, who, in reply, expressed his gratitude to his friends and the public, for the support which they had extended to him for so many years, and his determination that nothing should ever occur on his part to forfeit the good opinion they had been pleased to express of him. The healths of Young and Frank Erwood and the Birmingham visitors having been drunk by the company, and responded to by the former gentleman, Mr. H. W. Johnson gave the health of the Chairman, which was drunk with enthusiasm and appropriately responded to, and the day's entertainment closed as harmoniously as it was begun and continued.

On Tuesday, August 15th, Frank Erwood will take his benefit at the Racket Court, Bath Street, Birmingham. There will be four of the best players in England present, including George Erwood. We wish him a bumper.

RACKETEERS.—WHITE BEAR TAVERN, KENNINGTON.—There will be a grand display of rackets, for the benefit of E. Greatwood, on Monday, July 31st. Play to commence at three o'clock. Admission one shilling.

GREAT CHESS GATHERING IN LIVERPOOL.

The annual meeting of the Northern and Midland Chess Association was held at the Exhibition-rooms, on Friday the 21st and Saturday the 22nd. The previously arranged order of proceedings was, that on the first day games should be played ad libitum, from eleven in the morning until eight in the evening, at which hour a digest of the several treatises on chess, and the revision of the game, was announced to be delivered by Mr. Staunton, who had also promised to exhibit some ancient manuscripts of great interest to the chess world. The whole of Saturday was promised to be devoted to matches, and the dinner taking place at six in the evening, at the Adelphi Hotel.

Among the earliest arrivals at the rooms we observed Mr. Staunton, of London, the chess champion of England; M. de Rivière, of the Paris Chess Club; Herr Lowenthal, the great Hungarian chess-master; Sir John Blunden, Bart., of Blunden Castle, Kilmarney; Mr. Samuel Newham, President of the Nottingham Chess Club, and a veteran of the chequered field; Mr. Schwabe, President of the Liverpool Chess Club; the Rev. S. Bunnell of Warwick Priory; and Messrs. Ralli, Manchester; Kipping, Manchester; Kynman, Manchester; Poeschmann, Liverpool; Harbst, Liverpool; Soul, Liverpool; Morcroft, honorary secretary of the Rock Ferry Club; Cluley, Ashton-under-Lyne; Mellor, Liverpool; &c. Mr. Morton Sparke, honorary secretary of the Liverpool Club, was also present, and was indefatigable in his exertions to add to the interest of the occasion.

On Friday the majority of the boards were occupied, but the following game attracted the most attention, being a well-contested one, played by consultation, between Messrs. H. Staunton, G. C. Kynman, and M. de Rivière on the one side, and Herr Lowenthal, Sir John Blunden, Bart., and Mr. J. S. Kipping, on the other side. The game, which lasted from 2 p.m. to 10.20, p.m., was won by Mr. Staunton and his coadjutors, their opponents resigning at the thirty-sixth move.

Among other games of interest played on Friday was one between Mr. Newham, of Nottingham, and Mr. Morton Sparke, which, after a severe contest, was won by the former gentleman. It was resolved that the treatise promised by Mr. Staunton should be taken at three o'clock on Saturday.

The attendance on the second day was more numerous than on the Friday, there being among the visitors the Mayor of Liverpool (Mr. J. B. Lloyd), Mr. J. N. Haddon, president of the Rock Ferry Chess Club; Dr. Sparke, of London; Mr. Stanley, of Preston; &c. During the day the following games, among others, were played:

Mr. STAUNTON against Messrs. SMITH and ROGERS, of the Liverpool Club. Mr. Staunton giving the odds of one pawn and two moves.

Herr Lowenthal, during this game, was playing another, giving the same odds, against Mr. Cluley, of Ashton-under-Lyne, and Mr. Mellor, of Liverpool, which he won, his opponents resigning at the forty-first move.

At three o'clock the boards were deserted, on the announcement that Mr. Staunton was about to favour the meeting with his digest of the several treatises on the revision of the laws of chess. Mr. Schwabe having again, on the proposition of Mr. Newham, been voted in the chair.

Mr. Staunton proceeded to deliver some highly interesting observations, which evidenced laborious research into ancient documents, and a perfect knowledge of the noble game from the earliest times. At the last meeting, he said, he pointed out some inconsistencies of the present chess statutes, and showed the necessity of remodelling the laws as to obtain a rational code which should govern every chess player. On that occasion he was empowered to enter into communication with Messrs. Jaenisch and Heydebrand, the great continental chess-masters, with a view of carrying out this object. They had entered heartily into the scheme, acknowledging the desirability of its accomplishment, and Mr. Jaenisch had written an elaborate work bearing upon the laws, which he (Mr. Staunton) was translating for publication in England, and he had hopes of its being issued during the present year. The first step towards realising their great object was to acquire some knowledge of the ancient moves and power of the chess-arm, and to ascertain when that remarkable change in the moves took place which gave us our present games; and, for this purpose, to obtain abstracts of the different laws which from time to time had been devised to govern play. Many works now obsolete had been consulted, and materials which had hitherto been beyond the reach of modern masters, including the MSS. of Green and other ancient masters, which had been discovered in some of the Indian libraries. The originals were, of course, priceless; but the proprietor, with great liberality, had presented him (Mr. Staunton) with copies, the translation of which had thrown light upon many difficulties hitherto experienced in tracing the ancient moves and power of the men. (A portion of the copied MSS. was exhibited by Mr. Staunton. It is an exact imitation of the original, which is shown to be a beautiful specimen of Italian calligraphy of the thirteenth century.) The MSS. of Green, continued Mr. Staunton, had proved most valuable, having enabled him to settle many controverted points as to the old usage of the game. The first point which had been under the consideration of Messrs. Jaenisch, Heydebrand, and himself, was the desirability of a uniform and universal system of notation. The matter had been very fully discussed, and they all agreed that the adoption of the German system of notation would be the best; but while convinced of the importance of carrying it into effect, he was satisfied that the objection of young players to any system of notation which did not describe the exact pieces would prove an insuperable barrier to the general adoption of the German system. This was much to be lamented, as the abstract notation prevailed almost throughout the Continent. (Hear, hear!) The chief points with respect to the laws which engaged their attention were:—First, the vacata quatio of counting fifty moves, with respect to which they all three differed, his own opinion being that the practice would be a good one if they had some means of deciding the exact time when the counting should commence; secondly, the rule prescribing penalties for illegal moves,—his own suggestion being that in such an event the person so violating the rule should forfeit the move, or be compelled to move his King at his opponent's option; thirdly, with regard to queening a pawn, Jaenisch being in favour of the present rule, to which, however, he (Mr. Staunton) was opposed, believing that it was a violation of the principles of the game to give such preposterous power to the Queen. Petroff, the great Russian player, was in favour of the pawn, after obtaining the opposite goal, still remaining a pawn. But that was an error, for it would then be a nullity, as it would be unable, being only a pawn, to move backwards, and forwards it could not go.—Hear, hear!) His own suggestion was that the pawn, having fought its way to the further end of the board, should have the power of the Queen as it had by the present rules. In the elucidation of the ancient power of the Queen, Mr. Staunton introduced some interesting facts, showing the practice in Greece's time. The other points discussed were the right to take a pawn en passant, Jaenisch wishing for the abrogation of the law, on the ground that it violated the principle of the game, but he (Mr. Staunton), while acknowledging the force of Jaenisch's able arguments, was for maintaining the present rule, because its abolition, although it would greatly add to the spirit of the game, would so immensely increase the already preposterous power of Queen pawns. Mr. Staunton stated there were two other points discussed, the right of lookers on to interfere with a game, which he thought should be restricted to calling attention to false moves; and the disposition of the board, with regard to which nothing very material transpired.

At the conclusion of this interesting statement, a vote of thanks was, by acclamation, accorded to Mr. Staunton, and the congress separated without entering into a discussion, which was precluded by the arrival of the dinner hour.

The annual dinner of the association was held on the Saturday evening, at the Adelphi Hotel. About 30 gentlemen sat down; Mr. Schwabe, occupying the chair, supported by Mr. Staunton and M. de Rivière; and Mr. Newham, the vice-chair, supported by Herr Lowenthal and Dr. Sparke.

YARMOUTH, ISLE OF WIGHT.—On Thursday the 20th inst. an interesting Masonic ceremony took place at Yarmouth, Isle of Wight, on the occasion of laying the foundation stone of the proposed National Schools. The Provincial Grand Lodge having been opened in due form, the brethren proceeded to the parish church at 12 o'clock. The prayers were read by the Rev. J. P. Bateman, formerly Chaplain of the Grand Lodge of Cambridgeshire, and a sermon preached by the Rev. A. Blackburn, Rector of Yarmouth. After service the procession, headed by the Grand Lodge and the Clergy of the neighbourhood in their robes, moved towards the site of the building. The foundation stone was then laid by Miss Catherine Leigh, and "levelled" by T. W. Fleming, Esq., of Stompham Park, Provincial Grand Master for the Isle of Wight. Appropriate addresses were delivered by the Rev. E. M'All, Rural Dean, the Rev. J. Blackburn, and the P. G. M. After the ceremony, which appeared to give universal satisfaction to a large and very respectable concourse of spectators, the brethren, about fifty in number, adjourned to the Gorgo Hotel, where an excellent banquet was provided by Bro. P. Bright. Amongst those present were the P. G. M., T. W. Fleming, the D. P. G. M., Bro. Hearn, Lieut. Nicholson, R.E., Revs J. Gowing, J. F. Bateman, V. Blake, the Provincial Grand Chaplain of Oxfordshire, Bro. J. Smith, Cowdery, Gower, &c., &c. After the banquet, a steamer, which had brought a large party and an excellent band from Portsmouth and Southampton, paid a visit to the new forts in course of erection at Freshwater.

THE ESHB MURDER.—As the period approaches for the trial of this case, the greatest interest is felt in the county of Surrey and its neighbourhood. It will take place on Tuesday week at Guildford. The Attorney-General, it is stated, instructed by the Treasury, will conduct the prosecution; and Mr. Edwin James, Q. C., has been retained to defend the prisoner.

A NEW PLANET.

Sir,—At 11.45 mean time last night I discovered an object shining like a star of the tenth magnitude, or rather brighter, which proves to be another new member of the group of minor planets. It is almost exactly upon the ecliptic, about midway between two stars of the fifth magnitude—29 and 32 of Flamsteed, in Capricornus.

The observed positions are as follow:—

BOOTS AND "CHINS."—American ingenuity has discovered a novel purpose to which corn can be put—namely, for stretching boots and shoes. The boot or shoe is well filled with corn, and made secure by such tight tying that none can escape. It is then immersed for several hours in water, during which the leather is distended by the gradual swelling of the grain. After being taken from the water, a coating of neat's foot oil, laid on and left to dry, renders the boot or shoe fit to wear.

A USEFUL HINT TO THE GENTLEMAN.—A clergyman writes to the Carfaxian Herald as follows:—"Some months ago, an advertisement of the Rev. E. Douglass, addressed to nervous sufferers (stating that a retired clergyman having been cured of a nervous disease would be happy to forward the prescription to any one enclosing a stamped envelope), came under my notice. I sent to the Rev. E. Douglass for the prescription, which I received by return of post. The prescription directed how to compose 10 pills:—30 grs. of alcoholic extract of ignatia amara, and powdered gum arabic 10 grs. The printed paper contained an offer of sending the pills ready prepared for 2s. 6d.; I forwarded that amount in postage stamps, directed to the Rev. E. Douglass, 18, Holland-street, Brixton, London. By return of post I received a box of pills; but not finding the Rev. E. Douglass a retired clergyman in the retired list, suspicion crossed my mind, I sent a few of the pills to the celebrated chemist, Mr. Herapath, Bristol, to be analyzed. Mr. Herapath reports as follows:—"Chalk, eight grs., starch, 20 grs., alcoholic extract (not of ignatia amara), six grs. I trust that the appearance of the above in the Carfaxian Herald will be copied into other papers, and lead some of my clerical brethren to have the pills tested before they swallow them."—Liverpool Mail.

SINGULAR DISCOVERY.—While the clerks in the parcels office at the Central Railway Station were engaged in turning over a quantity of luggage, the other day, they found a small dog in a gentleman's boot; and, shortly afterwards, when pulling out a piece of canvas wrapper for the purpose of making a bed for it, they discovered a hedgehog's nest,—the mother and seven young ones; the progeny were evidently not more than a day old. It is difficult to say how the mother found her way into the parcels office.—Carlisle Patriot.

THE FEMALE HIPPOPOTAMUS was landed in the Southampton docks early on Saturday, and sent to London by the 9 a.m. train. It was banded in its bath with its Arab keeper by the side of it, and thus it proceeded to London on a railway truck, in which the hippopotamus den was well fastened. The difficult task of landing and dispatching it was effected without accident. The huge monster weighs above a ton, and is only a sucking calf. It has but four teeth. At feeling time its mouth is opened by the keeper's hand, which is thrust in covered with milk and corn meal, and licked or lapped by the animal's monstrous lips and tongue. The male hippopotamus in the Zoological Gardens has a large number of teeth and can now eat corn. Soon after the hippopotamus was fed on board the Ripon on Friday evening the keeper reclined on his seat by the side of his pet for the night, and the den was lit up by a candle. To gratify some visitors the Arab rose, and slowly moving about the den uttering a drol and monotonous chaunt, as if calling the huge beast, the latter seemed immediately excited, and its great bulk vibrated to and fro as if keeping time to the measure of the keeper's song. Like other amphibious animals, such as the seal for instance, the hippopotamus is not insensible to musical sounds, for on any one of the Ripon's band playing his instrument over the den the hippopotamus would raise its head in the attitude of listening. The milk goats which fed the hippopotamus had a peculiar appearance owing to a barbarous custom of the Egyptians. A high ridge appeared on their faces and the under jaw and teeth project beyond the upper, which gave them the appearance of extreme old age. The bony ridge on the face, which looks something like a Roman nose, induce the English who visit Alexandria to call them Wellington goats. This ridge is caused by the Egyptians breaking the forehead bones of young goats, and this causes also the under jaw to project beyond the upper. The goats which were brought over in the Ripon will be fattened and killed to feed the wild beasts in the Zoological Gardens. The Arab keeper of the hippopotamus who came to England in the Ripon is a snake charmer, and he used to frighten the monkeys on board the Ripon into convulsions when he exhibited his snakes by the side of them. The civet rat brought in the Ripon was fed on live pigeons, and appeared a savage creature. It was, however, beautifully marked, and was a great curiosity. The Arab nearly lost his life in the Ripon, owing to the hippopotamus jumping him against the side of the den, and men were obliged to goad the youthful leviathan in order to release the keeper.

ANCIENT ESTABLISHMENTS.—Apropos of these ancient establishments. Being in the island of Rhodes a few years ago, I was shown by Mr. Wilkinson, the then British consul, some stones, bearing the royal blazonry of England, as well as other arms of English knights, of the fifteenth century, or perhaps earlier, that had once ornamented the front of the albergo of that venerable language. This old palace, situated in the strada dei Cavalieri, falling into a dilapidated state, had been sold to a Jew, who pulled it down, and utterly demolished it "from turret to foundation stone." Mr. Wilkinson, with humble zeal, had saved the armorial bearings of its former knightly possessors from total loss and destruction by purchasing them. Is it not a subject for regret that these interesting memorials of England's chivalry are not placed for preservation in the British Museum?—Notes and Queries.

WHITE SLAVES IN THE BLACK SEA.—On the 12th July, Admiral Dundas issued an order that the trade in slaves from the Georgian and Caucasian coasts to Turkey should be put a stop to, and the ships used in the traffic confiscated, according to the provisions of an understanding entered into with the Sublime Porte.

RAPIDITY OF OMNIBUS TRAVELLING.—"Take up Bill," said an omnibus conductor to the driver. "Wip en up, here's that coal waggon a pissing on us again."

DIFFERENCES AND DISTINCTIONS.—A mule laden with salt, and an ass laden with wool, went over a brook together. By chance the mule's pack became wetted, the salt melted, and his burden became lighter. After they had passed the mule told his good fortune to the ass, who thinking to speed as well, wetted his pack at the next water, but his load became the heavier, and he broke down under it. Pause, therefore, before you follow example; that which helps one man may hinder another.

COMPOSITION OF AN ANTIQUELYAN MONSTER.—The iguanodon at the Crystal Palace consists of four iron columns 9 feet long by 7 inches diameter, 600 bricks, 650 5-inch half-round drain tiles, 38 casks of cement, 20 baskets of broken stone (making a total of 640 bushels of artificial stone), with 100 feet of iron hoopings, and 20 feet of cube inch bar.

OMAR PASHA AT A REVIEW.—Lord Raglan wore the plain uniform of a British general. But Omar Pasha! How shall this feeble pen do justice to a get-up which had certainly been organized totally irrespective of expenditure? But in the considerations performance of a duty it must be tried. To begin at the top. His fez was no ordinary skullcap, but still a fez. In the front thereof the precious metal was laid on with no sparing hand, forming some device, the nature of which was not apparent at a distance. His coat, a specimen of the genus frock—family, single-breasted; species, miraculosus. From his neck to his waist, it (the coat) was a mass of gold, the left breast glittering with stars, some of which were in diamonds to a fabulous amount. His nether garment was composed of white cashmere, with a broad gold stripe down the same. The schineta, a pure Damascus blade, with jewelled hilt. The horsecloth and holsters would have made the fortune of a plundering bashi-bazook. The thief might have retired from the stirring scenes of his profession to enjoy peace and his pipe under his vine and his figtree, had he gotten such a prize. The horse, a well-bred grey Arab, with small intelligent head, straight forehead, and open nostril, beautiful figure, and gentle as the most nervous lady could wish, and at will fiery enough to satisfy the most locomotive aile-de-camp. The above may convey a faint notion of Omar Pasha as he reviewed the troops.

ROCK SURGERY.—A farm servant in this neighbourhood was saved from suffocation on Friday last in a highly original and ingenious manner. A bone having stuck in her throat during dinner, and none of the family being able to get it extricated, her master called in the assistance of a neighbouring farmer who was passing by. The latter fastened a string round a piece of meat, and the girl with a great effort having managed to swallow it, he rapidly jerked it out again, and the bone along with it.—Greenock Advertiser.

CRICKET LIVING.—Tom Moore says in his diary, "In talking of cheap living, Jekyll mentioned a man who told him his eating cost him almost nothing; for on Sunday, said he, I always dine with an old friend, when I eat enough to last me until Wednesday, when I buy some tripe, which makes me so sick that I cannot eat again until Sunday."

This match was played at Lord's. It will be found that Mr. Mynn contributed no fewer than 54, an offering which every one around the ground gladly welcomed from that gentleman's bat, even though so large an individual score was calculated to militate against his bet. The final score presented this appearance:—

The servants of the above colleges played a match on Friday the 21st, on the Christ Church Ground, when the Worcester, as was fully anticipated, received a thorough good dressing, as the following score will show. The losers have had scarcely any practice together, and consequently, they were all abroad both in batting and fielding, with the exception of two veterans who showed some sport.

THE ELEVEN OF ENGLAND v. SIXTEEN OF THE BROUGHTON CLUB, WITH FOUR PLAYERS GIVEN.

This match, having been commenced at Manchester on Thursday the 20th, and resumed on Friday 21st, was brought to its conclusion on Saturday, when victory was proclaimed for the Eleven by 36 runs. It will only be he who has been at Manchester to witness one of these matches who can picture to himself the excitement this contest created, still less can the stranger conceive the sensation and anxieties which received birth by the results, first by the large innings of the Eleven, when the odds went at long points against Manchester, even amongst their own betting men; secondly, when it was found, great as had been that score, that the men of the Broughton Club had pulled up to within 30 of that number, and then that in their second innings the Eleven were got out for the comparatively small amount of 85. Bets again took another range, and although the Eleven, as will be seen, won, yet many thousands are said to have changed hands as the play proceeded. The final appearance of the score was as follows:—

DEATH FROM A CRICKET BALL.—On Thursday evening last, as some young men were playing at cricket in Roberts' Field, Cow-lane, the ball accidentally struck a boy, named William Abbott, son of Thomas Abbott, warper, of Poplar-street. The boy was standing about ten yards from the batter, and the ball struck him with such force as to knock him down. He was immediately conveyed home by one of the players, and two medical men attended him; but he died on Sunday afternoon. There is a footpath across the field where the accident happened, and the number of cricket balls flying about is said to make it dangerous to passers by. At the inquest, held on Monday, before Mr. E. Herford, city coroner, a verdict of "Accidental death" was returned.—Manchester Guardian.

RUGBY UNITED v. LEAMINGTON.

On Monday last, a match was played between the above clubs on the ground of the latter. The morning was a brilliant one. This induced a large company to wend their way from Rugby to "Famed Leamington Spa." The rural scenery on the road, and the beauty of the country, caused several parties to drive down rather than take the rail, being about the same distance, viz., fifteen miles. A jovial crew of youngsters engaged a van, and being sixteen in company, they were, as may be supposed, rather closely packed. The morning (like themselves in their journey through life) being unclouded at the beginning, they imagined it would be all sunshine, and their day was accordingly divested of its covering; but on their return it rained in torrents, accompanied with heavy peals of thunder, and frequent flashes of vivid lightning. Under such circumstances, it would have taken all the philosophy of a Mark Tapley to have been jolly. They were completely drenched; and one of them said he should remember the day of the month without making a note of it. The homeward journey occupied five hours.

The Rugby side went in first, by sending in W. Over and Osborn, whose steady play placed 33 on the score for a start, Osborn closely following in the wake of Over. J. Brown played remarkably well for 27—and not out, the second innings for 25. Caldecott made a fine hit to leg, but Astill caught the ball, which made the Rugbyians say "That's unfortunate," and the Leamington men say "That's the cheese." Sawyer, whose general play is on a par with his sort, suffered a reverse by Page felling his timber in the first innings without a mark, and Vernon catching his ball in the second innings with only one to tell. "Bravo Rouse" arose from the Spa men, and "who'd a thought it" from the other side.

Eyles said he was going the ruddy, as he gave two fine drives, for four each, and a single, when Astell took away his middle stump. The others did nothing worth telling about, but they meant well.

The Leamington side did not score so many by ten as Rugby; but, taking into the chapter the young blood they had to field against them, their score of 85 was very respectable. Of this number Mr. Rose obtained 18 not out; W. L. Vernon, Esq., 19; and C. Page, 10, who also bowled out four crack men on the Rugby side. The rest would have obtained a much greater score "had it not been for so and so," or the "glorious uncertainty of the game, amid the chapter of accidents that impede the progress of the well-meaning."

The rain, which had fallen during the afternoon and impeded the play, put a stop to the game at six o'clock, and the Rugby United brought away the ball as a trophy of the victory.

A cold collation was provided on the ground by Mr. Chandler, of the Newmarket Inn, to which about thirty sat down.

PORCHESTER v. EAST HANTS.

This match was played at Porchester on Monday, July 24th, between eleven of the Union Club at Porchester, and second eleven of the East Hants Club. The fielding on the East Hants side was remarkably good; and any one will allow, considering that the Porchester eleven never practised or played together before they did their share. The day was beautifully fine, but very hot, and there was a very fair sprinkling of company to enliven the scene.

At the termination of the first innings, East Hants were one ahead of their opponents. The Porchester eleven, at the end of their second innings, increased their score to 111, and East Hants only reached to 36 runs, leaving Porchester winners by 74 runs.

A correspondent says: "At the commencement, betting was 2 and 3 to 1 on the gentlemen—a fact justified by appearances and the first innings. It was supposed that the players could not keep Lord H. Paget's twisters and C. Beauclerk's splendid balls out of the wicket, nor did they make any lengthened stand against it; but the bowling of Gray and Fillerly proved a match for the gentlemen,—they came with a misdo-like certainty that would not be denied. C. Beauclerk, Esq., and Captain Parry gave the lookers-on a rare treat with their splendid batting, and a catch made by Lord A. Paget was deservedly applauded; and two by Gray in the slip were well caught. P. Curtis made two good innings, and H. Cole, Esq., showed us what he used to do in days gone by. Thanks to the Marquis of Anglesey and the Lords Paget for getting up this match, which is to be followed with another, when we shall anticipate another rare treat, and hope Lord H. will not be so unfortunate as to be bowled off his legs by a ball pitched two feet wide of the wicket. Gray and Fillerly were both out by playing the ball first upon their legs and then into the wicket. All seemed delighted with the day's play, and were sorry when it was over."

ST. AUSTINE v. ST. COLUMB.

This game was played on the ground of the St. Columb Club, on Tuesday the 4th inst., and terminated in favour of St. Columb, with four wickets to go down. St. Columb having won the toss, sent St. Austine into the bowling of H. Vyvyan, Esq., and the "renowned" Oke, the innings, as will be seen on reference to the score, produced but a melancholy 21, of which Burrows—decidedly the safest bat in the St. Austine eleven—scored 13; the others, with one or two exceptions, contributing "eggs" enough to set an old duck. St. Columb's first innings produced 47, the best players, as is often the case, being got rid of cheaply; this, however, placed St. Columb 26 ahead, and some notion was entertained of winning in one innings, but Burrows and Scott frustrated the good intentions of the St. Columb gentlemen, by scoring 15 and 19 respectively off their own bats, which they did by steady play, and for a time, appeared to bid defiance to the skill and activity of both bowlers and fielders, but the dearest of friends must part, and so it came to pass with these two men. Vyvyan succeeded in entering Burrows' wicket, and Scott quickly followed him, being caught at off mid; these dislodged the crash of falling "timbers" now began, and so continued until the last man had laid his egg, and so closed the innings with 52 runs on the books, leaving St. Columb 27 to go in and win, which were obtained, but not until six wickets were laid low.

WATER POISONED

LEADEN PIPES.

"The above engraving represents accurately a section of a leaden pipe, which was employed for a short time in conveying water from a well on the grounds of Mr. Dick, of Bouchurch, Isle of Wight. The original section of pipe is 8 1/2 in. long, 2 1/2 in. diameter, and 5-16 in. thick. A great part of the internal surface is corroded by the action of the water; but, as shown in the drawing, four deep excavations have been made, and another is slanted out of view by the manner in which the section of the pipe has been cut. The water has cut these deep pits almost through the pipe, and not only upon the portion which we have illustrated, but has formed similar channels throughout the entire length."—Expositor.

N.B.—The corrosive water of the Isle of Wight has no effect on Gutta Percha Tubing. See Testimonial below:—

"In reply to your letter received this morning, respecting the Gutta Percha Tubing for pump service, I can state, with much satisfaction, it answers perfectly. Many builders and other persons have lately examined it, and there is not the least apparent difference since the first laying down, now several years; and I am informed that it is to be adopted generally in the houses that are being erected here."

CAUTION.

MESSRS. ALLSOPP AND SONS find it necessary to caution the Public, and especially Shippers of their Ales to the Colonies, against Frauds committed by parties in selling spurious Ales for those of Messrs. Allsopp and Sons.

Messrs. ALLSOPP and SONS have felt compelled by the extent to which this disgraceful practice has been carried, to proceed in several cases by obtaining injunctions from the Court of Chancery, and have ultimately been driven to prosecute criminally for the commission of this offence. They beg to call attention to the Case of THE QUEEN v. GRAY and GOSLIN, in which LORD CAMPBELL sentenced the said parties charged to "Twelve Months Imprisonment, with Hard Labour"—"Vide 'Times' and 'Morning Advertiser,' of the 18th May.

Messrs. ALLSOPP and SONS will thank all persons having reason to doubt the genuineness of any article sold under their name, to send them the earliest information, in order that immediate steps may be taken for prosecuting the parties.

Messrs. ALLSOPP and SONS will be happy to furnish the Names of respectable Houses, where a supply of their Ales may be depended on, as genuine from the Brewery.

HEALTH RESTORED.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.

AN EXTRAORDINARY CURE OF DROPSY, AFTER SUFFERING FOR MONTHS.

Copy of a Letter from Mr. C. Briggs, Chemist, Goole, Dated February 15th, 1853.

To PROFESSOR HOLLOWAY.

SIR,—I have much pleasure in informing you of a most surprising cure of Dropsy, recently effected by your valuable medicine. Charles Jackson, of this place, was afflicted with Dropsy for upwards of eighteen months, to such an extent that it caused his body and limbs to be much swollen, and water oozed as it were from his skin, so that a daily change of apparel became necessary, notwithstanding the various remedies tried, and the different medical men consulted, all was of no avail, until he commenced using your Pills, which, and a strict attention to the printed directions, he was effectually cured and his health perfectly re-established. If you deem this worthy of publicity, you are at liberty to use it.

I am, Sir, your respectfully,

(Signed) G. Briggs.

Sold at the Establishment of Professor HOLLOWAY, 241, Strand, (near Temple-bar,) London, and by all respectable Druggists & Dealers in Medicines throughout the civilised world, at the following prices:—

THE FIELD OF WAR.

OUR WOODEN WALLS.

THE BALTIC FLEET.

THE ENGLISHMEN KILLED AND TAKEN AT GAMLA CARLEBY.

The following lists are communicated by the Admiralty:—
List of English seamen and marines found dead in the boat captured at Gamla Carleby on the 7th of June, 1854:—
Nathaniel J. Morphy, mate; Robert Howell, marine; Wm. Wedge, marine; George Wilson, sailor; William Collins, sailor; James Westlake, sailor.

List of English seamen and marines made prisoners at Gamla Carleby, on the 7th of June, 1854:—John Stollery, private Royal Marines; Alfred Bowles, private Royal Marines; Edward Tanday, private Royal Marines; Joseph Dowling, James Dart, and William Billing, privates Royal Marines, wounded and under treatment. James Higgins and Walter Croot, privates Royal Marines, died in consequence of their wounds. David Pickard, sailor; William Greenaway, sailor; George Bismore, sailor; Thomas Evans, sailor; George Ferris, John James, and James Kingcombe, sailors, wounded but recovered. William Herring, John Dunstan, Edwin Heep, and James Litton, seamen, wounded and under treatment.

The Vulture, 6 guns, paddlewheel steam-frigate, Captain Frederick H. H. Glasse, on Saturday last took in more than 30 tons of shot, and a large number of live shell, in addition to which she takes the new projectile gun with a bountiful supply of shells for it. She has since sailed, and is so deeply laden with ammunition, &c., that she draws 18 inches water beyond her usual marks.

The Tyne, transport, arrived off Elsinore with provisions and stores for the Baltic fleet on the 15th inst. She was towed through the Drogden by the Hertha steamer, to join the fleet at Baro Sound.

The Moniteur learns, by advices of the 22nd from Copenhagen, that the Stromboli was at Elsinore with two transports, and that Commodore Grey had entered the Cattegat. The passage had been a very good one.

Nynore, Saturday Morning.—Seven war-ships, sailing vessels and steamers, are in the Belt steering southwards. The flag is undistinguishable, but it is believed that the ships compose the British squadron with French troops on board.

Nynore, Saturday Evening.—The British squadron, consisting of two three-deckers, three two-deckers, and three paddle-steamers, have passed the Great Belt, and are steering up the Baltic without having stopped here.

It is expected that they have gone to the Aaland Isles, there to meet the Baltic fleets of both countries, and to take possession of them as a permanent station for the land force.

We understand that in consequence of the short supplies of fresh provisions to the fleet, Messrs. Shaw and Maxwell have despatched the fast-sailing vessel Harlequin, laden with most kinds of provisions, wines, &c., for the purpose of supplying the wants of the gallant force stationed in the Baltic. The authorities have also sent by the Harlequin a large quantity of naval stores and clothing, for the use of the fleet.

The cholera has been very bad. The Austrolitz in the French fleet, and the Majestic in our own, have been the principal sufferers. In the Majestic there have been nearly 40 cases, and she has 130 on her sick list. But the fleet has now a more healthy berth, and there will no longer be any occasion to use the dirty waters of the Neva, which are supposed to have caused the sickness, when the fleet was near Cronstadt. The fleet now is generally healthy, and there is scarcely a case of cholera among either the French or English.

DANTZIC, July 18.—The British merchant steamer, Nicholas I., Captain Hemler, and the Mecklenburg screw steamer Grand Duke Frederick Franz, Captain Voss, as well as the brig, Royal William, Captain Reed, all with provisions, are gone to the combined fleets at Baro Sound. The barque Albion, Captain Walker, with a cargo of coals from Cardiff, for the supply of her Majesty's ships, has also left this port for Baro Sound.

MEMEL, July 17.—H.M.S. Anchor, 14, Captain Heathcote, has arrived here from her cruising ground. She had captured the Dutch vessel Wilmino, Vosman, master, of Vandum, from Amsterdam, under suspicious circumstances, in the Gulf of Finland; on overhauling her cargo, contraband of war was found, a prize crew was put on board, and the vessel is to be sent to the Port of London for condemnation.

BEALIN, Tuesday Evening.—The British squadron, of seven sail, containing the French troops, was in Kiogo Bay on the 24th.

On the 25th, the combined fleets steered for the Aaland Isles.

Twenty vessels of the fleet had been telegraphed off the Soderam Light, on the Swedish coast.

THE HAGUE, JULY 26.

By virtue of an order by Admirals Napier and Parséval

Déschènes, neutral vessels are authorised to come out of blockaded ports.

HAMBURG, JULY 26.

The Dauntless is arrived, bringing sick and wounded from the Baltic. Among the former is Admiral Corry.

OUR FRENCH ALLIES.

On Saturday afternoon the town of Deal presented a scene of gaiety and festivity, on the occasion of the departure of the French transport screw steamer Prince, with the 3rd Regiment of French Infantry of the line for the Baltic. The Prince had anchored in the Downs in consequence of having received some injury. The yard was crowded with thousands of spectators, who thronged there to witness the happy union of England and France. The band performed several celebrated airs, after which Mr. Reaks, the ex-Mayor, came forward and made an appropriate address on the alliance of France and England, concluding with three cheers, in which the spectators joined, for the Emperor Napoleon, &c. After the last piece, composed in honour of the union of the two countries, had been sung and played with great enthusiasm, "God save the Queen" was repeated, and followed by loud shouts of "Vive Victoria." The band then adjourned to a spacious building in the naval yard, and partook of an English entertainment. After the repast they paraded the town arm-in-arm with our English soldiers. At 8 p.m. they commenced embarking for the screw steamer Prince, amid loud cheering and waving of hats and handkerchiefs from the crowd assembled along the beach to witness their departure, the band playing "God save the Queen."

On the Sunday afternoon, about half-past five o'clock, the Prince, 2,700 tons burden, having 1,142 French troops and 21 horses on board, left the Downs. She took the transport Herefordshire, with 829 French troops, and the transport Edwin Fox, in tow, and proceeded for the Baltic. The total number of French troops shipped on board Her Majesty's vessels and the six hired transports, for service in the Baltic, is 9,850 men and 100 horses.

The Minister of Marine has received despatches from the Admiral in command of the naval division in the Levant, dated the 12th. The expeditions against the pirates, and the seizure and disarmament of all the pirates and their accomplices, were going on with great activity. Eight of the pirates who murdered the crew of the schooner Harrietta are in the hands of justice. The Solon steamer recently captured a pirate chief, named Nicolo Frikl, near Cape Sanium, as well as several of his followers. The allied cruisers seize all the arms they find on board the vessels they search. The insurance in Thessaly is entirely at an end. Chroni, the Rayah chief, who with 600 men was still in the country, was completely surrounded by the troops of Abdi Pasha. He gave himself up, and was taken on board the Triton steam corvette and landed at Chalcis.

THE EMBARKATION OF FRENCH TROOPS AT CALAIS.—DASHIER, 4, CAPTAIN LEFEBRE.—The embarkation of the French troops on board English line-of-battle ships has been so successfully carried out by Captain Lefebre, in the employment of the Admiralty, that he has received a letter from the French Admiral Lepierre, with whom Captain Lefebre was in constant communication, thanking him in the most cordial and friendly manner for the energetic manner and unflinching co-operation to carry into effect the wishes of both nations. Such a testimonial of the recognition of his services must be highly gratifying not only to Captain Lefebre, but to all who desire the closest alliance between the two nations. The Dasher has sailed, and is ready for any service at an hour's notice.

Advices under date Gibraltar, July 10th, announce that the French transport Pericles, Guichon master, from Bordeaux, with provisions, and 2,000,000 francs for the French commissariat at Constantinople, had been in collision off Malaga with a steamer, and was sunk with the treasure.

SAILING OF TROOPS.

At six o'clock on Friday morning the 21st, two detachments of the 63rd Regiment, consisting of 1,000 men, under the command of Lieut.-Colonel Wynne, marched from the military barracks to Merchant's-quay, Cork, accompanied by the band of the 91st Regiment, and a large number of soldiers from other corps. Three of the river steamers, the Prince Arthur, the Prince, and Royal Alice, were then moored to the quay, and in a short period the whole of the men were placed on board. Both bands then struck up "And Lang Syne," and the boats moved from the quay amid the hearty cheering of the assembled multitude. On their arrival at Queenstown the troops embarked on board the Avon transport. There are 950 men of the 63rd Regiment from Cork, and 222 men of the 46th Regiment from Southampton, exclusive of officers, on board the Avon, which is now on the way to Varna.

A draft, consisting of three officers and 103 men, of the 54th Regiment, has arrived in Cork, to await the arrival of another transport to take them to the seat of war, to join the service companies.

THE HIMALAYA AT LIVERPOOL.—Liverpool, July 22.—The Himalaya arrived in the Mersey yesterday evening from Kingstown, having on board two detachments of Scots Greys, with 158 horses, 64 of which were remounts for cavalry in Turkey, and the following officers:—Major Sullivan, Captains Williams and Freeman, Lieutenant Buchanan, Cornet Prendergast, and 70 non-commissioned officers. The Himalaya left Kingstown at 5 a.m. yesterday, and steamed to the Bell-Buoy in nine hours, making on the average, by fair steaming, 13½ knots, or 15 statute miles, per hour. She was obliged to remain outside for water, which prevented her from making her appearance in the river till about 7.30 p.m. yesterday. It was intended to take her into the Wellington Dock basin to-morrow—an arrangement, however, which the low state of the tides will preclude. She will therefore remain in the river until an early hour on Tuesday morning, when she will be laid alongside the floating landing stage, at George's pier, where the main body of the Scots Greys will embark. After embarking the whole of the troops and horses the Himalaya will immediately take her departure for Varna, which she is expected to reach in about 12 days. [She has since sailed.—ED.]

DEVONPORT.—The Simla, steam-transport, with the 4th Light Dragoons and 316 horses on board, was taken from the basin at Keyham to the Sound on Wednesday week, where she took in her powder, and at 3.30 p.m. sailed for the Black Sea.

MALTA.—The Portafoglio Maltese, of the 15th instant, announces the arrival, on the 14th, of the steamer, Kangaroo, from Cork, having on board the officers and 766 rank and file belonging to the different regiments of the English army in the East. On the 15th she left for the Levant, having in tow the transport Apollo, laden with provisions, ammunition, and other articles for the English army and navy.

TROOPS ON THE MARCH, OR UNDER ORDERS FOR FOREIGN SERVICE.

Major-General the Hon. Sir George Cathcart, Adjutant-General to the Forces, and Colonel Torrens, Assistant Quartermaster-General, will shortly embark to join the troops serving in Turkey.

The Scots Greys left Manchester on Monday morning, at eight o'clock, on their way to Liverpool, to embark for the East. A large concourse of people had assembled to bid them "God speed," and in addition to their own trumpet the band of the 3rd Dragoons accompanied them out of town. They were loudly cheered by the people, and all the men appeared to be in good spirits, and returned the greetings so liberally and heartily offered. They commenced embarking next morning on board the Himalaya, with 200 horses.

Lieutenant-Colonel Shadforth, two captains, and four subalterns of the 57th Regiment, in Linerick garrison, received orders to be in readiness at the shortest notice to proceed to Turkey with 214 rank and file, 4 sergeants, and 2 drummers from the depot.

Major C. C. Young's field battery of the Royal Artillery is placed under orders to proceed to the Baltic with the siege guns, and will be the first detachment of Royal Artillery for that destination.

Captain J. N. A. Freese's No. 7 company, 12th battalion, has been placed under orders to hold themselves in readiness for immediate embarkation for service in the East, and the greatest exertions are now being made to have the whole of the six field batteries now under orders embarked in the course of the present week.

No. 3 company is to be attached to the siege guns, and Nos. 4, 5, 6, and 7 will have 9-pounder field batteries for service in Turkey.

SOLDIERS' WIVES AND FAMILIES.

THE WIVES OF SOLDIERS IN THE EAST.—There are upwards of one hundred women, wives of soldiers now in the East, who are dependent for the support of themselves and children, upon the small weekly pittance, which is every Friday paid to them, under the direction of Major Bond, out of the general fund subscribed throughout the country. We understand that this allowance is 3s. weekly for a wife only, and 1s. additional for every child. It is obvious that it is wholly inadequate to supply the barest necessities, and many of these women are seeking to eke out a livelihood by their own labour, either as charwomen, laundresses, sempstresses, or by taking domestic service. At the suggestion of his worship the mayor, we lay these simple facts before our readers, in the hope that, from sympathy for these poor and industrious women, separated by the necessities of war from their natural protectors, many parties will feel disposed to give them temporary, or permanent, employment. The women assemble every Friday morning at ten o'clock, at the infantry barracks, Regent-road, Salford; and any communications addressed there, to Major Bond, on this subject, will, we are sure, receive from that gentleman the most prompt and considerate attention.—Manchester Guardian.

AFFECTING INCIDENT.—While the 46th Regiment were in rank in the barrack square at Windsor, prior to marching out for conveyance to Southampton en route to Constantinople, a motherless child, six years old, clung to its father's legs. He was perceptibly ordered to send it away, but resolutely answered, "I will not." Lieutenant Hutton, touched with the scene, took the child and placed two ten pound notes in its hand, with the hope that some one would relieve it. This, however, proved unnecessary, for having afterwards made his own mother (who is staying at Windsor) acquainted with the circumstances, she adopted the little fellow, in time to give the father an assurance that the child should be well cared for.—Bucks Advertiser.

THE TURKS AND RUSSIANS.

We have got, says a correspondent, a lady-camp at Therapia, the relic of our heroes at the seat of war. Mudam's Yousouf, d'Altonville, Doudas, Chabannes, and several others reside in the village, as also Madame de St. Arnaud, who, by the way, shines above the rest, as an old soldier and able tactician, and more especially as regards siege operations, having encamped herself and suite in the Imperial Kiosk, and carried a position, as far as I am aware, hitherto impregnable to friend or foe. It is reported, on what foundation I know not, that Marshal St. Arnaud will take the command not only of the Turkish armies, but also of the Turkish forces on the Danube; and that Omar Pasha will be named generalissimo of both the armies of Asia—of that of Kars and of Batoum. Should this really be true, then prospects will brighten, and an energetic movement will, if skillfully directed, drive the enemy into the Caspian.

Omar Pasha has proposed that a French and an English officer shall be attached to each Turkish brigade, to assist in strategic operations. A corps of interpreters is to be formed, and placed at the disposal of the three commanders.

The following intelligence has been received from Hermanstadt, dated the 22nd inst.:

"Prince Gortschakoff has announced his intention of defending Moldavia and Wallachia with 200,000 men. His headquarters are at Slobodzie. Russian reinforcements are moving from Muhlavia and the Jalomnitz. The right wing of the Russians has advanced to Slobodzie. General Ludea has concentrated his forces at Kalamisch. Prince Gortschakoff opposes already 110,000 men and 20 batteries to the Ottomans. The Turks continue to cross the Danube at Giurgevo. Reconnoitring skirmishes have taken place. On the 16th Generals Kattenin and Orloff were wounded."

Advices from Jassy, of the 12th July, state that the military hospitals in Moldavia are so crowded that the wounded are obliged to be sent back to Bessarabia. It is calculated that in Moldavia there are 8,000 wounded and sick; in Wallachia about 12,000. The scurvy is prevalent in most of the hospitals; also divers fevers, though not of a dangerous character. The cholera prevails in Bessarabia.

On the 12th of July Prince Gortschakoff issued an announcement that he would personally lead on his brave soldiers to the approaching contest.

The Moniteur confirms the reported action near Giurgevo. General Buturlin and the Hetman of the Cossacks were wounded.

Lieutenant Burke, R.E., Captain Meynell, and another English gentleman whose name is not ascertained, have been killed in action near Ratschuk.

It will be remembered that some weeks since the disappearance of an English soldier at Sentari created a great sensation. Two Montenegrins have been arrested at Urdkar-Skelessi by the Turkish police. In the house in which they were concealed the complete uniform of a British soldier was found, and there seems to be no doubt that the unfortunate man was murdered by them. These men are in prison, but have as yet obstinately denied the charge. The matter has been referred to Lord Raglan.

THE WAR IN EUROPE.

DESPATCH FROM OMAR PASHA.

"According to the official reports from Huké-Hassan and Said Pasha, which reached me on the 13th Cheval, a body of our troops advanced on the 12th inst. (July 8) to the Island of Camu and Moganoglon, fronting Routschouk and Giurgevo. The enemy brought up a large force of artillery with ammunition from Giurgevo and the village of Talapozia, and powerful reinforcements were continually arriving, but still they were unable, thanks to the Most High, to resist the valour of our troops, and fled after the first shock in great disorder. We moreover destroyed all his fortifications and transports on the stream. The Russian casualties were enormous, amounting, according to my reports, to 5,000 men in killed and wounded. On our side we have also to deplore the loss of 500, all comprised. The fervent prayers of the whole army have been offered up for this new success, as well as for the preservation of our august young sovereign.

(Signed)

"OMAR.

"Schumli, Cheval 13."

On the 12th instant a courier from St. Petersburg arrived at Bucharest, where he was met by Prince Gortschakoff, who had left his headquarters for that purpose. The Czar has approved the new plan of campaign submitted to him by Gortschakoff. The courier brought, it is pretended, a very flattering letter from the Czar to the Prince. The Russians are to resume offensive operations, and the Prince has received orders to drive back the Turks at any price across the Danube. Letters from Constantinople state that the Austrian Internuncio has expressed himself very strongly respecting the "presumption" of Omar Pasha in crossing the Danube, after it had been agreed that the occupation should be effected by Austria; and it appears by no means improbable that the purposes of the Ottoman marshal will be once more thwarted by Austrian diplomacy at Constantinople, where it is either unresisted, or resisted in vain, by the active allies of Turkey.

The following is an extract from a letter written by an officer of the 17th Lancers:—

"CAMP, DEVNA, JULY 7.

"This is, I think, the most glorious country in the creation, and I only wish it was in the hands of our people; they would know how to make the most of it. But these miserable apathetics don't know how to appreciate the blessings the Almighty has heaped upon them. You know that Ireland is a most fertile country; but, in my opinion, this far surpasses it. We are situated in a large vale, and the hills around us are grand, and covered to the summit with luxuriant foliage, though of stunted growth; yet there is very little food for the gun beyond lots of doves, which one likes less to eat than to shoot. Wild cats, snakes, &c., abound, but, as they are not eatable, and powder and shot is scarce in consequence of the limit to our luggage, we do not shoot them. We have been here about three weeks in advance of the British army altogether, and daily expecting something to do for our country, but have been idle. A week since Sir G. Brown's division joined us, and we thought we should surely go to Silistria; but no. The day before yesterday Omar Pasha came down from Schumli, and we were turned out for his inspection. We mustered four regiments of cavalry, and one troop of Horse Artillery. We gave him one charge, and it was a charge. He clapped his hands and cried 'bono, bono' (good, good), and afterwards said that he believed nothing could stand against such cavalry. I don't wonder he should think so, for if the Turks could hold their enemy in such good check with their very irregular soldiers and little cuts of horses, we should make strange havoc among them. Yesterday 5,000 Bashi-Bazouks encamped near our lines, and such rum-looking devils of soldiers I never saw; I would be bound to ride sick through them six deep. And then their weapons are of all sorts—from a lance, 14 feet long, down to a hammer, tied on a stick, very like those used by an English saddler; they were on their way to be trained under French officers at Varna. Omar Pasha said the Russians had retired from Silistria, and wanted an armistice of 61 days—what for he cannot make out, unless it is to come on with fresh troops against us. Never mind; let them come as fast as they like, we will render a good account of them, or I very much mistake. Within this half-hour a report has reached us that we are to move on. It is impossible to say what is to happen. Omar Pasha is to be here again to-morrow, to see all the cavalry and infantry again. I wish to goodness they would push on, and let us get to work, for this idle, useless life is getting perfectly monotonous; besides this, we are nearly starved to death, having nothing but our rations to live upon, precisely the same as the men. You good people read in the papers that we are well provided for, and that beer, porter, tea, coffee, &c., are all provided for us; but that is all humbug, for we have not seen or smelt a drop of beer since the 4th of June, when we were at Varna, and then we were able only to procure two barrels of porter for the whole regiment. Tea there was, but now that is out, and now we get coffee in the berry, and have to roast it, and also pound it ourselves. We find this very different from Chobham, I can assure you, for if a fellow does by any odd chance get anything good, he is as selfish over it as a great sulky boy. I wish some of you good people would give the papers a hint that the country ought to treat us better than they do, especially in the postage arrangements; for, although I know there are numerous papers and letters on the road for me, four letters and three papers are all I have received since I left dear old England. I hope you will write and tell me all the news you have, for a letter from England is a great God-send. The weather is intensely hot, and we are all as black as niggers. We are close to a beautiful river, which I think adds to the health of the men. The horses, poor brutes, suffer most; we have lost 30, and expect to lose more; they are all picketed in the open air without the least covering, and sometimes it rains in torrents, such drops as I never saw before, for days together, but in a few hours the sun comes out and all is dried up, and nature is all smiles again. Our poor women seem to weather it out well; ten of them are in a way soon to present to their husbands pledges of their affection."

The Moniteur de l'Armée publishes accounts from Varna of the 9th instant:—"The allied armies," it says, "were still encamped in the neighbourhood. Their sanitary condition was excellent. The troops occupied a high tableland a league and a half distant from the town, and in nowise suffered from the intense heat that prevailed. The only fact to be noticed—and in a political point of view most important—was the arrival at Schumli, at the headquarters of the Generalissimo, Omar Pasha, of Lieutenant-Colonel Kalisch and two other Austrian officers. On the 10th they were expected at Varna, where they were going to concert measures with the Generals-in-Chief of the allied armies. Our letters confirm the doubts we have already expressed relative to the participation of any portion of the allied troops in the engagements fought between the Ottoman and Russian army since the siege of Silistria. They positively state that down to the 10th not a single French regiment had left the camp at Varna. This delay, however, has been turned to account. The army is now well organised. The second division had arrived by land. During its long march from Boulair to Varna our soldiers admirably bore the fatigue of the road, which was rendered still more difficult by the heat and want of water. Military discipline was strictly observed, private property was respected, and wherever they encamped they avoided injuring the crops in the ground. The Generals-in-Chief had completed their preparations and sent several officers to the Danube to reconnoitre the country between Rustchuk and Silistria. A sub-intendant, accompanied by a chief physician and a number of officers of the administration, left Varna on the 9th to explore the resources of the Upper Danube as far as Belgrade. Two other officers had gone on board the Vauban to execute a similar reconnaissance in the direction of Batoum and along the coast of Circassia, so that when operations commence, no matter on what side, the army will be ready to act."

THE WAR IN ASIA.

A private letter from Constantinople of the 9th states that the Turko-Egyptian division sent to the Asiatic coast, under the orders of Hassan Pasha, had succeeded in landing a supply of arms, ammunition, and field artillery for Schamyl's army, which was every day undergoing a more regular organisation.

A letter from Kars says:—"The emissaries sent to Schamyl have returned. They state that the Circassian chief is keeping considerable forces in check. He has seized several places situated in the mountain range between Deibent and Kauba. Many Mussulmen deserters come over to the Turkish camp. It is declared that the Russian government has sent word to its generals in Asia, that there was no possibility of sending them any reinforcements, and that they must keep on the defensive."

NAVAL OPERATIONS IN THE BLACK SEA.

THE following officers, taken in the Tiger, will be exchanged for the Russian prisoners carried to Odessa in the Fary—namely, Lieutenants A. Hamilton and Wills E. Stone; F. Eglington, Master; Lieutenant Ansell, of the Marines; the Surgeon, Mr. Domville; Paymaster Lanco; the Mate, Mr. Wilkinson; Second Master Sulistat; and Midshipmen J. E. Scudamore, T. Sullivan, Wood, Kent, Beatson, Hammond, Rowden, Nind, and Robinson; and warrant officers Quin, Delaney, and Beckford.

H.M.S. SANSPARTEL, VARNA, July 7.—We are the only British line-of-battle ship here at present, having left the fleet at Balchick on the 1st inst. We are just returned from a month's cruise, with arms, ammunition, and troops, leaving them at different places along the Circassian coast. The troops are leaving this place every day for the seat of war, and we expect hourly to go to Sebastopol.

VARNA, July 12.—Captain Parker, in command of the Firebrand, has been killed in action whilst attacking a stockade. Captain W. Stewart, now in command of the Modeste, is appointed to succeed him. He is son to Admiral Stewart, superintendent of the dockyard here. We are at present very comfortable here, it is a delightful locality. We get supplies of food at very moderate prices—a good lamb, 2s. 6d.; chickens, 2d. each; eggs and milk in plenty, but no vegetables; we are very badly off for salt. It is all owing to the mismanagement of the commissariat, whose arrangement has been faulty to a degree. Report says Lord Raglan has openly blamed Mr. Filder. For five days our men were without breakfast or supper, and many days without salt. From Balchick we learn that Admiral Lyons has been inspecting all the ships. He was much pleased with the discipline of the ships, and the gunnery especially. The Albion, he said, could not be surpassed, and complimented both officers and men on the efficiency they displayed. All the troops are encamped about eight miles out of Varna, and it is a sight well worth a trip to view. News has arrived we are to go and attack Sebastopol, and that batteries are coming for the troops which we are to take up. The French have five more ships of the line than we, but we are still in hopes of leading in. The light division are at Aladin, a village about nine miles from Varna, and the cavalry at Devna, about 20 miles from this. The 50th and 1st Royals have come up from Gallipoli. The 4th remain there for good. The fleet are lying at Kavarina Bay. Arelhusa, Vengeance, Bellerophon, and three Frenchmen are lying in Varna Bay.

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 13.—Yesterday the funeral of Captain Parker, of the Firebrand, took place. This officer, who was the youngest post-captain in the service, met with his death in storming the stockade near the mouth of the Danube. He was shot through the heart. His body was brought down from Varna in the Caradoc, and buried yesterday with all military honours. At about five o'clock yesterday afternoon minute guns announced that the body was being lowered from the ship, which was lying at anchor at Tophana. About 500 men of the 30th and 19th regiments (the remaining British force at Constantinople) came over from the barracks at Sentari, and headed the procession. They were closely followed by the French crew of the Charlemagne, all with reversed arms. The officers and crews of the Sardinian and American frigates lying here likewise joined the procession. The coffin was placed upon a Turkish gun, drawn by eight horses. It was covered with the British ensign. After it followed her Majesty's ambassador, Lord Stratford de Redcliffe, and all the members of the British legation, with the crew of the Firebrand (Captain Parker's own men) without arms. British, French, Turkish, and officers of other nations, with a host of private individuals in mourning attire, brought up the rear. They proceeded along the main street of Pera towards the great cemetery, in which is situated the English burial-ground. It was a very large and melancholy procession, and drew great crowds of people to the spot. Turks, Greeks, and Armenians, blocked the way by thousands. It so happened that on reaching the Turkish artillery barracks, the men were at their exercise with the guns, and it was pleasing to see them immediately drawn out in a line, and give a testimony to the dead body of their ally by a military salute. The procession passed on, and on reaching the cemetery the soldiers formed a circle round the grave. After the termination of the funeral service, three rounds were fired by all the military and the sailors present, the music and muffled drums playing in the interval of loading those doleful notes which strike so sadly on the ear, and sink so deeply into the hearts of the bystanders. It was a very large procession, and made a great impression upon the crowd assembled. On the termination of the ceremony, the military closed their ranks and returned to their quarters, the band playing a lively air. The rest of the mourners then dispersed to their several homes.

A DESPATCH dated Odessa, July 14, states that on the 13th three steamers arrived and destroyed some works erected there. The allies fired some thousand shots. The Russians lost the customary one man.

ODESSA ADVICES in the Vienna Lloyd state that, on the 8th of July, a steam frigate left Sebastopol with a favourable breeze, and reached Odessa without being sighted by the allied cruisers. This vessel, says the Lloyd, makes the sixth ship that has profited by a favourable wind to reach Odessa, where a respectable naval force is thus gradually collecting. The land troops are encamped outside Odessa, and it is thought there that the city is sufficiently secure against any attack.

FORT BOWEN GOLD AND SILVER MINING COMPANY.—At an extraordinary general meeting of the shareholders in this company, held on Monday, at their offices, New Broad-street, Mr. Braine, in the chair, a resolution was passed authorising the directors to accept a transfer of the property of the West Granada or Veraguas Gold and Silver Mining Company, and in consideration to pay the sum of £9,000 out of the first and second calls in full of all demands against the Fort Bowen Company. The chairman stated also that 51,910 shares had been paid up out of the subscription for 80,000.

The arrival is announced of two more vessels from Geelong, viz., the Bernard-ay, with 17,324 ounces of gold, and the Poictiers, with 16,000 ounces, together 33,324 ounces, worth about £133,300. The Augusta has also arrived from Adelaide, but it is not yet known if she has any gold on freight. The demand for gold for exportation continues, the Paris exchange not having improved, but the late Australian receipts are not yet in hand. The £86,000 in gold brought in by the Marino Moore (reported last week) is temporarily deposited in the Bank.

The Europa steamer, from the United States, brings 353,000 dollars, value £70,600.

THE TUDOR is announced from Melbourne, with 33,034 ounces of gold, valued at £152,000.

Foreign Intelligence.

THE Moniteur contains a despatch from Biarritz of the 21st, announcing that the Emperor and Empress arrived there on that day. The people received their Majesties with enthusiasm. The preparations already commenced in Paris, for the fêtes of the 15th of August, are on a most extensive scale. The Government and the municipality of Paris have voted money for that purpose to the amount of £22,000 sterling.

NEWS HAS REACHED LISBON that the Portuguese Government schooner Trinidad had been taken by a British cruiser and sent to the Mixed Commission at St. Helena with 40 slaves on board.

THE ITALIAN PAPERS announce that the Grand Duke of Tuscany has accepted the resignation of Prince Joseph Poniatowsky, as Minister to the Courts of Paris, London, and Brussels; and that the Marquis Tannay de Werth, the present Secretary of Legation, will temporarily remain as chargé d'affaires at the three courts.

ADVICES FROM VERONA of the 22nd inst. state that disturbances had taken place at Parma. The soldiers were fired upon from the roofs and windows of the houses. The Austrian troops maintained the upper hand on all points, and the Parmese troops behaved well.

ABDAS PASHA, THE VICEROY OF EGYPT, died on the 14th July, of apoplexy. Said Pasha immediately assumed the government. The son of Abbas Pasha, who was at Malta when tidings of his father's death reached that island, at once left with his suite for Alexandria. That capital was tranquil on the 10th.

THE RUSSIANS IN CHINA.

The Malta, with the declaration of war by combined France and England against Russia, arrived at Hong Kong on the 25th of May. Within an hour the blue peter was flying on board H.M.S. Winchester, 50 guns; Spartan, 28 guns; and paddle-steamer Barraclough, 6 guns; and at sundown those vessels left the harbour, bound, it was generally believed, in search of the Russian frigate Pallas, and curvettes Olivuntza, Dwine, and Aurora—all presumed to be hovering on the coast of China, waiting for the announcement of war, to commence offensive operations. Admiral Stirling, with commendable foresight, took due precaution in preventing the Russian admiral from obtaining the despatches which had been kindly forwarded to him (by his agents here) in the British ship Akbar. It is said that before the Akbar reached Shanghai her mails were taken out of her by H.M. steam-ship Rattler, and that they now lie at the British consulate, Shanghai, under seal; applications for letters by the several Russian officers there having been rejected until the declaration of war or otherwise became known.

The Russian steam tender Vostock has been busy boarding vessels to inquire for news, and on one occasion was within a mile of H. M. steam-ship Styx, her vicinity having been hid by a thick fog. The Styx tried the Vostock's rate of going for an hour or two, and found that with two boilers on the lowest grade of expansion, it was quite possible to keep way with her. The Vostock ran away to the south-east, and has not since been seen, although one report runs that she passed through Hong Kong harbour only a few nights ago, and that boat-loads of provisions have been despatched hence to be put on board the squadron directly they arrive. Reports, however, were still, up to a week ago, being taken to Shanghai by Chinese fishing boats, of six Russian vessels as not far from that port, and, with a head-wind to contend against, they can hardly be in Hong Kong under a fortnight at the least.

THE CANADIAN ELECTIONS.—The Old Countryman, a Toronto paper says, "A new feature in Canadian politics is likely to be introduced. HAYMARKET THEATRE.—On Monday night a new drama by Sterling Coyne, entitled "The Old Chateau, or a Night of Peril," was successfully presented at this theatre. The scene of the novelty is laid in France, and the action commences in the year 1846, at the house of a M. Dourville (Mr. Rogers), who, at the instigation of an adventurer, Lafayette (M. H. Marston), has become a gambler and a ruined man. To save himself from disgrace, he induces his daughter Julie (Miss Reynolds) to become the wife of General de Laysac (Mr. Howe), although she has pledged her troth to an artist named Armand (Mr. W. Farren), to the great dismay of her foster-sister Jeannette (Mrs. Fitzwilliam), who also has a tender regard for the young painter. Julie becomes the wife of de Laysac, after having spurned Lafayette from her feet, and Jeannette becomes the spouse of M. Sammon (Mr. Buckstone), a grocer and National Guard, who, in the endeavour to present Julie with a declaration of love, drops up in a packet of bomb-bombs, makes a mistake, and gives it to Jeannette. Three years after the marriage of the parties Armand returns from a pilgrimage in search of fortune, a man of wealth, and eagerly seeks the object of his first love. He discovers her only to hear that she has become the wife of another, and in his grief he begs Jeannette to obtain for him an interview with Julie. The return of the lover, and the accidental discovery of a portrait visible Lafayette to excite the jealous ire of the General, who discovers that the interview between his wife and Armand is to take place in an Old Chateau belonging to Sammon, now a wealthy but a jealous man. To this Chateau all the parties repair, and (unknown to his wife) the General overhears all that takes place, and is fully convinced of his wife's innocence and the villainy of Lafayette, by whom he is shot in endeavouring to quit the apartment by the window—Lafayette having been stationed in the garden to do a like office for Armand, for whom he mistakes the General.

The piece was excellently well put upon the stage. The scene of the Old Chateau is especially deserving of a word of praise for the novelty of the effects introduced into it. The actors lent their best endeavours to render the piece a "hit," which it certainly was. Miss Reynolds and Mrs. Fitzwilliam gave the characters allotted to them to the life—in the one, we had the picture of settled melancholy; in the other, the portraiture of good spirits and mirth-loving disposition, not much damaged by the cross in first love. Mr. Howe was impassioned and energetic as the old soldier, to which he gave a manly bearing, highly appropriate. Mr. Marston presented the villain in as amiable a light as possible; but if the part had been a little less "acted," and a little better dressed, more effect might have been got out of it. To say that Buckstone was irresistibly droll, is to tell what every play-goer knows. The appearance of the comedian, in one act with his head surmounted by a tall bearskin shako, and in another adorned with a pyramidal nightcap plentifully garnished with red satin ribbons, is sufficient to make one split with laughter. The house was crowded, and on the fall of the curtain the author had to bow his acknowledgments from a private box.

PANOPTICON, LEICESTER SQUARE.—This undertaking has at last met with the most astounding success. In the hot weather of the past week, all the ton flocked to see "the fountain of 100 feet high." There was a refreshing coolness in the Panopticon not obtainable elsewhere. And excellent as the sister-institution (the Polytechnic) indisputably is, it, at least, cannot compete in music with the Panopticon and its unrivalled organ, or develop the art and mystery of diving as it may now be studied in Leicester Square. We hope soon to give a full report of both establishments.

PLYMOUTH.—On the evening of the 20th inst. there was a second grand amateur performance by officers of the garrison at the theatre, and the house was crowded in every part. The play was entitled "Plot and Passion," and the principal female character was performed by Mrs. Hudson Kirby. When she was coming forward at the commencement of the second act, she took the wrong entrance, and instead of entering from the side of the stage she came from the back, in doing which she stepped across a stage light, and in a moment her gauze dress behind was in a blaze. The house was in a state of consternation, and for a second paralyzed. Mrs. Kirby, alarmed by the fire, screamed, and at once ran off the stage on the prompter's side, where Captain Fish was acting as prompter. Captain Fish, a stage carpenter named Charles Pratt, and a scene man named John Hooper, throw her down, and the latter rolled upon her, endeavouring to smother the flames, but she rose, and the flames again burst out. Hooper again threw her down, and he and Captain Fish and other gentlemen then succeeded in putting out the fire. The moment the accident occurred Mr. Newcombe, the lessee and manager, ran from the opposite prompter's side, attempted to take up a carpet that was on the stage, but could not succeed, as it was nailed down; and subsequently the fire was smothered with the coat of one of the gentlemen who was performing, as well as by the plan already referred to. Several medical gentlemen who were in the house, amongst whom were Mr. Keele, assistant-surgeon of the Calcutta, Messrs. Randle, sen. and jun., and Mr. Langworthy, of Plymouth, immediately lifted the body of the house, and gave their assistance to the unfortunate lady. It was soon found that she was not burnt about the face, but there were superficial burns of the cuticle, over her shoulders, arms, and hands, and also the chest. The injury, it is feared, is very extensive. The accident happened at half-past 9, and by a quarter to 10 she was so far restored as to be able to be removed to her house in a carriage under the care of Mr. Remle, to whose treatment she was confided. In the course of his attempts to render aid, Mr. Newcombe was, we regret to say, much burnt on his left hand and wrist. As soon as this extent of Mrs. Kirby's injury was known, a gentleman went on the stage and announced that, although it was hoped that the injury the lady had suffered was not of a serious character, yet it was so bad as utterly to preclude her again appearing that evening. Mrs. Kirby having the chief female characters both in the first and after piece, "A Desperate Game," the business was immediately stopped, and the curtain fell.

HOW TO MAKE SCENERY, CURTAINS, AND WOODWORK IN THEATRES INCOMBUSTIBLE.—In the theatre at Munich a soluble glass was applied to the woodwork and scenery for the purpose of preserving, and, as far as possible, rendering them incombustible. The process was first suggested in the Builder several years ago. This glass was in fact a solution of free silica in caustic alkali; and if the wood was properly seasoned, there can be no doubt of the value of the application, especially if it was injected under pressure. Professor Way's researches into the silica beds of the lower chalk prove that a solution of this nature could be obtained easily and economically; and the advantages it offers certainly render its application desirable.—The Builder.

CONSTANTINOPLE, JULY 15.

Omar Pasha, now with Prince Napoleon at Giurgevo, has transferred head-quarters to Rustchuk, and the Anglo-French force, amounting in all to 80,000 men, is encamped in the neighbourhood of Yarna. One day is all that is required to effect a junction of both armies. It seems unlikely induced the Russians (at Odessa after the wreck of the Tiger) to open one of Mootson's shells; it exploded and they lost 17 men.

Captain Bent, Mr. Burke, R. E., Mr. Moynell, 7th regiment, Mr. Arnold (I. A.) have been killed in action at Rustchuk.

Hong Kong, May 22.—The Paul Johann, Poort, arrived here 25th May, from Hantlepool, was boarded by pirates 14th May about 50 miles south of Hainan; master and greater part of crew wounded, first mate killed, and the vessel plundered of everything that was valuable.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

THURSDAY.—LORDS.—The Merchant Shipping Acts Repeal Bill was read a third time and passed.

The Standard of Gold and Silver Wares Bill was read a second time.
The Sale of Beer Bill went through committee. Amendments were introduced by which the hours during which public-houses might be kept open on Sunday were extended from 1 to half past 2, and from 5 to 11 p.m., with the provision that no liquor should be furnished after 10 p.m.

Their lordships adjourned at half-past 7 o'clock.
COMMONS.—The second reading of the Finchley-road Estate Bill was opposed by Lord R. Grosvenor, who complained that this was the 5th attempt of Sir Thomas Marlowe to obtain legislative sanction for an encroachment upon Hampstead Heath. He moved as an amendment that the bill should be read a second time that day three months.

On a division, there were 43 votes for the second reading, and 97 for the amendment. The bill is consequently rejected.

The Lords' amendments to the Oxford University Bill were taken into consideration.

Mr. Walpole moved that the House should disagree with the amendment by which "congregational" was substituted for "sectional" election in the process by which the members of the Hebdomadal Council were to be chosen.

Upon a division, the clause as amended by the peers was agreed to by a majority of 115 to 62—53.

The amendment by which Mr. R. Palmer's clause (the Public Schools clause) was made of non-effect as regards college fellowships, underwent considerable discussion. A motion was made by Mr. R. Palmer that the House should disagree therewith, but was negatived, on division, by 110 votes to 62—52.

The Lords' amendment to the clause relating to private bills was opposed by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, upon whose motion the House voted their disagreement with the same by a majority of 130 to 70—60.

The other amendments were agreed to.

On the motion for going into committee of supply,

Sir J. Pakington moved an address to the Crown, praying her Majesty to direct that the salary of £600 per annum heretofore paid to the Lord Bishop of New Zealand should be paid for the years 1853 and 1854, with the assurance that the House would make good the same.

Sir G. Grey explained the circumstances under which the grant had been discontinued, and justified that step with regard to future years. As the bishop, however, had actually received the salary for 1853, and might have been put to inconvenience through the absence of notice during the current twelvemonth, he thought that parliament might justly be called upon to make good the amount for either, or both of these years, if the colonial legislature should decline to provide for the deficiency.

Upon this intimation the motion was withdrawn, and the House went into committee of supply.

The vote of £140,000 for purchasing Burlington House came again under discussion. Mr. Spooner moved that the grant be disallowed. After a protracted debate the committee divided. For the vote 143, against 23—120.

The discussion of the vote granting £13,400 for erecting consular offices, an hospital, and a prison at Constantinople, occupied the committee until past one o'clock. The House then resumed and proceeded to dispose of the remaining orders of the day.

The consideration in committee of the Russian Government Securities Bill was resumed, and ultimately the Chairman was ordered to report progress, and sit again on Wednesday next.

The House adjourned at five minutes to three.

Police Intelligence.

DOW STREET.

Henry Herring, a cabman, was summoned by Mr. Harcourt Vernon, M.P., for insolence. Mr. Vernon engaged the defendant to drive him from Pall Mall to the Olympic Theatre, in Wych-street. The cabman pulled up in Newcastle-street, and then invited complainant to get out, telling him it was only a step or two off. The night was wet, and Mr. Vernon was dressed in evening costume; he therefore desired the man to drive him to the door of the theatre, especially as there were no carriages in the way at the moment, and at the same time demanded a ticket. The defendant pulled a ticket out of his pocket and put it into his mouth, but only drove a few paces further. Mr. Vernon again demanded the ticket, upon which the man held his head forward and told him to take it out of his mouth. Complainant refused, and then upon the demand being made a third time, he gave Mr. Vernon the ticket, "all covered with saliva," and finally pulled up at the front of the theatre. The defendant said he was hailed by mother gentlemen, and wished to oblige the party, so he asked complainant to get out a few yards only from the theatre. Mr. Jardine fined him 20s. and costs.

THAMES.

SHOOTING AT A WIFE.—A morose looking man, named John Danbury, aged 50, a bricklayer and plasterer, of No. 10, Richard-street, Poplar, was charged with shooting his wife, Grace Danbury, with a pistol loaded with shot. It appeared that the prisoner and his wife had frequently quarrelled, and that he had ill-used her on several occasions. He was once fined for striking her, and on another occasion he had been held to bail to keep the peace towards her. They had since parted, and he allowed his wife 7s. 6d. per week, and lived with a young woman. The wife resided in the same street as her husband, and frequent wrangles had taken place between them since their separation. Mrs. Danbury was in company with a young woman named Marian Bradley, of No. 5, Richard-street, Poplar, and met her husband near his own house, with a pint pot in his hand. He crossed from the opposite side of the way, and advanced towards his wife, to whom he applied several odious epithets. The wife remonstrated with him, and told him to go away, on which he swore that he would shoot her. He took a pistol from his pocket and presented it at his wife's head, and she instinctively threw up her arms to save her face. The prisoner fired, and the shot lodged in her arms. The wife screamed and said she was shot. Inspector Holmes, of the K division, said the wife of the prisoner was severely wounded with shot; it was No. 2 shot; and she would not be able to attend the court for six or seven days. A pistol was soon afterwards taken from the prisoner: it was loaded with shot. Mr. Yardley—He had gone home and reloaded the pistol? Inspector Holmes—He had, sir. The prisoner—My wife interrupted me first as I was walking along the street, and as — Mr. Yardley—Stop. You had better reserve your defence, for I am going to demand you for a week.

MARYLEBONE.

John Wakery, who said that he had no occupation, and resided at 28, Oldham-road, Manchester, was brought before Mr. Broughton charged with defrauding the London and North Western Railway Company in the following artful manner:—Mr. Fraser, ticket-collector at the Camden-station, deposed that on the previous morning, at four o'clock, upon the arrival of the York train, a gentleman alighted from a first-class carriage, and having delivered his ticket, went away. Witness happening to see the prisoner under one of the seats, pulled him out from his hiding-place, where he was lying upon his face, and on questioning him as to why he had thus secreted himself, he said that he wanted to have a comfortable sleep. He alleged that he had paid his fare, and stated that he had given his ticket to the gentleman who had just got out. Witness placed not the slightest reliance upon his statement, and upon the train reaching the Euston-station, the whole of the particulars were made known to Mr. Matthews, one of the company's inspectors of police. The inspector said that upon the fare, viz., 17s. 3d., from Rugby, being demanded, prisoner stated that he had no money, but that if witness would take him to Harry Broom's all would be made right. He further told witness that if he would suffer him to go and make an excuse for his escaping, he could easily do so, and he (prisoner), in the event of compliance with his wishes, would put him in possession of such information as would enable him to win £10,000 upon the "Goodwood," the name of the winning horse was known to him to a certainty. The prisoner, on being asked what he had to say, replied, "I was short of money, and if they had allowed me at the station to telegraph to Manchester, I should have been able very soon to have paid the company their demand." The magistrate inflicted a penalty of 30s., or three weeks' imprisonment.

The Cologne Gazette contains a letter from Vienna, which says that Lord Westmoreland has been authorised by his Government to refuse, purely and simply, to take into consideration the last Russian propositions.

"EXTRACT FROM A LETTER FROM OMAR PASHA TO GENERAL LORD RAGLAN, DATED SHUMLA, JULY 1, 1854.

"Parmi les braves qui ont pris part à la défense glorieuse de Silistrie se trouvaient deux officiers Anglais, dont je ne dois pas oublier les noms. Le jeune Capitaine Butler, arrivé pendant l'hiver avec M. Nasrith au quartier-général de Chumla, était à Silistrie au moment où les Russes commençaient l'attaque contre la place. Tous les deux pouvaient se retirer, mais la voix de l'honneur parlant haut chez eux, ils préférèrent de rester, dans l'idée d'être utiles dans la lutte qui se préparait. Leur exemple leurs conseils, ont puissamment contribué à la conservation des forts attaqués;... malheureusement M. Butler, blessé d'une balle au front, a trouvé la une mort glorieuse; mais sa mémoire ne périra pas dans l'armée Ottomane."

THE REGATTA DINNER, AT LOWESTOFT.

Took place at six o'clock, at the Royal Hotel. Amongst the company we observed S. M. Peto, Esq., M.P. (in the Chair), Earl of Albemarle, Dr. Whewell (Cambridge), R. Stephenson, Esq., James Peto, Esq., H. T. Birkett, Esq., R. N. Bacon, Esq., C. Crawshaw, Esq., G. P. Bidder, Esq., C. Bolingbroke, Esq., Messrs. C. and T. Lucas, Vice-Commodore Arcedeckne, Rear-Commodore Cardinall, P. Webber, D. Meadows, G. Edwards, J. Morse, C. Penrose, H. W. Hodges, Capt. Andrews, Capt. Small, Capt. Green, R. H. Reeve, Esq., L. O. Taylor, Esq., J. Sulzer, Esq., Dr. Buck, Dr. Foreman, Messrs. G. S. Gowing, E. Norton, E. P. Norton, R. Johnson, J. L. Clomence, G. Allen, J. Barwell, W. B. Wilton, — Borthwick, R. Chamberlain, C. J. Palmer, Rev. F. Leathes, Rev. — Bignold, Messrs. G. A. Dye, H. Ling, — Dashwood, — Featherstone, J. Rounce, H. Woods, — Underwood, M. Payne, J. Thomas, C. F. Cheffins, J. Hall, H. F. Hay, C. Hay, — Fancutt, — Grove, J. Howchen, — Boatwright, Capt. Ellis, Rev. W. French, D. H. Fry, Esq., R. Ferguson, Esq., R. Reeve, Esq., Commodore Goodson and W. Goodson, Esq., Mr. Lane, Mr. Knight, Mr. T. H. Wilson, Mr. Dutton, Eric Rudd, Esq., E. L. Betts, Esq., &c. &c.

S. M. Peto, Esq., occupied the chair, and I. R. Till, Esq., the vice-chair. The company numbered about 170 gentlemen, at five tables, and the dinner was served in the superior style for which Mr. Howett is so distinguished.

On the removal of the cloth, the President proposed the usual loyal toasts, which were drunk with enthusiasm. He then said, Gentlemen, I should not do justice to your feelings if I were to give the next toast without one or two introductory comments. I give you "The Army and Navy." (Loud applause.) At all times, gentlemen, this toast is received with respect; but at the present moment it has a claim on our interest, which on former occasions it did not possess. When we were out to-day for the purpose of viewing that interesting match of the schooners, it was our fate to meet one of her Majesty's ships going to the Baltic—the Hornet, Hon. Captain Campbell—and I need not tell you that we forgot for a moment the pleasure of the day, and gave her crew three hearty cheers, which were returned with a gusto which did us and our friends, the tars, real good. (Applause.) I have the pleasure, gentlemen, of associating with the toast the name of a nobleman on my right who is connected with the army. I give you the "Earl of Albemarle and the Army and Navy; success to them, and every good they can possibly desire." (Loud cheers.)

The Earl of Albemarle, who was warmly cheered, said,—Gentlemen our excellent chairman has done me the honour to associate my name with the two warlike professions which have been placed upon your list of toasts. My duty is simply to obey the call he has made upon me. I have the painful pre-eminence of being the senior officer—I believe, of either service—among the brilliant assembly whom I have now the honour of addressing. (Applause.) I am old enough, gentlemen, to have snuff powder burnt in the face of an enemy, against whom I trust in God no powder of ours may ever be burnt again in an unfriendly manner. (Hear, hear.) Gentlemen, I should be guilty of a very great omission if I were not to return thanks for that really national service which has been associated with the profession to which I more particularly belong—I mean our gallant navy. (Applause.) I am like the man who was asked whether he could speak German, and who said in reply, "No, I can't speak German, but I had a brother once who could play the German flute." (Laughter.) This is exactly my case. I know nothing of naval affairs, but the name I bear is not unassociated with the navy. (Applause.) My brother (the Hon. Capt. Keppel) is a countryman of your own—at least we are only just over the border, and we belong to a neighbouring county which produced a Nelson. (Applause.) I beg to thank you for the honour you have done me.

The President was glad to see that the clergy of the district had given to the present proceedings their valuable sanction; and in giving the "Bishop and clergy of the diocese, and the ministers of religion of all denominations," he begged to associate with the toast, the name of the Rev. Dr. Whewell, who had done the company great honour by coming amongst them. (Applause.)

The Rev. Dr. Whewell replied.

The President said, his next toast was the "Members for the county." Both Sir Fitzroy Kelly and Sir Edward Gough were patrons of the regatta, and he need scarcely express the deep sense its promoters entertained of their kindness. (Applause.)

The Earl of Albemarle proposed in very eulogistic terms the health of Mr. Peto, with three times three, and, perhaps, said the noble Earl, you will permit an old soldier to act as fagelman.

The cheers having been given with much enthusiasm, the President, who was much applauded, said,—My Lord Albemarle, I beg to thank you for the very kind and hearty manner in which you have done me the honour to propose my health; and I need not say how very deeply I thank you, gentlemen, for the very enthusiastic and complimentary reception the toast met with at your hands. This has been a day of unmixt pleasure to me. I have been delighted to see such a regatta as we have witnessed to-day, and to find gentlemen coming into town from all parts of the county, and what is better, bringing their ladies with them. (Applause.) Be assured it is a pleasant thing to be remembered in a kindly way by such a company as this, and to have one's health drunk in so complimentary a manner. I will not say more, as I can speak of other things far better than I can of myself; but I thank you from my heart most sincerely. (Applause.)

The Earl of Albemarle was about to leave the room, to catch the train, but the company enthusiastically called upon him to return thanks for his health; which he did in a very facetious speech, creating loud laughter and applause, in the course of which the noble lord effected an exit from the room.

The President said, he had now the pleasure of proposing the "Successful Competitors." He believed the regatta had been unexampled on the eastern coast, in regard to the character of the vessels entered, and the sport produced; and that the amusement of the day had been productive of great pleasure to all who had a taste for yachting. He (the President) had great pleasure in awarding Mr. Curling the first prize cup, and he trusted that, for many years to come, its owner might enjoy the happiness of seeing it on his table. To Mr. Coope, the owner of the Thought, and Mr. Wheeler, the owner of the Vampire, he had also great pleasure in presenting the second and third prizes for yachts; and he hoped that the healths of all three gentlemen would be drunk with the utmost possible good feeling. (Applause.)

Mr. Curling briefly acknowledged the compliment.

Mr. Young, on behalf of Mr. Wheeler (absent), also responded.

The President gave the health of "Mr. R. Stephenson, M.P." (Applause.) The toast was drunk with three times three.

Mr. Stephenson, M.P., in acknowledging the compliment, said, —The pursuit of yachting in this country has not been without its effect upon naval architecture. Yachting has been long pursued, and the advances recently made in naval architecture may be attributed in some degree to its study; and although my friend in the chair says I sometimes leave engineering and come to yachting, I beg to inform him that I consider yachting one of the most abstruse pieces of engineering that can be devised. (Laughter.) When I looked upon the noble vessels which drew before the wind this morning, I could not help reflecting what various forces were in action, and how nearly balanced they were one to the other. There was no great distance between one vessel and another after having passed over 30 miles; and that the differences between the various forces and resistances at work should have amounted to a few minutes is one of the most curious things, perhaps, to which the human mind can apply itself, and one of the most difficult problems to solve. Yachting men, in nine cases out of ten, apply their attention chiefly to the form of their vessels; but though I believe much depends upon the form, I have not studied yachting for four or five years without having come to the conclusion that it is only a matter of secondary importance now. There is more science required above the water than below it; there is more science required in managing sails than in drawing the lines of vessels. We have advanced more rapidly in the construction of the hulls of our vessels than in the management of the sails; and let us endeavour to induce yachting men not to cease to apply their attention to the subjects in which they interest themselves, because, although they have reached, I may almost say perfection of form—although they have devised a form to which the fluid through which it moves gives the least resistance—I am satisfied we must look more to the regulation and arrangement of the sails than we have done. (Hear, hear.) They have remained stationary for many years, while the hull, so far as my memory serves me, has been gradually improving, in consequence of the greater attention paid to its construction. Let us, therefore, turn our attention to the sails, for I am sure that there is more to be done in them than there is remaining to be done in the hull itself. (Hear, hear.) I thank you for having received my name so cordially, and I assure you that I feel I am not deserting my profession as an engineer in coming down here to yachting. (Applause.)

The President gave the "Commodores and Vice-Commodores of the Yacht Clubs of England, associating with the toast the name of Mr. Goodson." (Applause.)

Mr. Goodson acknowledged the compliment.

The President said, he had great pleasure in giving the health of the "Vice-commodore of the Harwich Yacht Club, Mr. Arcedeckne, and thanks to him for the use of his yacht, the Novice, in starting the boats."

Mr. Arcedeckne acknowledged the compliment, and made some humorous observations, of which stenography can afford no adequate idea, since it cannot paint the manner in which they were delivered. He could not tell the company how gratified he was to meet them. Lowestoft and Harwich ought always to go hand in hand—(applause)—and he was certain it would not be his fault, nor the fault of the gentlemen of Lowestoft, if they did not do so. (Applause.)

The Vice-President (Mr. Till) said the company had done honour to the successful competitors by drinking their healths; and a similar compliment was due to those gentlemen who had sailed their yachts and not been successful. Coupling with the toast the name of Mr. Bidder. (Loud applause.)

Mr. Bidder said he looked back with the utmost satisfaction on his connection with Lowestoft, and he believed that the town would one day become a place of great national importance. He came to the regatta with the intention of winning a prize, if possible, but he believed it was characteristic of an Englishman to acknowledge his defeat when he was beaten, and to bear no ill-will to his antagonist. (Hear, hear.) He came to win, but though he had lost, he should be happy to sail again the next day, and he could assure Mr. Curling that he hoped to live to beat him yet. (Laughter.) His first race had taught him a lesson, and without detaining the company at that late hour of the evening, he could assure them that he felt the greatest interest in Lowestoft, and that he should continue to devote his best energies to its improvement. (Applause.)

The President said, he need scarcely remind the company how deeply they were indebted to the press. Their thanks were especially due to those gentlemen who reported the proceeding of the day; for they formed a very important portion of the body politic. In proposing the "Metropolitan and Local Press," he begged to associate with the toast, the name of his excellent, tried, and valued friend, Mr. Richard Noverre Bacon. (Applause.)

Mr. Bacon responded, other gentlemen of the press standing up. The Vice-President proposed "The Committee," coupling with the toast the name of Mr. H. Reeve. (Applause.)

Mr. H. Reeve briefly acknowledged the compliment.

The President said the next toast on his list was "Prosperity to the town of Lowestoft." (Applause.) On former occasions he had coupled with the toast the name of Captain Andrews, and it was, therefore, only necessary for him now to add that he had seconded all that was done by Mr. Stephenson and Mr. Bidder, and that though he had ceased to be connected with Lowestoft, they should not forget him. Having said so much, he felt that he should be guilty of a great omission if he did not associate with the toast the names of two other gentlemen of the town. He referred to the Messrs. Lucas. (Loud applause.)

Captain Andrews and Mr. Thomas Lucas responded.

The President then gave the "Umpires, Messrs. Joachim and Preston," and the "Ladies."

The Vice-President responded to the latter toast, and the company soon afterwards separated.

At the conclusion of the dinner, a display of very good fireworks took place on the green by Mr. Baxter to the thousands still remaining on the spot, who, although midnight was approaching, even then appeared disinclined to retire to rest during so lovely a night. Thirty-six yachts were still in the morning of Wednesday lying in the harbour of Lowestoft, a fact unprecedented in the history of any seaport on the eastern coast, except Harwich. Whatever the cause was, there was no review. Mr. Stephenson took a large party out in the Titania; Mr. Goodson and Mr. Young parties in the Avalon and Amazon; Mr. Bidder in the Maitly; Mr. Lucas in the Waveney. The Maid was also cruising. Seven thousand persons had entered Lowestoft by train alone.

The Regatta Ball was held at the Royal Hotel, on Wednesday evening. Dancing commenced about 10.30 p.m., and was kept up with great spirit to the enlivening strains of Howlett's Band till daylight, while "the masses" promenaded at "The Suffolk."

THURSDAY.—At five o'clock, a.m., Kitten and Cormorant sailed, south in company for Harwich. Just before six Shark (the winner) started for the north, but owing to the calm remained in sight for some hours. Novice remains, but will start for Dublin. Owner has telegraphed from London that he cannot rejoin at Lowestoft. Between eight and nine o'clock heavy firing was heard in the distance, S.S.E., supposed to be from the Catalis Fleet, bound to the Baltic with troops. The firing, evidently practice, continued some considerable period. The yachts intend to revisit Lowestoft on their return from Grimsby.

DUBLIN BAY.—WEDNESDAY.

WIND S.W. STRONG.

SAILING MATCH.

THE GRAND CORINTHIAN CUP, value 100 guineas, presented by the Royal Western Yacht Club of Ireland, to be sailed for by yachts belonging to any Royal Yacht Club of 25 tons and upwards, to be manned and steered by gentlemen, members of the Royal Yacht Clubs; the sailing master and professional pilot to be allowed to each vessel. A time race; half a minute per ton to be allowed for difference of tonnage up to 50 tons, and a quarter of a minute above that. The winner to pay 10 guineas towards the Corinthian Fund for 1855.

This match presented a novelty of peculiar interest in respect of the competing vessels being manned and steered by gentlemen, aided only by a pilot and sailing-master. It has been the first experiment of the kind which has been made in Ireland with yachts of large tonnage. The following vessels started:—

Cymba, 53 tons—J. M. Roacan, R.N.Y.C.—Cutter.
Nimrod, 40 tons—H. Brodick, R.W.Y.C.—Ditto.
Enchantress, 48 tons—S. Holder, R.W.Y.C.—Ditto.
Corallo, 33 tons—H. E. Byrne, R.W.Y.C.—Ditto.
Pearl, 34 tons—Edward Fox, R.W.Y.C.—Ditto.
Bouda, 39 tons—T. Barnes, R.Y.C.—Ditto.

The course was the long one round the Kish, and the distance run, tacking included, was not very short of 50 miles. At 30 minutes past 12 the signal gun was fired, and the Corallo took the lead out of the harbour, close followed by the Bouda and the Cymba. The Nimrod, the Pearl, and the Enchantress followed in succession. The Cynthia, 50 tons, belonging to Henry Roe, R. St. G.Y.C., was to have started, but her mast had been sprung, and as both wind and sea were heavy she did not join in the race, although she sailed out of the harbour under a trysail.

The Corallo maintained the lead round the first flag boat off the harbour, but the Cymba presently showed in front of her and the Nimrod, which had reached beyond the others, and the Cymba maintained her position in advance during the remainder of the race. All the yachts were under canvas more or less reefed. The Cynthia, when off the Kish, sailing under a double-reefed main-sail and small jib, was obliged to haul down the fore-sail, and brace up her main tack, the sea being very heavy, and the Corallo was at the same time seen to lower her foresail.

The yachts arrived in the following order:—

	R.	M.	S.
Cymba	...	...	4 58 30
Corallo	...	...	4 18 13
Nimrod	...	...	6 0 0

So that, allowing for tonnage, the Cymba won by about twelve minutes fifteen seconds over the second boat, her rate of sailing on all points having averaged about ten knots an hour. The remaining vessels were not timed. The winning boat was warmly cheered as she passed the Owen Glendower Club yacht, on board of which a large assemblage of visitors were received by the members of the club in the course of the day. The manner in which the match was carried out and the result reflect credit upon the amateur crews of the several gallant craft engaged, who signally displayed their fine nautical taste and their ability to handle such vessels on a rough day.

The following were the gentlemen who manned and steered the Cymba:—Mr. P. French, steersman; Messrs. W. Camper, J. Thompson, and Captain Lynn, R.W.Y.C.; Sir J. Coghlin, Bart., and—Bullon, R.St.G.Y.C.; J. P. Bush, W. Lewis, G. Middleton, R.W.Y.C.; A. Middleton, R.W.Y.C.; Captain Palmer, A. Templeman, John Nelligan, and Richard Neligan, R.W.Y.C.

(The following appeared in our Second Edition.)

DISSOLUTION OF THE SPANISH CABINET.

Madrid has declared against the Ministers. The Cabinet is dissolved.

The Moniteur publishes a despatch which confirms the report that on the 18th the people rose in arms in Madrid. The emute was completely successful during the night. Towards morning the troops fraternised and acted with vigour. Barricades were erected.

The Gazette publishes the names of the new ministry. Three Moderates—Duke Rivas, President of the Council; Mayans, Foreign Affairs; and Rosas, Interior. Three Progressists—Lucerna, Justice; Cantero, Finance; and Rada, Public Works. Colonel Garriga is named as commandant of cavalry. General Garriga commands the cavalry at Madrid. Conde San Luis (Sartorius), the Premier, has fled.

BARCELONA, July 18.—A Provisional Junta is formed by the Captain-General and other leading men. The kingdom of Valencia and the Balearic Isles have "pronounced."

According to advices from St. Sebastian of the 18th, the inhabitants of Saragossa and all the garrison have pronounced for the movement, and General Ignacio Gurrutia had taken command of the place.

General Zabala has written to Bayonne ordering the soldiers and officers of the Carlista Regiment who had fled to the country to return to Spain, and to meet him at St. Sebastian. He is marching on Madrid with the Army of the North to support Espartero.

A telegraphic despatch from Bayonne, dated the 21st, says, General Espartero (the Duke of Victory) has left Logroño for Saragossa, and is marching on Madrid at the head of the Army of the Centre.

Vitoria, Pampeluna, Tolosa, and Paycoada have "pronounced."

It is stated in a letter from Valencia of the 13th, in the Moniteur, that the harvest, which has just terminated in the province of that name, has been extraordinarily abundant; and that the same is the case in almost all parts of Spain. The letter adds that the olive trees seem also to promise a very good crop.

An extraordinary courier, who left Madrid on the morning of the 19th, announces that the city was covered with barricades, and that fighting was going on on all sides.

It was impossible to restrain the people, who were sacking Queen Christina's Palace and M. Salamanca's house.

A battle had been fought near Granada between O'Donnell and General Blazer, in which the latter and Count Vista Hermosa had been wounded and taken prisoners.

On the 19th Barcelona was still in a state of alarm, incendiary bands having issued from the city to burn the factories. Valencia had pronounced.

TURKEY.

Lieutenant Glyn, of the Britannia, with 30 petty officers and seamen, detached from the fleet, left Varna on the 6th, for Rutschak, in company with a party of sappers. Lieutenant Glyn expects to find some Turkish gunboats at Rutschak, which the seamen from the fleet will man. If he should report favourably, more men from the squadron will follow.

INTERPRETERS IN TURKEY.

To the Editor of "THE FIELD."

SIR,—A letter from Varna of the 9th instant states that from 4,000 to 5,000 Turks had been shipped for Batoum, to reinforce the army of Selim Pasha, and that among them is the corps which was attached to the division of Prince Napoleon. But I wish particularly to draw your attention to another fact mentioned in this letter, viz., that an Armenian, who acted as an interpreter for the allied armies, has been hung at Varna as a Russian spy, having been found in com-communication with the enemy. Now, Sir, in your useful "LETTER-BAG," I have occasionally seen communications headed "Interpreters in Turkey," asserting that Turkish is not taught in England, that there is no such thing as an English and Turkish dictionary, and so on. Hence, the sad necessity for employing foreigners, instead of English, interpreters. What is the consequence? Betrayal of secrets to the enemy! Surely Turkish ought no longer to be neglected in our schools and universities.—Yours, BRITANNICUS.

THE MUNICH INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITION was opened on Saturday with much pomp, by the King. The number of exhibitors amounts to 6,588. Of these 2,331 are Bavarians, 1,477 Austrians, and 767 Prussians; Wurtemberg gives 443, and Saxony 446. The King and Queen of Prussia are expected to visit Munich before the close of the month.

AUSTRALIAN ARRIVAL.

(BY ELECTRIC TELEGRAPH.)

FALMOUTH.—The Iron Cap and Dobson, from Port Adelaide for London, has landed mails and passengers here. She has gold on board.

The Mayon Mome, Captain Tweedie, is telegraphed off Harkness, from Melbourne. She left on the 21st April, and in addition to a cargo of wool, flour, &c., has 36,000 ounces of gold.

RACING.

"On the green, green turf."

MR. EDITOR.—Glorious, gorgeous Goodwood is before us; and, perhaps, the richest adjective that can be coined would express no more than the meeting, in the estimation of the supporters of the turf, most justly deserves. All other gatherings that approach the last week of July, though well meriting attention, inevitably suffer by comparison, and Goodwood stands alone. Great Grimsby opens the ball on the 24th with its two-day list, possessing more than a local character; but, without offence to that place of rising importance, in racing interest it must be content with the title of Little Grimsby by the side of Great Goodwood.

I see that you have been pleased to echo my promised letter "An analysis of the Goodwood Meeting." It will deserve no such term; let it be called Goodwood Guesses.

I will take the races in the order your programme gives them.

TUESDAY.

THE CRAVEN STAKES. The entry for this race will not be made till Monday evening.

The HAM STAKES of 100 each, h. ft., for two-year-olds; exits 8st. 10lb., and 11lb. 5st. 7lb. Dirk Hatteralek is in this race; but his showing may be doubtful. Unless the dark Cavalier and De Clare possess something above the average capability, I am inclined to award the foremost places to the Refraction colt and the Miss Whip filly, both of whom receive the allowance of 6lb.

For the brace of matches I should take Diomedes and William Rufus against Bianca and Orpheus.

THE GRATWICK STAKES, of 100 sovs. each, h. ft., for three year olds; male and a half. This rich prize would seem at the present moment a very open affair. Some of the clever ones are backing Autocrat for the St. Leger at a long price. Can he be sufficiently recovered from the plight in which we saw him at Epsom to make an appearance here? If so, he must be dangerous; but I am inclined to put aside his claim on this occasion. Bismarck is not unlikely to become a great favourite, though he must amend his Newmarket running to be the winner. But, what cannot John Scott do? Moderate as he is, it will not surprise me to see the Buer in the van, the 6lb allowance being all in his favour. To him and Boardo I must therefore leave the race.

THE STWARDS' CUP over the T. Y. C. for horses of all ages, and weights ranging from 9st. 9lb. to 4st. 8lb., has an entry of 75. He must be a bold man who would say he can pick out the winner. I shall not attempt the task; so much depending on the getting off. But, it strikes me that it is not beyond the scope of probability for old Ephraim to accomplish the task. The other names that seem formidable are Orinoco, Vaultress, Bribery, Nelly Hill, Anterion, and El Durulo.

THE 300 SOVS. SWEEPSTAKES, for four-year olds, over the Queen's Plate Course. For this 'breather' I suppose them will be but one opinion—the Australian clearing the way for Colont.

THE LAVANT STAKES.—This race may result in a struggle for victory between the Lord of the Isles, Kingsdown, S road, and Clarot. And, as I have named, so I shall leave them.

WEDNESDAY.

THE GOODWOOD STAKES.—This has been a capital betting race; in fact the bookmakers having already got round. The field is likely to be a good one, and may include the names of Rutaplun, Ashio or Cuck-Picant, Nancy, Colont, Ethelwail, Crusader, Exeter, Exeter, Jacqueline or the Duchess of Lorraine colt, Heapy, Jonathan Martin, John Bull, Newhold, Diana, Tros, and Miss Tennyson. Heapy, Ashio, or Tros should finish the winner. If I must stand by one it shall be Tros; and, as those who venture on the hazardous sort of speculation might never be without a cock-bout, let mine be Miss Tennyson.

THE GREAT NORTH AND SOUTH OF ENGLAND BIENNIAL STAKES; the return match to come off next year at the York August Meeting. No less than 142 youngsters are nominated for this race. As so many of them are dark, and engaged in other two-year old stakes, I must decline offering an opinion as to the result.

THE DRAWING ROOM STAKES I must assign to Acrolant. The 300 SOVS SWEEPSTAKES over the Craven Course would appear to rest between Mways and Boardo.

THURSDAY.

THE SUSSEX STAKES.—As Graculus Esuriens may prefer his retirement in Yorkshire to a visit to Sussex, this little affair will probably be placed to the credit of Namur.

MOLECOMB STAKES.—The winner of the Lavant will have to carry 7lb extra. Should the Lord of the Isles incur the penalty, William the Third and Strood may be first and second.

THE SWEEPSTAKES of 50 SOVS each, h. ft., for three-year-olds, male-and-half: the distinguished names of Anlover, King Tom, Meteor, and Bribery are found in the half-dozen nominations for this race. As King Tom will probably be an absentee, Anlover may frighten the others from the field, and be allowed to walk over.

THE BENTINCK MEMORIAL STAKES for two-year-olds. The winner, I fancy, is in John Scott's stables though Rambling Kate may be chise at hand.

THE BENTINCK MEMORIAL STAKES, for four-year-olds.—Queen's Plate Course. In this lot of 34 we again find the great Australian; but, as he may deem the repetition of Tuesday's long gallop anything but agreeable, I must omit him and look to Albert or Vanderdecken for the winner.

BENTINCK MEMORIAL STAKES for three-year-olds. This race was won last year by Anterion, who beat Dervish by a couple of lengths. A renewal of the contest is sedulously whispered; should it take place, I shall look for a reversal of the issue. Quince, if a starter, will not be very far behind either.

RACING STAKES. For this there are liabilities that may be incurred from previous running; but I must look to Scythian or Quince to provide the winner.

For the 100 SOVS. SWEET, one mile, with six subs, I shall adhere to my friend Boor.

SWEETSTAKES of 200 SOVS each, T.Y.C. Dirk Hatteralek, with a start; in his absence, Crown Pigeon.

SWEETSTAKES of 200 SOVS., for two-year-old fillies.—Antoinette.

THE CUP. "Who is to win the Goodwood Cup?" may in a day or two be the all-engrossing question. At the present moment it would seem a certainty for Virago; but there is a restlessness about some who have laid the odds on her that might augur a doubt of her starting. If fit, and at the post, I see nothing that can have a chance against her. My voice must therefore be for Virago. In her default let me turn towards the Hermit and Rutaplun.

FRIDAY'S attractive list I must reserve till to-morrow, when I will add all the news I may glean in the meantime.—Yours, Friday, July 21, 1854. TOBY PEEPS.

FRIDAY.

P.S.—THE CHESTERFIELD CUP, by subscription of 15 sovs each, for horses of all ages, 2-year-olds excepted. The winner of the Goodwood Stakes, Goodwood Cup, or the Stewards' Cup, 7lb. extra. Craven Course. Forty-two horses are handicapped for this race; Kingston heading the list, at 9st, and Stonehenge bringing up the extreme rear with 5st. I think it may safely be asserted that Kingston will not try the venture this time. His stable-companion is in at 7st. 13lb.; and, as St. Andrew has just pulled off a good stake, there may be hope at last even for the Indian Warrior. Miss Sarah is favourably weighted at 6st. 8lb; nor can Bribery complain of her 6st. 13lb. To these three I am inclined to leave the race.

Lord Derby certainly looks formidable with his brace of combinations for the Ruas Biennial; but Mr. Groville's Quince may, after all, reap the golden fruit.

NASAU STAKES.—The fillies for this race are really of such moderate order that it would look like a mere canter for Virago, even with the 6lb. penalty. Miranda and Bianca may strive for the 100 sovs given to the second.

The Sweepstakes of 100 sovs each, for four-year-olds, Cup Course, Catherine Hayes—alas! for fallen greatness!—may be just good enough to win.

THE NURSERY STAKES.—We have thirty-five young ones handicapped for this mile race. Lord of the Isles pays the penalty of greatness, real or assumed, and heads the weights at 8st 7lb; I cannot, therefore, become his partisan. Honily or Lady Alicia from the middle, and Moonshine, or the Miami filly from the light weights, appear to me more worthy of adherence.

Heapy has gone back to 12 to 1, and Diana has taken his place, with an upward look in the betting for the Goodwood Stakes. Tros as before. The clouds about Virago for the Cup seem to be blowing off. TOBY PEEPS.

SPORTING.

BETTING AT MANCHESTER.—FRIDAY.

There were scarcely a dozen subscribers present at the rooms to-day, and at the close we had not a single transaction to record, 2 to 1 was offered against two for the Goodwood Stakes, viz., Heapy and Tros, and 12 to 1 for Tros. 5 to 1 would have been taken about Heapy, and 11 to 2 would have been laid against Tros. Diana was in bad odour, and Jonathan Martin quite friendly. Nancy, although backed in London, has few friends here; Rutaplun, with the crushing weight of 9st 9lb upon a four year old, is much troubled after, and was backed last evening at 25 to 1 to win a few hundreds. We have observed a disposition to lay against Exact; in other respects the odds are similar to those returned from Tattersall's.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

FRIDAY.—LORDS.—The Earl of Aberdeen, in reply to Lord Harrington, stated that no instructions had been sent to Lord Westmoreland to refuse to allow the Poles to co-operate with the British troops.

The Earl of Aberdeen laid before the House her Majesty's Message respecting the vote of credit for the additional expenses of the war, and moved that it be taken into consideration on Monday next.

An address to the Crown for copies of reports lately presented to the Houses of Convocation was agreed to, on the motion of the Bishop of London.

Several bills were forwarded a stage, after which their Lordships adjourned.

COMMONS.—The House at the morning sitting, which lasted only half an hour, despatched 13 orders of the day, besides motions and petitions, leave was given to Mr. Fitzroy to introduce two Government bills which were brought in and read a first time.

In the evening, The Chancellor of the Exchequer brought down a Message from the Crown to the effect that her Majesty, deeming it expedient to provide for any additional expense that may arise in consequence of the war, and relying upon the loyalty, zeal, and affection of her faithful Commons, trusted that they will make provision accordingly.

On the question that the message be referred to a Committee of Supply.

Mr. Disraeli expressed a hope that, when the Message was taken into consideration on Monday, her Majesty's Government would be able to give an assurance that, in the present state of affairs, there would be an autumnal session of Parliament.

The House then proceeded to consider the Bribery, &c., Bill as amended, in committee.

Some discussion ensued, when, with the assent of Lord J. Russell, it was agreed that the bill should be recommitted, and the House accordingly resolved itself into a committee, where all the clauses of the bill underwent a further revision.

An amendment of the 10th clause, moved by Sir F. Kelly, declaring payment for charring, bands of music, flags, banners, &c., to be illegal, was carried on a division by 106 to 57.

In the 34th clause, a discretion was given to the judge to reduce the penalty in the absence of corrupt or improper intention, and it was declared that no expenses relating to the registration of electors, and no subscriptions or contributions bona fide made for any public or charitable purpose, shall be deemed election expenses within the act. This proviso was long and warmly debated; but was ultimately carried, on a division, by 234 to 16.

Mr. V. Smith moved to omit clause 31, containing the declaration to be made by candidates and members; but the proposition was rejected, and the clause sustained by 128 to 120.

Lord J. Russell gave notice of his intention to propose two clauses, one allowing travelling expenses, and the other prohibiting altogether refreshments and refreshment tickets.

The Chairman was allowed to report progress.

Lord J. Russell then moved that the House resume the consideration of the bill in committee on Saturday at 12 o'clock.

The House divided upon Lord J. Russell's motion, which was carried by 132 to 51.

The other orders of the day were now entered upon, and, having been disposed of, the House adjourned at 10 minutes past 2 o'clock.

SATURDAY.—COMMONS.—Borough Rates Bill read a third time, and passed.

On the motion for the third reading, the Sale of Beer, &c., Bill, Mr. Henry Berkeley objected to the bill as interfering with the enjoyments of the poorer classes on Sundays, as it would deprive them of obtaining refreshment after one o'clock. That which was sin in the poor man was virtue in others, or, why were the London clubs and large hotels at Richmond, Blackwall, and Greenwich, not closed with the rural taverns on Sundays. This one-sided legislation was a disgrace to Parliament; it was mainly directed against the excursion trains, the travellers by which were not treated as travellers, according to the statute, and thus by this bill they would be unable to obtain refreshment in the country.

Mr. Wilson Patten said the bill dealt equally with the rich and the poor, and the time for opening public houses on Sundays had been extended expressly to meet the case of excursion trains.

After some observations from Mr. L. Heyworth and Lord D. Stuart, Mr. W. J. Fox, complained that if this bill passed, the present ruling of the Police Courts would shut out passengers by excursion trains from obtaining refreshments in the middle of the day on Sundays.

Mr. Henley said it was quite ridiculous and absurd to say that a passenger by an excursion train was not a traveller. If he was not, he could not tell what the term traveller meant.

The bill was then read a third time and passed.

The Reformatory Schools (Scotland) Bill, Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Bill, Stock in Trade Exemption Bill, Inclosure of Lands Bill, Common, &c., Rights (Ordinance) Bill, and the Friendly Societies Continuance Bill, were all read a third time and passed.

On the motion for the third reading of the Medical Graduates (Ireland and Scotland) Bill,

Mr. E. Lockart moved that the bill be read a third time this day three months.

Mr. Crauford seconded the amendment.

After a brief conversation,

Lord J. Russell approved of the bill, but at the same time he thought it would be better to postpone its discussion until Wednesday next, when his noble friend at the head of the Home Department would be in his place. He therefore moved the adjournment of the debate accordingly.

The House divided, when there appeared—

For the adjournment ... 82

Against it ... 43

Majority ... —39

The debate was then adjourned until Wednesday next.

The Spirits (Ireland) Bill, and Burials beyond the Metropolis Bill, were read a third time and passed.

Bribery Bill. The committee on this bill was then resumed.

The original bill having been not through.

Lord J. Russell moved the insertion of the following clause, viz.:

"And whereas doubts have arisen as to whether the payment of the expenses of conveying voters to and from the poll, as also the giving of refreshment to voters on the day of nomination or day of polling, be or be not according to law, and it is expedient that such doubts should be removed, and that the law should be settled in these particulars, be it declared and enacted, that from and after the passing of this act, it shall be lawful for any candidate or other person, subject to the provisions of this act as to the payment of election expenses, to pay or cause to be paid the actual and reasonable expenses of bringing any voters to the poll."

Mr. Crauford moved as an amendment, to insert in the clause, after the word "shall," the word "not," so as to make travelling expenses illegal. If the committee assented to this amendment he should then move the omission of the words "actual" and "reasonable."

After some discussion, in the course of which it was contended that this clause would make the payment of these expenses compulsory where it was now optional.

Mr. Fitzgerald agreed that the preamble was untrue, because there could be no doubt that, under the existing law, a candidate could legally pay the reasonable expenses of bringing voters to the poll if he so thought fit.

Mr. Cayley said he believed it would ultimately be discovered that the real solution of this question was to have the votes collected at the residences of the electors.

After some discussion, it was agreed to strike out of the clause the words "as also the giving of refreshments to voters on the day of nomination and on the day of polling."

The committee then divided on Mr. Crauford's amendment, when there appeared—

For the amendment	49
Against it	110
Majority	—61

The amendment was consequently rejected.

The clause was then agreed to.

Mr. Hindham then moved the following proviso to the clause:—"Provided always that it shall only be lawful at elections for boroughs for the candidate to pay the expenses of bringing up to the poll from their residences within the borough, or, with respect to freemen, from their residences within seven miles from the borough, of aged or infirm voters, and reasonable payments for the purpose shall be legal."

After some discussion the committee divided, when there appeared—

For the proviso	51
Against it	95
Majority	—44

On the question that the clause be added to the bill, the committee again divided, when there appeared—

For the clause	88
Against it	47
Majority	—41

The clause was accordingly added to the bill.

Lord J. Russell then moved the insertion of a clause to the effect, that the giving, or causing to be given, to any voter on the day of nomination, or day of polling, on account of such voter having polled, or being about to poll, any meat, drink, or entertainment, by way of refreshment, or any money or ticket to enable such voter to obtain refreshment, shall be held and be taken to amount to bribery or treating, as the case may be, within the meaning of this act.

This clause was deferred for the report.

Some other amendments were made in the bill, and it was finally passed through committee.

The Admiralty Coasts, the Highways (Public Health Act), and the Chancery Amendment Bills were considered as amended, and ordered to be read a third time.

The Land Revenues of the Crown (Ireland) Bill, the Land Assessment and Income Taxes Bill, and the Duchy of Cornwall Office Bill were passed through committee.

The house then adjourned till Monday.

FRANCE.

(From our own Correspondent.)

PARIS, THURSDAY, JULY 27.

The revolution in Spain is the topic of the day in Paris, for all the world is weary of the eternal talk on the war in the East. People here quite agree with Omar Pasha in wondering why such fine-looking and well-equipped troops as the English and French should remain inactive in their camps, while the ill-appointed, shoeless, and half starved Turkish army is left to combat and obtain victories over an enemy their superior in numbers, discipline, and, in fact, everything but courage and endurance. The last words of the Emperor to his Ministers in quitting Paris are said to have been:—"Adieu, gentlemen. Send me news of our troops, and soon, or you will see that the first real aid to the Sultan will be by the sword of Austria, which would disgrace us in the eyes of all Europe."

The insurrection in Spain has been expected in Madrid since February last, when the Times despatched a special correspondent to the Spanish capital to watch events. The day of the rising was publicly spoken of, and the intended proceedings so well known, that nobody was taken by surprise but those whom it concerned most nearly—the Queen and her friends! As to the overthrow of the late system of Government, no one can affect to regret it. For the Queen herself, every well-wisher to Royalty must earnestly hope that the private accounts of her life and conduct are either wholly false or cruelly exaggerated. If the midnight scenes of libertinism and profligacy described as taking place at the Palace, of which she is the heroine, at all approach the truth, the most surprising feature in the present movement is, that all parties, save of course the Republicans, continue to speak of her person and authority with respect. Not a word is said of the Duke and Duchess of Montpensier in any quarter, but the apprehension that some chance on the revolutionary die might miss the Duchess, and consequently the son of Louis Philippe to power, has not the less been a subject of solicitude in high places here. The hatred borne in Spain to the very name of a Frenchman will, however, always prove an effectual bar to any danger to peace from that quarter. Midmaison, once the property of Napoleon, now belongs to Queen Christina, and has been prepared for her reception for some time. Her non-arrival gives, of course, at a moment like the present, rise to the most sinister rumours of the cause of her delay.

Some surprise is expressed that the Emperor and his consort should proceed to such a distance from Paris as Biarritz for sea-bathing. But it seems that their majesties' trip to Dieppe last year attracted such a crowd of Parisians and provincials, who love to bask in the eye of royalty, that Biarritz, which is very remote—being 750 miles from the capital, near the Spanish frontier—was fixed upon as a quiet way of avoiding intruders. In consequence of the imperial visit, however, hosts of senators, several of the ministers, and sundry councillors of state have also migrated thither, having first received the assurance that their presence would not be disagreeable to Sa Majesté. A telegraph has been hastily put up between Biarritz and Bordeaux, and communication already exists between that city and Paris. The Emperor is able, therefore, to confer with his ministers and the foreign ambassadors, with the same facility as from St. Cloud or the Tuileries. A railway carriage on the American plan was built specially for the journey; a huge vehicle, divided into large rooms for the imperial party and their household, provided with writing materials, books, a piano, a billiard-table for the aides-de-camp,—in a word, all the "appliances and means to boot" which wealth and modern luxury could devise to wile away the ennui of the journey.

For the first time this season Paris may be said to have donned the robes of summer. But after cheating us out of three month's fine weather, Sol has suddenly come out with such prodigious force as to make one almost envy the temperature of Africa. This change, most favourable for the harvest, which had already begun to give some serious apprehensions, but which now promises to be one of the most abundant we have had for years, unfortunately came too late to save the vines, the crop of which is irredeemably gone for this year; the fruit has also been a failure from the same cause. The weather has, however, occasioned a general flight from Paris; private carriages, railway-trains, and even our respectable old friends the antediluvian diligences, bearing hundreds upon hundreds away from us, day after day, to all parts of the world.

The republicans domiciled in various parts of England and in Jersey have, it is said, been organising a small conspiracy against the government. One of their most active emissaries, named S—, having lately returned from London, was watched by the police, and after a time arrested under circumstances of grave suspicion. On searching his domicile nothing was discovered, but his mistress, becoming alarmed, delivered up an extensive correspondence, which is said to compromise a great many well-known personages of the party. The republican faction is now, however, so completely sunk in the opinion of the public at large, that no apprehensions exist on their account; and the only notice taken by the authorities of this plot, was to send the letters to the addresses, under the official envelope of the police,—a step which is said to have enraged the party far more than sending them to the Fort St. Michel, or even to Cayenne. Mr. S—, however, still remains in custody.

Our embellishments in the Bois de Boulogne, which, by the construction of a splendid cascade and two extensive lakes, had been turned, by the taste and beauty of the design, into almost a little Eden, have met with a terrible mishap. The bottom of the larger lake is found to absorb the water to such a degree, that to keep it filled is, after some weeks' trial, found totally impracticable. It is now, therefore, to receive a thick coating of gravel and asphalt, which will render the bottom impervious to the water; but from the vast space to be covered, the execution of this remedy will occupy at least some months, by which time the season for promenading will be at an end for this year. This was, however, only a mishap; but what shall we say of the wilful atrocities just perpetrated at the Place de la Concorde, which, with its delightful fountains, its subterranean gardens, surrounded by balustrades, colossal statues, and stately columns, together with its vast extent of pavement, level and smooth as marble, had really an aspect of Assyrian magnitude and splendour, which gave a kind of special interest to the celebrated relic of Egyptian grandeur—the Luxor Obelisk—which stands in the centre. All this is now cut up into paltry little divisions, some wretched pretender to taste having been allowed to curtail its fair proportions, and, to complete the barbarism, to fill up the subterranean gardens, which formerly, without disturbing the architectural features of this noble spot by any incongruous mixture of trees and flowers, shed a delicious freshness and odour over the place. In a word, the most magnificent monumental site in Paris is sacrificed and cut up, until all design is absolutely lost. At present, it reminds one of nothing so much as the reproach of Petraccio to his lackless artificer:—

"Cut up and down, carve'd like an apple tart,
Here a nip, and snip, and cut, and slash, and slash,
Why, what the Devil's name, struth, call'st thou this?"

The only hope is that the Emperor will do on this occasion, as he did at the alteration of the Louvre,—cashier his architect and restore the Place to its former condition.

A singular instance of filial piety is just now making some noise here, which has accidentally come to light. A few days since a large case arrived at the terminus of the Orleans Railway, bearing the address of a carpet manufacturer, which, there being no one deputed to receive it, was visited as usual by the officers of the douane. What was the horror of the employés on discovering a human body carefully packed up among rolls of carpeting. The police were of course set in motion to ascertain the cause of this extraordinary and suspicious mode of transmission, which rumour speedily metamorphosed into a dreadful murder and M—, the consignee, was sent for. He acknowledged without hesitation that the remains were those of his father, which he had caused to be sent in this manner, to be interred with other members of his family, in a vault he had purchased in Père la Chaise. After a severe reprimand for so unseemly a proceeding, he was unletted in the fine imposed by law for defending the railway company of the fare charged for the conveyance of dead bodies. It is understood that M—, who is now one of the wealthiest tradesmen in the capital, and who, au reste, bears an excellent character, entered Paris a friendless Savoyard boy, and gained his first earnings as an itinerant organ-player. "This wags the world, my masters."

AGRICULTURE.

HOW TO STOP THE POTATO DISEASE.—Many persons will be glad to learn that there is a first-rate remedy against the potato disease—it is simply this: Get them up in time; all early potatoes set in March or the beginning of April should all be got up in July; all late sorts of every description should be got up by the middle of August. The disease always seizes the tops first, and usually shows itself about the middle of August. The proper time to get them is while the tops are quite flourishing, and before the potatoes have arrived at their full growth. If this is done, and they are laid in rows about a hamper thick on the open ground, and pretty well covered with straw or any dry material (not potato tops), they will generally be found to keep well. This plan has never failed with me for seven consecutive years. The potatoes should not be covered with soil for about two months. Unless potatoes are set early in the spring there is no chance for them. Please publish this for the public good. I am, &c., GEORGE SLATER, Hulme Mills, near Knutsford, Cheshire.

POTATOES.—More sales of these excellent have taken place in this neighbourhood since our last, some of which have realised so high as 3s. per fall of 3R yards, or £34 per acre!—the buyers running all risks. There is an old saying about "fools and their money," and we have heard it remarked that the crop of these, not altogether rare animals, is about as numerous as that of the potatoes themselves.—Montrose Standard.

THE CROPS IN THE WEST.—Nearly every description of agricultural produce in Devonshire and the other western counties is looking remarkably well. The corn-fields promise an abundant harvest, although in some districts there has been an appearance of rust. Potatoes seem generally to have escaped the disease, and few complaints are heard. The consequence is that there has been a considerable reduction in their price. Barley is likely to prove a good crop. The farmers are now busy with the hay harvest, which is much better than was anticipated. During the last few months there has been an extraordinarily large demand for hay in the neighbourhood of Exeter, which has been forwarded for the use of the cavalry in the East. The markets throughout the county have recently been falling.

IMPORTATION OF GRAIN, &c.—Import of foreign grain, cheese, &c., into Liverpool, for the fortnight ending the 21st July, 1854:—237,002 bushels, 12,100 bags wheat, 19,537 sacks, 15,165 barrels flour; 212,205 bushels, 52,550 sacks, 6,915 kilsa Indian corn; 13,592 bushels barley; 1,700 bushels oats; 312 barrels oatmeal; 15,200 bushels beans; 1,100 bushels peas; 2,311 boxes cheese.—Liverpool Mail.

THUNDERSTORM.—A severe thunderstorm took place in Herefordshire on Monday night. It lasted at intervals during the night, and the rain fell very heavily. At Hereford many of the cellars were inundated, and the grain crops in the neighbourhood were damaged. The spire of Wiltshire Church, five miles south-east of Hereford, was struck by the lightning and much injury was done to it.

SCOTLAND.—The crops all along Clyde-side, says the North British Mail, look healthy and vigorous. On the line of railway between Glasgow and Greenock there are some fields of wheat, barley, and oats, and beans in the condition for the period at the season, although there are instances in which oats look tatty and unequal. The late admirable weather has been everything that could be desired for cutting and stacking the hay crop, which, in the district referred to, is well nigh completed. A good many early potatoes have been already lifted in Dumfriesshire. The Aberdeen Herald says, notwithstanding the constitutional or interestingly gloomy prognostics of some folks, we must again repeat, that for many years we have not had so fine an appearance of so abundant an harvest, and with our keeping pace with our prospects, we have no reason at this early stage of the season to doubt of its being healthy and timely secured.

IRELAND.—In Ireland the appearance of the crops justifies the hopes of an abundant harvest. There are the usual reports of the blight in the potatoes; but they excite no apprehension whatever.

GRAIN FOR TURKEY.—Tenders were sent into the Admiralty on Tuesday for the conveyance to Varna from the river Danube of 500 tons of oats in sacks.

ITALY.—The accounts of the harvest in the Venetian provinces, says the Opinione of Turin, are highly satisfactory. All the corn has been cut in, and prices have fallen. As for the grape blight, it threatens to do a great deal of injury.

POMERANIA.—STETTIN, July 9.—For some time now we have had very warm weather, very propitious in vegetation. The fields look magnificently. In ten or twelve days the harvest will commence. The best results are expected, both in point of quantity and quality.

THE GOODWOOD CUP.

The third "cup" for Goodwood is from the manufactory of Mr. Garrard, of the Haymarket, and represents an Arab horseman receiving a pitcher of water in the desert from a woman stationed by the side of a well. The artist has introduced a child, a she-goat, and a kid, with good accessory effect; two palm trees wave over the heads of all these and render the general composition very pleasing. Mr. Cotterill, by whom the whole has been designed, during his recent visit to the East, had many opportunities of seeing oriental scenery and costume, and he has availed himself of his experience to produce figures full of truth and accurately characteristic. The female, the horse, and the Arab who is on his back, are as close to reality as art can depict, and render the "cup," independently of its intrinsic worth as a piece of precious metal, extremely valuable.

HARES IN THE EAST.—An officer with the army in Turkey says:—"It is a curious fact, that during the whole siege of Silistria hares were to be found in the adjoining vineyards. Our chasseurs killed one not 300 yards from the bastion, where the briskest firing was kept up. The storks also never left their nests, built on houses, which were riddled with shot and splinters."

ALL the divisions remain in precisely the same condition. Most of them are occupied in inventing such expedients for amusing themselves and killing time as the resources of the country afford. At Devna, where the light division are staying, with the cavalry and artillery, spirited horse-races take place every week, and the fame of their "summer meetings," as they are called, is pretty well spread throughout the forces. "Divisional Soirées" have also been got up of a most amusing and jovial kind, and with them, at least, the time passes pleasantly enough. The 2nd division, under Sir Do Lacy Evans, which lies midway between this and Devna, have got up some capital races, which take place weekly. Last week, the officers subscribed 30*l.* towards the prizes, which, as a matter of course, were closely contended for. The other day they had a grand battue, and about a thousand of the men turned out to beat the country for game, but their camp fires and hands had been in the neighbourhood too long, for no particular success attended the expedition. The proceeds of the whole day's sport were only two hares.

THE MOONS, &c.—Disease is still continuing among the grouse in this neighbourhood, having spread to the young birds, and it is feared that the sport this year will be inferior. Hares are, however, very plenty in this quarter. In Perthshire the young broods of grouse are suffering so much from a disease, which is supposed to be tapeworm, that in some districts there will be a total failure of young birds.—Greenock Advertiser.

PARTRIDGES.—We are informed that the grouse on the Pickering moors are very scarce, many broods having been destroyed by thunder storms. Partridges, however, are numerous and strong on the wing.

TURF TALK.

"The chosen sport of a great and a free people."
OUR SAILOR KID.

BRIGHTON, the usual attendant on Goodwood, stands about midway in the racing season; so that, though we began as far back as the first of February at Newton, we have an equal amount of sport to look forward to us that which we have passed. Many and many a sharp contest, with unlooked-for results, may therefore be expected before the thorough-breds finally retire to their winter quarters. Another important handicap, on Wednesday, till to the lot of an extreme outsider; making up the fourth within three weeks: Ammonia, at Liverpool; St. Andrew, at Nottingham; Bribery, at Goodwood; and Whiskelf, at Brighton. However much the book-makers may sigh over the decadence of speculation, issues like these must afford them no inconsiderable quantity of consolation. The system of handicapping has furnished the true arcana of money-making to those who bet rationally, and understand their business. In proof of this assertion let us turn to some of the chief events of the year. Jacquellum started at 25 to 1 for the Northamptonshire Stakes; Coup d'Éclat was mentioned for the Newmarket Handicap; 25 to 1 was the least offer against Epaminondus for the great betting race of the season—the Chester Cup; Snowden Dunhill was without a price for the Union Cup at Manchester; Little Harry won the Ascot Stakes at 10 to 1; Brocket the Royal Hunt Cup at 15 to 1; and Grapeshot carried off the Northumberland Plate at 12 to 1 against him. The principal exception was in the case of Virago, the favourite for the Metropolitan, and who shortly afterwards became the winner of the Great Northern Handicap at 6 to 4 on her.

The victor of the Brighton Stakes did a clever thing as a ten-year-old, with 7st 3lb on his back by clearing Epaminondus at the same weight, by a length for the Baron's Stakes

TATTERSALLS.—MONDAY.

Throughout the afternoon, room, terrace, and yard, were thronged with spectators; but, although a very large amount of money changed hands on the Goodwood account, the selling was manifestly slow. Many balances stand over; but a belief exists that the greater portion of them will be liquidated at the approaching gathering at Brighton. Business on coming events was very limited, as the adjoining scarcity of quotations will testify.
